5. Forms.

Conviction against a corn-dealer for not making the return directed by 5 Vict c. 14, s. 25, (ante, 10).

Coroner(b).

CORONERS are ancient officers by the common law, so called because they deal principally with the pleas of the Crown, and were of old time the principal conservators of the peace. (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 1; see Jervis's Cor. 1, 2, 3).

(b) An act of Parliament is in contemplation to amend the laws respecting the duties of coroners, and to enable them to appoint deputies, and prevent injunctions being quashed for merely technical defects. Another act is also in contemplation for the holding inquests in places where the body is found, and to levy deodands on verdicts. Another act is also in contemplation to repeal the 58 Geo. III, c. 95, and amend the law respecting the office of county coroner. These acts, if passed, as probably they will be, will be found in the Addenda, tit. "Coroner."

I. Different kinds of Coroners.

Different kinds of.

There are three kinds of coroners—viz.

1st, Those virtute officii, as the lord chief and puisne judges of the Court of Queen's Bench; (4 Rep. 57 b; 4 Inst. 73);—

2nd, Those virtute cartæ sive commissionis, as those within particular liberties and franchises, over which the lords or heads of corporations are empowered by charter to act themselves, or to create their own coroners; (Mad. Exch. 287; Jerv. 3; as to which see now the Municipal Corporation Act, post, tit. "Corporations"); or coroners of the verge of the Queen's court, or coroners of the Admiralty; (Jerv. 4, 5);—and 3rd, Those virtute electionis, which will be treated of under this title.

II. Who may be a Coroner. Number allowed.

Dignity.

Of ancient time this office was of great estimation, for none could have it under the degree of a knight. (3 Edw. I. c. 10; 4 Inst. 271; Jerv. Cor. 2, n. a).

Estate.

And by stat. 14 Edw. III. st. 1, c. 8, no coroner shall be chosen unless he have land in fee sufficient in the same county whereof he may answer to all manner of people.

It is observable that no precise amount of estate is expressly required by this statute; but the coroner ought to have sufficient property to maintain the dignity of his office, and to answer any fine that may be set upon him for his misbehaviour. But if, having an estate in fee within the county, it be insufficient to answer his fines, that will not operate as a disqualification, or be a ground for his removal, if he be of sufficient estate to execute his office, for the county upon his default will be liable to the fine, as a punishment for having elected an insufficient officer. (2 H. P. C. 50; 2 Inst. 175; Jerv. 9).

Number of.

There is no law limiting the number of coroners; and it seems that, if the justices at sessions sanction the application for the appointment of an additional coroner, the Lord Chancellor would order a writ to be issued for his election. (Re Coroner of Salop, 3 Swanst. 181, 183).

III. Election of.

To be chosen in the county court.

The coroner (as of ancient time the sheriffs and conservators of the peace) shall be chosen in full county, that is, in the county court, by the commons of the same county. (28 Edw. III. c. 6).

And this must be in pursuance of the Queen's writ for that purpose.

issuing out of and returnable into the Chancery: and none but freeholders have a voice at such election, for they only are suitors to the county court. (2 Hawk. c. 9, ss. 5, 10. The value of the freehold is not material).

3. Election of.

The stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 95, after reciting, that "Whereas there are no sufficient regulations for the election of coroners for counties," enacts, "That from and after the passing of this act, upon every election to be made of any coroner or coroners of any county in England and Wales, the sheriff of the county where such election shall be made shall hold his county court for the same election at the most usual place or places of election of coroners within the said county, and where the same have most usually been held for forty years last past, and shall there proceed to election at the next county court, unless the same fall out to be held within six days after the receipt of the writ de coronatore eligendo, or upon the same day; and then shall adjourn the same court to some convenient day, not exceeding fourteen days, giving ten days' notice of the time and place of election; and in case the said election be not determined upon the view, with the consent of the freeholders there present, but that a poll shall be demanded for determination thereof, then the said sheriff, or in his absence his under sheriff, with such others as shall be deputed by him, shall forthwith there proceed to take the said poll in some public place, by the same sheriff, or his under-sheriff as aforesaid in his absence, or others appointed for the taking thereof as aforesaid; and every such poll shall commence on the day upon which the same shall be demanded, and be duly and regularly proceeded in from day to day (Sunday excepted) until the same be finished; but so as that no poll for such election shall continue more than ten days at most (Sunday excepted), and the said poll shall be kept open seven hours at the least each day, between the hours of nine in the morning and five at night: and for the more due and orderly proceeding in the said poll, the said sheriff, or in his absence his under-sheriff, or such as he shall depute, shall appoint such number of clerks as to him shall seem meet or convenient for the taking thereof; which clerks shall all take the said poll in the presence of the said sheriff, or his under-sheriff, or such as he shall depute; and before they begin to take the said poll every clerk so appointed shall by the said sheriff, or his under-sheriff, or such as he shall depute as aforesaid, be sworn truly and indifferently to take the same poll, and to set down the names of each freeholder, and the place of his abode and freehold, and the name of the occupier thereof, and for whom he shall poll, and to poll no freeholder who is not sworn, if required to be sworn by the candidates or either of them, and which oaths of the said clerks, the said sheriff, or his under-sheriff, or such as he shall depute, are hereby empowered to administer; and the sheriff, or in his absence his under-sheriff as aforesaid, shall appoint for each candidate such one person as shall be nominated to him by each candidate, to be inspector of every clerk who shall be appointed for taking the poll; and every freeholder, before he is admitted to poll at the same election, shall, if required by the candidates, or any of them, first take the oath hereinafter mentioned, which oath the said sheriff by himself, or his under-sheriff, or such sworn clerk by him appointed for taking the said poll as aforesaid, is hereby authorized to administer; videlicet,

58 Geo. 3, c. 95.

Mode of proceeding.

Sheriff to hold his county court for election of coroner at usual place of election, and if election not determined on view, then to proceed to take a poll.

Commencement and duration of poll.

Poll clerks to be appointed and sworn.

Inspector of poll clerk to be appointed.

Freeholder, if required, to be sworn before he polls.

"YOU swear [or being one of the people called Quakers, you solemnly affirm] that you are a freeholder of the county of , and have a freehold estate, consisting of , lying at , within the said county; and that such freehold estate has not been granted to you fraudulently, on purpose to qualify you to give your vote at this election; and that the place of your abode is at , [and if it be a place consisting of more streets or places than one, specifying what street or place,] that you are twenty-one years of age, as you believe, and that you have not been before polled at this election"

The oath of qualification.

3. Election of.

58 Geo 3, c. 95.

Punishment for perjury, or subornation of perjury

"And in case any freeholder or other person taking the said oath or affirmation hereby appointed to be taken by him as aforesaid shall thereby commit wilful and corrupt perjury, and be thereof convicted, and if any person shall unlawfully or corruptly procure or suborn any freeholder or other person to take the said oath or affirmation in order to be polled, whereby he shall commit such wilful and corrupt perjury, and shall be thereof convicted, he and they for every such offence shall incur such pains and penalties as are declared in and by two acts of Parliament, the one made in the fifth year of the late Queen Elizabeth, intituled, 'An Act for Punishment of such as shall procure or commit any wilful Perjury;' and the other made in the second year of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled 'An Act for the more effectual preventing and further Punishment of Forgery, Perjury, and Subornation of Perjury, and to make it Felony to steal Bonds, Notes, or other Securities for Payment of Money;' and by any other law or statute now in force for the punishment of perjury or subornation of perjury."

2 Geo. 2, c. 25

Mortgagor and cestui que trust to vote.

Sect. 2. "That no person or persons shall be allowed to have any vote at such elections for coroner or coroners of any county in England and Wales as aforesaid, for or by reason of any trust estate or mortgage, unless such trustee or mortgagee be in actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of such estate; but that the mortgagor or cestui que trust in possession shall and may vote for the same estate, notwithstanding such mortgage or trust; and that all conveyances of any messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, in order to multiply voices, or to split or divide the interest in any houses or lands among several persons, to enable them to vote at elections for a coroner of any county as aforesaid, are hereby declared to be void and of none effect."

Expense and poll clerks to be paid by the candidates.

Sect. 3. "That all the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses, the said sheriff, or his under-sheriff, or other deputy, shall expend or be liable to, in, and about the providing of poll books, booths, and clerks, (such clerks to be paid not exceeding 1*l.* 1*s.* each per diem), for the purpose of taking the poll at any such election, shall be borne, sustained, and paid by the several candidates at such election, in equal proportions."

Provisions of 58 Geo 3, to be closely pursued.

Mr. Jervis, in page 12 of his work, observes, "that the sole and principal object of this act is to regulate the time and mode of electing coroners, and its provisions must be followed strictly." In the case of the Coroner of Stafford, in Ch. M. T. 1826, MS. there cited, (2 Russ. Chan. Rep. 475, S. C.), the writ de coronatore eligendo was received by the under-sheriff on the 1st of April, 1826. On the 5th of the same month the under-sheriff informed the candidates for the office that the sheriff had appointed the 27th of April then instant for the election; the next county court after the receipt of the writ being holden on the 13th of April, the sheriff did not proceed to the election, but gave notice that he would proceed to the election on the 27th. On that day the election was commenced, and proceeded in from day to day until it terminated. This was holden to be irregular by the lord chancellor, and the chief justices of the King's Bench and Common Pleas, the sheriff being bound by the statute to proceed to the election at the next county court after the receipt of the writ, unless it happened to be holden within six days, or upon the day of the receipt of the writ. When the writ is received within six days of the next county court, or upon the same day, the notice of adjournment is proclaimed at the rising of the court, and is usually affixed on the church doors.

Electors, who may be.

We have already seen (ante, 24) that the electors must be freeholders; but as to the amount of their estate it seems, however small its value may be, it will suffice to confer the right of voting, provided it be not obtained fraudulently and colourably for the purpose of qualifying the elector. To confer a right to vote, the elector must have a freehold interest in lands within the county. Thus, tenants in fee-imple, in fee-tail, or for life, may vote at the election of coroners; but any thing short of a freehold interest, as a lease for years, will not confer that privilege. (Jervis, 15. See further sect. 2 of 58 Geo. III. c. 95, ante, 26). 4. Duration of Office, &c.

Corporators sole have a freehold in lands which they enjoy in that character, but members of corporations aggregate are not entitled to vote in respect of lands belonging to the corporation. Purchasers of redeemed land tax, (after August, 1802), after registry of the contract and certificate, are to be taken to be in the actual seisin and possession of a yearly rent or sum as a fee-farm rent, equal in amount to the land tax purchased, free from all charges and deductions, to be issuing and payable out of the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, whereon the land tax so purchased was charged, on the same days as such land tax was payable at the time of the purchase thereof. (42 Geo. III. c. 116, s. 154).

All natural persons born within the dominions of the crown of England are capable of holding freehold estates, unless they be under some civil disability, and therefore incapable of possessing any real property.

Aliens are incapable of holding freehold estates for their own benefit; but if they be naturalized by act of parliament, or made denizens by the King's letters-patent, they may.

Women, infants, lunatics, and idiots, cannot vote at the election of coroners. (Jervis, 16, 17).

Swearing in.

After the election the sheriff should in open court administer to the coroner elected the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and also the oath of office. (See "Oaths," Vol. V.). This being done, the coroner is in full possession of his office, and the business of the election is terminated. (Jervis 19; 2 Hale, 55). The coroner should also within six months after his election make and subscribe the declaration required by statute 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, ss. 2, 5., which may be done either in the Courts of Chancery or King's Bench, or at the quarter sessions of the county. (9 Geo. IV. c. 17, s. 6. Jervis, 19).

Return of sheriff.

The sheriff must make his return into Chancery into the Petty Bag Office, of the election; if he refuses so to do, an action on the case lies against him. (See Turner v. Stirling, 2 Vent. 27).

County to answer for him.

Being elected by the county, if he be insufficient, and not able to answer such fines and other duties in respect of his office, as he ought, the county, as his superior, shall answer for him. (2 Inst. 175, ante, 24).

In boroughs

As to the election, &c., of coroners in boroughs, see post, "Corporations."

IV. Duration of Office, and Removal from.

Duration of office.

Being chosen by the county, his office continues, notwithstanding the demise of the King. (4 Inst. 271).

Removal, causes for, and how effected.

The coroner is chosen for life, but he may be removed either by being made sheriff or chosen verderer, which are offices incompatible with the other, or by the King's writ de coronatore exonerando, for a cause to be therein asigned: as that he is engaged in other business, is incapacitated by years or sickness, hath not a sufficient estate in the county, or lives in an inconvenient part of it. (Fitz. N. B. 163, 164; 1 Bla. Com. 348).

By 25 Geo. II. c. 22, extortion, neglect, or misbehaviour, are good causes for his removal, post, 46.

And independently of this statute, the great seal has power to remove coroners from their office for neglect of duty. (Exp. Parnell, 1 J & W. 451).

A coroner was removed where he used corrupt influence over the jury. (R. v. Coates, cited Dick, J., 515).

Lying in prison for twelve months has been adjudged a good ground for removing a coroner, even though the duties of his office were during that time discharged by another coroner of the county. (Exp. Parnell, 1 J. & W. 451).

6. Power to appoint a deputy.

A common merchant who had been elected a coroner was removed upon the ground that he was communis mercator. (2 Inst. 32).

The practice is where a coroner is and ought to be removed, to issue both the writ de coronatore exonerando and that de coronatore eligendo at the same time, though the former must be first executed, and no notice of the issuing need be given to the party accused. (Exp. Parnell, 1 J. & W. 454).

The party removed may have a commission to inquire whether the cause assigned for removal be true, but he cannot traverse it. (Id.).

V. Places where Coroner has Jurisdiction over.

Places wherein coroner has jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of coroners is limited to the county, liberty, or precinct, to and for which they are elected or appointed, and cannot be enlarged by any private act or delegation from the crown. (Finch, 388). For this reason no coroner, even though he had a special commission from the King for that purpose, could take confession of high or petit treason, with respect to which he had originally no jurisdiction. (2 Inst. 629; Jervis, 42).

In many cases, as with the coroner of the admiralty, or verge of the King's palace, a coroner has concurrent jurisdiction.

Where stroke and death in different counties.

The doubt which formerly existed as to whether an offender could be proceeded against in either county, when the stroke and death were in different counties, was removed by the statute 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 24, s. 2; and now,

7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s 12.

By 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, (which repeals that act), sect. 12, "where any felony or misdemeanor shall be committed on the boundary or boundaries of two or more counties, or within the distance of five hundred yards of any such boundary or boundaries, or shall be begun in one county and completed in another, every such felony or misdemeanor may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined and punished in any of the said counties in the same manner as if it had been actually and wholly committed therein."

But where it appeared on the face of an inquisition that the stroke occurred in the county of B., and the death within the limits of the borough of R., which had a separate coroner under the Corporation Act, it seems to have been decided that the borough coroner and a jury of the borough had no jurisdiction to hold an inquest on the body. (Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, Q. B. T. T. 1842).

If a party has been killed in one county, the coroner, super visum corporis, may now, by virtue of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 9, inquire, as he formerly might at common law, of all accessaries and procurers before the fact, though the procurements were in another county. (See Jervis, 52; 1 Hale, P. C. 427). The 7 Geo IV. c. 64, repeals the 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 24. (See the 9th section, ante, Vol. I., tit. "Accessary").

VI. Power to appoint a Deputy.

Power to appoint a deputy.

The judicial duties of the coroner, as holding inquests or the like, must be discharged by the coroner himself, and cannot be deputed. (Cromp. Just. f. 227 a; 2 H. P. C. 58; 1 E. P. C. 383; R. v. Farrant, 3 B. & Ald. 260; 1 Chit. Rep. 746, S. C.; Jervis, 54, 55). So, where an inquest was held on a person deceased, in the coroner's absence, by C. A., his clerk, who signed the inquisition, "C. A.," coroner, and other irregularities took place in the proceedings, but did not appear on the face of the inquisition: on application by the father of the deceased, eight months after the inquest, to have the inquisition brought up by certiorari to be quashed, that a new inquest might be held, on affidavit of the above facts, and on a suggestion that the cause of death had not been properly investigated:—The court refused to quash such an inquisition, considering it a nullity. (In re Dawes, 8 Ad. & E. 936; 1 Per. & D. 146, S. C.)

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

It has been contended that coroners of particular liberties and franchises may by prescription appoint a deputy. But it would seem that the general principles applicable to coroners by election would equally apply to coroners by appointment, and render such a custom bad. (Jervis, 56). In R. v. Coroner, &c. of London, (Jervis, Adda. 408; Re Carruthers, 2 M. & M. 397, S. C.), this point was raised, but not settled.

The coroner of the Admiralty, by virtue of his patent, may appoint a deputy.

VII. Power and Duty in taking an Inquisition of Death.

Duty in taking inquisition of death.

In general it is the most important duty of a coroner to take inquests of unnatural or sudden deaths, and this whether they arise by accident, felo de se, or in prison.

Notice.

When it happens that any person comes to an unnatural death, the township shall give notice thereof to the coroner. Otherwise, if the body be interred before he come, the township shall be amerced. (4 MS. Sum. 33).

Burying without notice.

And by Holt, C. J., it is a matter indictable to bury a man that dies a violent death, before the coroner's inquest has sat upon him. (4 MS. Sum. 33; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23).

Lying unburied

If the township shall suffer the body to lie till putrefaction, without sending for him, they shall be amerced. (Id.)

Precept to summon a jury.

The Jury.]—Power of summoning jury is given to the coroner; he is to issue a precept to the constable of the four, five, or six next townships to return a competent number of good and lawful men of their townships, to appear before him in such a place to make an inquisition touching that matter. (4 Edw. I. st. 2; 2 Hale, 59). Or he may send his precept to the constable of the hundred. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1).

It seems sufficient, and it is the practice, to summon the jury only from the neighbourhood. (R. v. Crosse, 1 Sid. 204; 1 Keb. 723, S. C.; 2 Hawk. c. 9. s. 22).

The jury.

The 8 Hen. VI. c. 19, enacts, that the inquiry shall be made by persons having lands of the yearly value of 40*s.*, but it is not usual to return a jury having such qualifications.

Inquests held by the coroner in virtue of his office without writ, are expressly excepted from the operation of the late jury act, 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 32.

The jury must consist of twelve at the least, and twelve must agree in the verdict. (See Cobat's case, 1 H. P. C. 161, n.; Lambert v. Taylor, 6 D. & R. 196; 4 B. & Cres. 138, S. C.)

A coroner's inquisition ought to show upon the face of it of what place the party who took it was coroner; and that it was taken by the oath of "honest and lawful men." (Anon., 2 Ld. Raym. 1305). As to who are such men, see "Jurors," Vol. III.

If the constables make not a return, or the jurors returned appear not, their defaults are to be returned to the coroner; and the constables or jurors in default shall be amerced before the judge of assize. (2 Hale, 59.)

Coroners have no power to impose any fine or amercement. (2 Inst. 136; 2 H. P. C. 62; Jervis, 225).

If the coroner, after notice, be remiss in summoning the jury, or otherwise, he may be amerced by virtue of the statute de officio coronatoris; (1 Hale, P. C. 424, 2nd ed. 58); and by the provisions of the 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, he may be fined 100*s.* for each default.

By whom taken, where several coroners.

By whom Inquest taken.]—An inquisition super visum corporis may be taken by one, although there be several coroners in the county; (2 H. P. C. 56); for wherever coroners are authorized to act as judges, the act of one who first proceeds in the inquiry, and perfects it, is of equal authority as if all had joined, but after the proceeding has been instituted, and concluded by one, the act of any other will be void. (2 H. P. C. 59; Standf. P. C. 53). The coroner, we have seen, cannot act by deputy, (ante, 28).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

As to the places wherein he has jurisdiction, (ante, 28).

When to be taken.

When to be taken.]—The inquest must be taken within a reasonable time after the death of the party; hence seven months has been held too late. (Rex v. Bond, 1 Stra. 22; Rex v. Clerk, Salk. 377; Holt, 167, S. C.)

The proceeding by inquisition being judicial, must not be conducted on a Sunday. (See 9 Co. 666).

Place of holding.

Place of holding.]—It is not absolutely requisite that the inquest should be held at the same place where the body is viewed. (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 25).

Swearing and charge

Swearing of Jury and viewing Body.]—The jury appearing is to be sworn and charged by the coroner to inquire, upon the view of the body, how the party came by his death. (2 Hale, 60).

View of the body.

For he can take inquisition of death only upon view of the body, and not otherwise; therefore if the body be interred before he come, he must dig it up. And this he may do lawfully within any convenient time, as in fourteen days. (4 MS. Sum. 33; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 23).

And it has been lately held, that a coroner's duty is judicial, and that he can only take an inquest super visum corporis; and that an inquest in which the jury were not sworn by the coroner himself, and super visum corporis, is absolutely void. The court, therefore, will not, after an adjournment by the coroner of such an inquest, grant any mandamus to compel him to proceed in it. (Rex v. Farrant, 3 B. & Ald. 260; 1 Chit. Rep. 745, S. C.)

If the body cannot be viewed, the coroner can do nothing; but the justices of the peace shall inquire thereof. (Id. 4 MS. Sum. 334).

It seems the whole of the body should be inspected. (Rex v. Bond, 1 Stra. 22).

So essential is the view to the validity of the inquisition, that if the body be not found, or have lain so long before the view that no information can be obtained from the inspection of it, or if there be danger of infection by digging it up, the inquest ought not to be taken by the coroner, unless he have a special commission for that purpose; but as the proceeding before the coroner is one only of several, application should be made in such cases to the magistrates or justices authorized to inquire of felonies, &c., who without viewing the body shall take the inquest by the testimony of witnesses. (5 Rep. 110; 2 R. Abr. 96; 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 9, s. 23). Indeed it would seem that coroners may be amerced for taking up a body that has been buried so long, that, from its state of decomposition, no information can result from the view. (Rex v. Parker, 2 Lev. 140); and that in such a case the court into which the inquisition is returned may, upon affidavit of the circumstances, refuse to receive and file it. (Rex v. Bond, 1 Stra. 22; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 24; Jervis, 29).

Of what inquest shall be where a person is slain.

Of what the Inquest shall be.]—The jury being sworn, and the body upon view, he shall inquire upon the oaths of them, in this manner, by the statute of 4 Edw. I. stat. 2, called the statute de officio coronatoris, viz. :—

If they knew where the person was slain; whether it were in any house, field, bed, tavern, or company;

Who are culpable, either of the act, or of the force; and who were present, either men or women, and of what age soever they be, if they can speak, or have any discretion;

And how many soever be found culpable, they shall be taken and delivered to the sheriff, and shall be committed to the gaol;

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

And such as be found, and be not culpable, shall be attached until the coming of the judges of assizes.

And by the same statute, if it fortune any such man be slain, which is found in the fields, or in the woods, first it is to be inquired whether he were slain in the same place or not;

And if he were brought and laid there, they should do so much as they can to follow their steps that brought the body thither, whether he were brought upon a horse or in a cart.

It shall also be inquired if the dead person were known, or else a stranger, and where he lay the night before.

Wounds.

Also by the same statute, all wounds ought to be viewed the length, breadth, and deepness; and with what weapons; and in what part of the body the wound or hurt is; and how many be culpable; and how many wounds there be; and who gave the wound.

Defendant's evidence.

And they must hear evidence on all hands, if it be offered to them, and that upon oath, because it is not so much an accusation or an indictment as an inquisition or inquest of office. (2 Hale, 157; post, 32, 33).

To inquire of the murderer's lands and goods.

And by the aforesaid statute if any be found culpable of the murder, the coroner shall immediately go to his house and shall inquire what goods he hath, and what corn he hath in his grange; and if he be a freeman, they shall inquire how much land he hath, and what it is worth yearly over and above the service due to the lord of the fee; and the land shall remain in the king's hands until the lords of the fee have made fine for it.

And when they have thus inquired upon every thing, they shall cause all the land, corn, and goods to be valued in like manner as if they should be sold immediately; and thereupon they shall be delivered to the whole township, which shall be answerable before the judges for all.

Persons drowned, or suddenly dead.

In like manner, by the said statute, it is to be inquired of them that be drowned or suddenly dead, whether they were so drowned or slain, or strangled by the sign of a cord tied straight about their necks, or about any of their members, or upon any other hurt found upon their bodies. And if they were not slain, then ought the coroner to attach the finders and all other in the company.

Flight.

He shall also inquire whether the persons found guilty fled; for which flight they forfeit goods and chattels. (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 27, 51).

Township amerced for an escape.

And if any person be slain or murdered in the daytime, and the murderer escape untaken, the township shall be amerced. (3 Hen. VII. c. 1).

Deodands.

Concerning horses, boats, carts, and the like, whereby any are slain, which properly are called deodands, they also shall be valued and delivered unto the towns as before. (4 Edw. I. st. 2; see post, "Deodands").

By the express words of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, s. 5, he may inquire of accessaries before the fact; but he cannot inquire of accessaries after the fact. (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 26, 27).

Persons dying in prison.

He ought also to inquire of the death of all persons who die in prison that it may be known whether they died by violence, or any other unreasonable hardships; for if a prisoner, by the duress of the gaoler, come to an untimely death, it is murder in the gaoler, and the law implies malice in respect of the cruelty. (3 Inst. 52, 91).

And this inquest upon prisoners ought to consist of a party jury, that is, six of the prisoners (if so many there be), and six of the next vill or parish, not prisoners. (Umfreville's Coron. 212).

Statute of Edw. I. merely directory.

The above statute of 4 Edw. I. st. 2, is merely directory, and in affirmance of the common law; and does not restrain the coroner from any branch of his power, nor excuse him from the execution of any part of his duty not mentioned in the statute, and which was incident to his office at common law. (2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 21; 3 Inst. 52).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Coroners not to intrude into families or hold unnecessary inquests.

Coroners ought not, in general, where a party dies by the visitation of God, as from apoplexy or the like, nor in any case, unless a very doubtful one, unnecessarily to obtrude themselves into private families for the purpose of instituting inquiry. (Rex v. Justices of Kent, 11 East, 229). They should in general wait until they are sent for by the peace officers of the place where the violent or unnatural death occurred before holding an inquest.

Evidence and witnesses.

Evidence and Witnesses.]—The coroner must hear evidence on all hands, if it be offered to him, and that upon oath, because it is not so much an accusation or an indictment, as an inquisition or inquest of office. (2 Hale, 157, supra).

In R. v. Scory, (1 Leach, 43), the Court of King's Bench granted a rule against the coroner, to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against him for refusing, on taking an inquisition super visum corporis, to receive evidence on the part of the person accused.

The coroner, as an incident to his office, has authority, and it is his duty, to issue a summons to compel the appearance of witnesses, and to commit them for their contempt should they refuse to appear, or having appeared, to give evidence upon the subject of the inquiry. (1 Chit. C. L. 164).

On the appearance of each witness the coroner should take down his name, abode, and occupation, and then administer the oath that he shall speak the truth, &c. (Umf. Cor. 177). In case an interpreter is necessary, the oath must be administered to him. (Id. 182). (As to witnesses in general, see post, "Evidence;" and see further, post, "Examination").

The jurors at any time during the investigation may call back before them any witness who has been examined, and ask any question that may suggest itself to their minds as elucidatory of their inquiry.

Taking down examinations in writing.

7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

Binding witnesses to appear, &c.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, which repeals the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, s. 5, enacts, "that every coroner, upon any inquisition before him taken, whereby any person shall be indicted for manslaughter or murder, or as an accessary to murder before the fact, shall put in writing the evidence given to the jury before him, or as much thereof as shall be material; and shall have authority to bind by recognisance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching the said manslaughter or murder, or the said offence of being accessory to murder, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, at which the trial is to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party charged; and every such coroner shall certify and subscribe the same evidence, and all such recognisances, and also the inquisition before him taken, and shall deliver the same to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court."

Penalty for his neglect.

By sect. 5 he may be fined for non-compliance with this enactment, (see post, 41).

This enactment applies to coroners of all jurisdictions, as well of the county as of exempt franchises and liberties. (Sect. 6, post, 41).

The examination should be taken down as near as possible in the very words of the party examined, and not according to the effect of his examination. (See tit. "Evidence," post).

What witnesses should be bound to appear.

In a case of manslaughter, it is the duty of the coroner to bind over all those witnesses who prove any material fact against the party accused, and not those who are called for the purpose of exculpating him. But if the coroner bind over all the witnesses on both sides, no blame is imputable to the clerk of indictments, if he require them all to be put on the back of the bill, and examined before the grand jury. (Reg. v. Taylor, 9 C. & P. 672).

Certifying examination.

The depositions ought regularly to be returned to the clerk of assizes at the opening of the commission, or if possible before, so as to enable the judge who presides to examine the facts of each case, that he may explain to the grand jury in his charge any difficulty that may exist, and state to them the law as applicable to the facts. Coroners have frequently been censured for remissness in this respect. But they are not bound to return the depositions, unless there be something depending before the court to make it necessary. (Coroner of Westminster's case, 2 Stra. 1073). Still, in a case where a coroner's jury, on the investigation of a case of homicide, returned a verdict "of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown," and the coroner returned the depositions he had taken to the Central Criminal Court:—it was held, on application by the counsel for a prisoner indicted for the murder of the same person, for a copy of such depositions, that, although the coroner could not in such a case have been compelled to return them, under statut· 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 4, yet that having done so, the judges had power, by their general authority as a Court of justice, to order a copy to be given if they thought it material to the interests of justice. (Rex v. Greenacre, 8 Car. & P. 32).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

The court will not grant a rule nisi to remove the depositions taken before a coroner, and to bail a party charged upon the coroner's inquest with manslaughter, without an affidavit of what took place before the Coroner. (Rex v. Mills, 4 Nev. & M. 6).

See further as to depositions being evidence on other trials, tit. "Evidence," post.

Expenses of holding Inquests.]—By the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 68, intituled "An Act to provide for Payment of the Expenses of holding Coroners' Inquests," reciting that "the holding of coroners' inquests on dead bodies is attended with divers necessary expenses, for the payment whereof no certain provision is made by law, and such expenses have usually been discharged without any lawful authority for that purpose out of the monies levied for the relief of the poor; and it is expedient to make adequate legal provision for the payment of such expenses;" it is enacted, "that the justices of the peace for every county, riding, division, or district in England and Wales, in general or quarter sessions assembled, shall, at the general or quarter sessions of the peace to be holden next after the passing of this act, or at some subsequent general or quarter sessions, and the town council of every borough having a coroner shall at the quarterly meeting of such council which shall be holden next after the passing of this act, or at some subsequent quarterly meeting thereof, make or cause to be made a schedule of the several fees, allowances, and disbursements which, on the holding of any inquest on any dead body within such county, riding, division, district, or borough, may be lawfully paid and made by the coroner holding such inquest (other than the fees payable to medical witnesses under and by virtue of an act passed in the last session of parliament, intituled 'An Act to provide for the Attendance and Remuneration of Medical Witnesses at Coroners' Inquests'); and it shall be lawful for such justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, and for such town council at any such quarterly meeting as aforesaid, from time to time to alter and vary such schedule as to such justices and town council respectively may seem fit; and the said justices and town council respectively shall cause a copy of every such schedule to be deposited with the clerk of the peace of such county, riding, division, district, or borough, and one other copy thereof to be delivered to every coroner acting in and for such county, riding, division, district, or borough as aforesaid; and whenever any inquest shall be holden on any dead body the coroner holding the same shall immediately after the termination of the proceedings advance and pay all expenses reasonably incurred in and about the holding thereof, not exceeding the sums set forth in the said schedule, and which sums so advanced and paid shall be repaid to the said coroner in manner hereinafter mentioned: provided always, that until such Coroners to pay medical witnesses.

2. "That so much of the said act passed in the last session of parliament as directs the coroner to make out an order on the churchwardens and overseers of the parish in which any death shall have happened for payment of the remuneration or fee payable under the provisions of that act to any medical practitioner, and as directs such churchwardens and overseers to pay the same out of the funds collected for the relief of the poor of such parish, shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and in lieu thereof the coroner shall, immediately after the termination of the proceedings at any inquest, advance and pay such remuneration or fee to every medical witness summoned under the provisions of the said act, and the amount thereof shall be repaid to the said coroner in manner hereinafter mentioned."

The coroner to be repaid out of the county rates or the borough fund.

Act applicable to London and Southwark.

4. "That this act and the several provisions herein contained shall extend and be applicable to the city of London and the town and borough of Southwark."

Medical witnesses.

Attendance and Remuneration of Medical Witnesses at Inquest.]—The coroner ought, it seems, to examine a medical witness as to the cause of the death. (R. v. Quende, 4 C. & P. 571).

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 89.

Coroner empowered to summon medical witnesses, and to direct the performance of a post-mortem examination.

By stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 89, intituled "An Act to provide for the Attendance and Remuneration of Medical Witnesses at Coroners' Inquests," [17th August, 1836,] reciting "whereas it is expedient to provide for the attendance of medical witnesses at coroners' inquests, also remuneration for such attendance, and for the performance of post-mortem examinations at such inquests;" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, whenever upon the summoning or holding of any coroner's inquest it shall appear to the coroner that the deceased person was attended at his death or during his last illness by any legally qualified medical practitioner, it shall be lawful for the coroner to issue his order, in the form marked (A.) in the schedule hereunto annexed (post, p. 56), for the attendance of such practitioner as a witness at such inquest; and if it shall appear to the coroner that the deceased person was not attended at or immediately before his death by any legally qualified medical practitioner, it shall be lawful for the coroner to issue such order for the attendance of any legally qualified medical practitioner being at the time in actual practice in or near the place where the death has happened; and it shall be lawful for the coroner, either in his order for the attendance of the medical witness, or at any time between the issuing of such order and the termination of the inquest, to direct the performance of a post-mortem examination, with or without an analysis of the contents of the stomach or intestines, by the medical witness or witnesses who may be summoned to attend at any inquest; provided that if any person shall state upon oath before the coroner that in his or her belief the death of the deceased individual was caused partly or entirely by the improper or negligent treatment of any medical practitioner or other person, such medical practitioner or other person shall not be allowed to perform or assist at the post-mortem examination of the deceased."

A majority of the jury may require the coroner to summon additional medical evidence if the first be not satisfactory.

2. "Whenever it shall appear to the greater number of the jurymen sitting at any coroner's inquest, that the cause of death has not been satisfactorily explained by the evidence of the medical practitioner or other witness or witnesses who may be examined in the first instance, such greater number of the jurymen are hereby authorized and empowered to name to the coroner in writing any other legally qualified medical practitioner or practitioners, and to require the coroner to issue his order, in the form hereinbefore mentioned, for the attendance of such last-mentioned medical practitioner or practitioners as a witness or witnesses, and for the performance of a post-mortem examination, with or without any analysis of the contents of the stomach or intestines, whether such an examination has been performed before or not; and if the coroner, having been thereunto required, shall refuse to issue such order, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punishable in like manner as if the same were a misdemeanor at common law."

Fees to medical witnesses to be paid out of funds collected for relief of the poor.

3. "When any legally qualified medical practitioner has attended upon any coroner's inquest in obedience to any such order as aforesaid of the coroner, the said practitioner shall for such attendance at any inquest in Great Britain be entitled to receive such remuneration or fee as is mentioned in the table marked (B.) in the schedule hereunto annexed (post, 56); and for any inquest held in Ireland, the said practitioner shall be paid in the manner provided by the laws in force in that part of the united kingdom; and the coroner is hereby required and commanded to make, according to the form marked (C.) in the schedule hereunto annexed (post, p. 57), his order for the payment of such remuneration or fee, when the inquest shall be held in Great Britain, and such order may be addressed and directed to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish or place in which the death has happened; and such churchwardens and overseers, or any one of them, is and are hereby required and commanded to pay the sum of money mentioned in such order of the coroner to the medical witness therein mentioned, out of the funds collected for the relief of the poor of the said place."

No fee for a post-mortem examination instituted without order from the coroner.

4. "Provided nevertheless, and be it further enacted, that no order of payment shall be given, or fee or remuneration paid, to any medical practitioner for the performance of any post-mortem examination which may be instituted without the previous direction of the coroner."

Inquests on bodies of persons dying in public institutions.

5. "Provided also, and be it further enacted, that when any inquest shall be holden on the body of any person who has died in any public hospital or infirmary, or in any building or place belonging thereto, or used for the reception of the patients thereof, or who has died in any county or other lunatic asylum, or in any public infirmary or other public medical institution, whether the same be supported by endowments or by voluntary subscriptions, then and in such case nothing herein contained shall be construed to entitle the medical officer whose duty it may have been to attend the deceased person as a medical officer of such institution as aforesaid to the fees or remuneration herein provided."

Penalty on medical practitioner for neglecting to attend

6. "Where any order for the attendance of any medical practitioner as aforesaid shall have been personally served upon such practitioner, or where any such order not personally served shall have been received by any medical practitioner in sufficient time for him to have obeyed such order, or where any such order has been served at the residence of any medical practitioner, and in every case where any medical practitioner has not obeyed such order, he shall for such neglect or disobedience forfeit the sum of five pounds sterling, upon complaint thereof made by the coroner or any two of the jury before any two justices having jurisdiction in the parish or place where the inquest under which the order issued was held, or in the parish where such medical practitioner resides; and such two justices are hereby required, upon such complaint, to proceed to the hearing and adjudication of such complaint, and, if such medical practitioner shall not show to the said justices a good and sufficient cause for not having obeyed such order, to enforce the said penalty by distress and sale of the offender's goods, as they are empowered to proceed by any act of parliament for any other penalty or forfeiture."

Act not to extend to Scotland.

7. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to Scotland."

Who may be present at inquest

Who may of right be present.]—Much doubt and discussion have arisen as to the power of the coroner to exclude individuals from the inquest. It may now, however, be fairly inferred from the late case of Garnett v. Ferrand, (6 B. & Cres. 611; 9 D. & R. 657), that the coroner has the power of excluding not only particular individuals, attorneys and counsel, &c., but the public generally. It was held in that case, that no action would lie against a coroner for excluding a party from an inquest. The coroner should, however, exercise his own discretion fairly and not arbitrarily; and it is advisable that he should receive evidence on all hands. It is neither reasonable nor just to exclude persons who have an interest in the event and have a right to tender evidence, and it would be most inconvenient to inquire in each particular case whether there is an interest to protect or not. (See Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237; Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Ad. 663. The Prisoner's Counsel Act, 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 114, (see tit. "Conviction," Vol. I.) does not apply to coroners' inquests).

Adjourning inquest.

Adjourning Inquest.]—If the place where the body is be an inconvenient one for the purpose of holding the inquest, or if any of the witnesses be absent, or affected by undue influence, or unwilling to attend, or there be any other good cause why the inquest cannot be properly completed, the coroner may adjourn it to another time or place, informing the jury when and where they are again to meet, and first taking the jurors' recognisance for their appearance at the adjournment time or place. (See Umfr. Cor. 179; 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 25). The adjournment need not be stated on the face of the inquisition.

The verdict.

The verdict.]—It is peculiarly the province of the jury to investigate and determine the facts of the case; they are neither to expect nor should they be bound by any specific or direct opinion of the coroner upon the whole of the case, except so far as regards the verdict, which, in point of law, they ought to find as dependent and contingent upon their conclusions in point of fact. But in questions of law, juries ought to ask and shew the most respectful deference to the advice and recommendation of the coroner; ad quæstionem facti non respondent judices, ad quæstionem legis non respondent juratores. (Vaugh. Rep. 160). The verdict should be compounded of the facts as detailed to the jury by the witnesses, and of the law as stated to them by the court. (See Jervis, 225, 226).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Formerly the jury might from their own cognisance of the fact have returned a verdict without any evidence being adduced before them. (1 Vent. 67). But this is not so now, and if a juryman can give evidence, he should be sworn, and give it in the ordinary way as other witnesses. (1 Salk. 405).

If twelve of the jury cannot agree in their verdict, the jury are to be kept without meat, drink, or fire, until they return their verdict. Even this may sometimes be ineffectual, and in such cases they should be adjourned to the next assizes, when they may have the benefit of the opinion and direction of the judge who presides. (Comb. 386; Jerv. 229).

Form of inquisition.

Form of the Inquisition.]—Immediately after the jury have pronounced their verdict, the same should, together with all the material proceedings at the inquest, be put into writing, and engrossed on parchment indented. The coroner, with his name and style of office, and all of the jurymen, to the number of twelve or more, who found the verdict, should sign the inquisition. The signatures should be in full, stating both the Christian and surnames of each juror. The mere initials would suffice, unless perhaps in the case of the Christian name appearing in full in the caption. (See 1 Nol. 141; R. v. Evett, 6 B. & Cres. 247; 9 D. & R. 237; 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4). It seems unnecessary to seal the inquisition, though usual so to do. (See Jerv. 271).

Signatures to.

Sealing

Time of making it

It does not appear when this formal inquisition should be drawn up, but it is usual and best it should be so before the jury are dispersed.

General requisites.

The general requisites of this inquisition are the same as those of an indictment. (See "Indictment," Vol. III).

The statement of the facts therein must be with legal certainty and precision, with no repugnancy or inconsistency, and be direct and positive. Mere superfluous statements may be rejected.

Formal parts.

The formal parts of an inquisition in general consist in the statement of the venue, the place where the death took place and inquisition was held, so as to shew the coroner has jurisdiction, the time of the death and holding the inquisition, the coroner's name and title of office, the view of the body, the name of the deceased if known, the taking of the oath by all the jurors, the jurors being good and lawful men, their verdict or finding, and lastly, the attestation.

Venue and place.

The venue and place at which the inquisition is holden must appear on the face of the inquisition. (2 H. P. C. 166). If the inquisition do not state any place at all at which the inquisition is holden (Buckler's case, Dyer, 69); or do not shew with sufficient certainty that the place stated is within the jurisdiction of the coroner (Thorney's case, Cro. Jac. 276, 277); as if it state that the inquisition was holden at B., without shewing in what county B. is, otherwise than by putting the county in the margin, it is insufficient, and the inquisition may be quashed. (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 128). But it is not necessary again to name the county in the margin, if it be referred to by the words "county aforesaid;" and it has been adjudged that the caption of an inquisition as taken at B. before J. S. coroner of the King's liberty of B. aforesaid, is good, without expressly shewing that B. is within the liberty of B., for that cannot but be intended. (5 Rep. 120, 121; Jerv. 248); and it is no objection to a coroner's inquisition super visum corporis, that it purports to be taken in county W., where the death happened, whereas the cause of death appears by the finding to have occurred in county S. (Reg. v. The Grand Junction Railway Company, 11 Ad. & E. 128, n.). But where it appeared on the face of an inquisition that the cause of death occurred within the county of Berks, and the death took place within the limits of the borough of Reading, whither the deceased had been removed, and for which borough there was a separate coroner, it seems to have been held, that the borough coroner and a jury of the borough had no jurisdiction to hold an inquest on the body, and the court quashed the inquisition on that ground. (Reg. v. Great Western Railway Company, Q. B., T. T., 1842).

Time of holding.

The inquisition must state the time when it was holden, in order to shew that the inquiry is recent. (2 Saund. 291). It suffices to state the day of holding without specifying the hour. If it be stated to have been taken upon an impossible day (R. v. Fearnley, 1 T. R. 316); or to have been holden on such a day, in such a year of the King, without ascertaining what king (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 127); the inquisition is bad, and may be quashed. A caption stating the time in the præterperfect and not in the present tense is insufficient (id.); though this is not so in the case of a conviction. (R. v. Hall, 1 T. R. 320). We have seen when the inquisition should be holden, also that it should not be on a Sunday (ante, 30); as to the mode of stating time in general, see tit. "Conviction," Vol. I., "Indictment," Vol. III).

Name and style of coroner

The name and style of office of the coroner must be stated, in order that it may appear that the inquisition was taken before a court of competent jurisdiction. (22 Edw. IV. c. 13; Sum. 207; Staundf. P. C. 96).

Although the style of office be added, yet the inquisition will be insufficient unless it appear that he was coroner for the district in which the inquisition is taken. (Dearing's case, Cro. Eliz. 193; 2 Roll. 82; 22 Edw. IV. c. 16). But an inquisition before J. S., coroner in the county, has been adjudged to be sufficient, without shewing that he was coroner for the county, for that cannot but be intended. (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 119; Plowd. 76, 77; R. v. Heydon, 4 Rep. 41; Jerv. 250).

View

It must be stated that the inquisition was taken on view of the body, which we have seen, (ante, 30, 31), is requisite to give the coroner jurisdiction; if not so stated, the inquisition is bad, and may be quashed.

Name of deceased

The name of the deceased should be described accurately, or a variance will be fatal. If his name be unknown, he may be described as a person to the jurors unknown; but such a description would it seems be bad, if he were known. (See R. v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; R. v. Robinson, Holt, C. N. P. 595; 2 H. P. C. 281; "Indictment," Vol. III).

Names &c. of jurors.

The inquisition should shew that all the jurors took the oath, also who such jurors are, by name, and therefore it is insufficient to allege that it was taken by the oaths of the several persons underwritten (R. v. Evett, 6 B. & C. 247; 9 D. & R. 237); or of A. B., C. D., and others. (2 H. P. C. 168). So, although it is not necessary that the jury should come from the next adjoining townships, (ante, 29), it must expressly appear that they are from the county or jurisdiction within which the inquiry is holden, that they are at least twelve in number (ante, 29); but see Lambert v. Taylor, (6 D. & R. 188; 4 B. & C. 138, S. C.); and also that they present the inquisition upon their oaths. (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 126). Lord Hale (2 H. P. C. 167) was of opinion that the inquisition should appear to have been taken by the oaths of honest and lawful men, as well in the case of coroners' inquests, as in that of other indictments and presentments; but this is said to be unnecessary, and has been so held in the case of indictments in the superior courts, because, until the contrary be proved, all men shall be intended to be probi et legales. (2 Hawk. P. C. c. 25, s. 17, 126).

On application to quash a coroner's inquisition, the ground of objection appeared to be, that the inquisition stated it to have been taken on the oaths of eleven men, and the affirmation of one man. It was contended that, although by the late act of the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 49, Quakers or Moravians might act on inquisitions, yet it must appear that the person affirming was either a Quaker or a Moravian. Parke, J., was of opinion, "that it ought to appear on the face of the inquisition that the one man affirming was either a Quaker or a Moravian;" and he accordingly directed the inquisition to be quashed. (R. v. Polfield, 2 Dowl. P. C. 469).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Care should also be taken to insert the names of the jurors accurately, for if there be a variance between the names of the jurors in the caption and those in the attestation, it will be fatal. (R. v. Huggins, 3 C. & P. 414; Jerv. 252, 253). But if the jurors' names be set out at full length in the caption of an inquisition, it is immaterial whether they sign at the foot with the initials only of their Christian names; (Reg. v. Brownlow, 11 Ad. & E. 119); and if some of the jurors be marksmen, and their marks are not attested, the inquisition will be bad on that ground. (Reg. v. Stockdale, 8 Dowl. P. C. 507).

The party charged.

If the inquisition contain matter of accusation against a party, such party should be described as accurately as a party should in an indictment against him. An inquisition stated in substance, that J. D., on the 27th of May, struck M. R. with a poker on the head, and with his hands on the breast, and gave her divers mortal bruises and contusions; and that M. F. on the 23rd of June kicked the said M. R. on the belly, and thereby gave her one mortal bruise and contusion. It then averred that the said M. R. of the mortal bruises &c. given by J. D. languished from the 27th of May until the 1st of July, and of the mortal bruise &c. given by M. F. languished from the 23rd of June till the 1st of July, and then died of the mortal bruises and contusions on the head and breast, together with the mortal bruise and contusion on the belly. The conclusion was, that the said J. D. and the said M. F., her the said M. R., in manner and by the means aforesaid, feloniously did kill and slay:—The court directed the inquisition to be quashed. (Reg. v. Dovett, 8 Car. & P. 639; see also Rex v. Mitchell, 7 C. & P. 800; Rex v. Nicholas, 7 C. & P. 538; and see tit. "Indictment," Vol. III. for further information on this head).

Time and place.

The time and place when and where the party is charged with having committed the offence should be also specified as accurately and properly as in an indictment. In R. v. Evett, (6 B. & Cres. 247; 9 D. & R. 237), an inquisition was quashed because it did not state where the party died, or where the body was found. The day and year when the alleged crime took place should be stated. (2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 77; 2 H. P. C. 177). The hour need not be stated. (Combe v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1434). The inquisition ought to point out the precise time at which the accident happened that caused the death of the deceased, and also the precise time at which the death took place. And therefore, where a coroner's inquest found, that, on &c., at &c., one A. B., being on board a certain steam-boat, which was then and there being floated and navigated on the Thames, it so happened that a certain boiler, then and there forming part of a steam-engine in and on board of the said steam-vessel, which said boiler was then and there used in the working of the said steam-engine, burst and exploded, and the boiling water was thereby cast upon A. B., whereby A. B. then and there received a mortal shock and concussion, of which said mortal shock &c. A. B. instantly died:—it was held, that the day of the explosion and of the death did not sufficiently appear, and therefore the court quashed the inquisition. It was considered, that the words "of which &c. the deceased instantly died," did not supply the place of the words "then and there instantly died." (Reg. v. Brownlow, 11 Ad. & E. 119). One inquisition may be taken on the dead bodies of several persons who have been killed by the same cause and died at the same time. (Reg. v. West, 1 Gale & D. 481). (See further as to the statement of time and place, ante, "Conviction," Vol. I.; and post, tit. "Indictment," Vol. III).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Act causing death

The act causing the death must be stated accurately as in an indictment, otherwise the inquisition may be quashed. And if a coroner's jury find that the death of A. was occasioned by means of a locomotive engine of B. being driven against him, and that the same did "feloniously cast to the ground the said A.:" it is not a sufficient description of the cause of the death of A. (Reg. v. Stockdale and Darlington Railway Company, 8 Dowl. P. C. 517). (See Jerv. 263).

Deodands.

With a view to the deodand the inquisition should distinctly shew what caused the death, and its value, and to whom it belonged, and in case of death caused by the falling of a building, it should state what part of the materials caused such death, and their value. (R. v. Coroner &c. of London, Exp. Carruthers, 2 M. & R. 397). And where a coroner's inquisition stated, that the proprietors of two locomotive engines carelessly and improperly caused and permitted them to be used on a railway, by means whereof the engines were propelled against each other, and a person riding on one of them was killed; that the engines were moving to and the cause of the death, and were of the value respectively of &c., and the property of &c., and that the jury exonerated the men employed on the engines from blame:—quære, whether, on such finding, the engines, as having moved to the death of the party killed, were deodand. At all events, where the facts are so stated, the court will not quash the inquisition entirely or in part, on the ground that upon such an inquisition a deodand has been improperly claimed. (Reg. v. The Grand Junction Railway Company, 11 Ad. & E. 126, n.) And if a coroner's jury find a verdict of manslaughter, the value of anything supposed to be moving to the death may be found, so that it may afterwards be forfeited, if, on an indictment for the manslaughter, a conviction should follow. But an express finding of a deodand on an inquisition for manslaughter is bad, deodands being legal only in cases of death by misadventure. (Reg. v. Polwart, 1 Gale & D. 211; 9 Dowl. P. C. 104).

Where the jury found that they believed a post to be the only cause of the death, the inquisition was quashed. (Anon., 12 Mod. 112). So an inquisition has been quashed for not setting forth the wound, and that it was mortal. (Reg. v. Clerk, 1 Salk. 377; Holt, 167, S. C.; 7 Mod. 16). And in a case where an inquisition alleged the engine and carriages, which it had found to have been moving to the death, to be in the possession of and belonging to "the proprietors of the Hull and Selby Railway Company and the proprietors of the Leeds and Selby Railway Company:"—it was held, that such a description of ownership was insufficient. (Reg. v. West, 1 Gale & D. 481). An inquisition may be good in part, and bad for the residue, if such residue can be separated from the other part; as, if the inquisition be bad as to the deodand, that part of it may be quashed and the rest stand. (Ex parte Carruthers, 2 Man. & R. 397). (See further as to deodands, post, tit. "Deodands").

Enrolling proceedings.

Enrolling Proceedings.]—All which things must be enrolled in the rolls of the coroner. (4 Edw. I. st. 2).

And the sheriff shall have counter rolls with the coroner of things belonging to their office. (3 Edw. I. c. 10).

Binding witnesses to prosecute, and issuing warrant against offender.

Binding Witnesses to Prosecute, &c. and Issuing Warrant against Offender.]—If the verdict be of that description that future proceedings will be necessary, the coroner must bind by recognisance all such persons as know anything material touching the offence, to appear at the court into which the inquisition is to be returned, then and there to prosecute and give evidence against the party charged. (7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, ante, 32).

The coroner must, where the verdict charges a person with having murdered the deceased, or manslaughtered him, issue his warrant to apprehend the offender, and commit him to prison (1 Chit. C. L. 164); or if he be already in prison, the coroner should issue a detainer to the gaoler.

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Burial of deceased.

Burial of Deceased.]—After the proceedings are closed, or before, if it be necessary, the coroner should issue his warrant for the burial of the body or bodies upon which the inquest has been taken, and the burial must take place accordingly. (4 Edw. I. st. 2).

As to the burial of a felo de se, see "Homicide," Vol. III.

Publishing proceedings.

Publishing Proceedings.]—It is illegal to publish a statement of the evidence given before the coroner's jury, even though it be correct, and the party publishing it be not actuated by any malicious motives. (R. v. Fleet, 1 B. & Ald. 379; and see R. v. Fisher, 2 Camp. 563; Duncan v. Thwaites, 3 B. & Cress. 556; 5 D. & R. 447, *S. Return of inquisitions, &c.

7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 4

Return of Inquisition, Evidence, and Recognisance, &c.]—The stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, which repeals the stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, enacts, "That the coroner, upon any inquisition before him taken, whereby any person shall be indicted for manslaughter or murder, or as an accessary to murder before the fact, shall put in writing the evidence given to the jury before him, or as much thereof as shall be material, and shall have authority to bind by recognisance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching the said manslaughter or murder, or the said offence of being accessory to murder, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, at which the trial is to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party charged; and every such coroner shall certify and subscribe the same evidence, and all such recognisances, and also the inquisition before him taken, and shall deliver the same to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court."

Fining for default.

By sect. 5. "If any justice or coroner shall offend in any thing contrary to the true intent and meaning of these provisions, the court, to whose officer any such examination, information, evidence, bailment, recognisance, or inquisition, ought to have been delivered, shall, upon examination and proof of the offence in a summary manner, set such fine upon every such justice or coroner as the court shall think meet."

Applicable to all coroners.

By sect. 6. "All these provisions relating to justices and coroners shall apply to the justices and coroners, not only of counties at large, but also of all other jurisdictions."

Attending court, return &c of inquisitions of felo de se, &c.

Coroners ought also to attend personally upon the Court of Queen's Bench, and to deliver to the proper officer all inquisitions of felo de se. (Jervis, 41).

It is the duty of a coroner to be present at the assizes or the gaol delivery at the Old Bailey when any case is tried on an inquisition taken before him; and if he be not present, the court may fine him. (In re Unwin, Q. B. 1827, Car. C. L. 17).

Return of deodands.

3 & 4 Will 4, c. 99.

By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 99, s. 29, an account in writing of all deodands found or forfeited to or for the use of his Majesty shall, within fourteen days after such deodands shall accrue, be made out by the coroners, with the names and residences of the parties liable, and transmitted to the treasury and to the commissioners of audit, and also certified and estreated into the Court of Exchequer. And a rule to discharge the estreat of a deodand returned into the Court of Exchequer under this act, is nisi only in the first instance, and should be served on the solicitor to the Treasury, who may undertake to discharge the estreat by a Treasury warrant. (Reg. v. London and Birmingham Railway Company, 1 Dowl. N. S. 15). (See "Fines and Estreats," Vol. III).

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

Defects in Inquisition, how taken advantage of.

Defects in Inquisition, how taken advantage of.]—If the inquisition be defective in any of the particulars before pointed out as requisite thereto, if a party be accused by the inquisition and appear in the Court of King's Bench, on the return of such inquisition into such court, he may demur to it, or move in arrest of judgment, or, what is more usual, may apply to the Court of King's Bench to get it quashed. And the latter course is not unusually adopted where a party interested in the deodand (if any) is desirous of getting rid of such deodand, the record of the inquisition being removed into the court by certiorari. But it was observed in a recent case, that though the court will sometimes quash an inquisition on motion for palpable defects, the most convenient course is to put the party contesting it to demur. (Reg. v. Brownlow, 11 Ad. & E. 119).

Where the inquisition is so defective that no judgment can be given upon it, the court will in general quash it, and where it contains the subject-matter of accusation, this is done by the court before which the party is arraigned, and the application, if made upon the part of the defendant, ought regularly to be made before the plea pleaded (Fost. C. L. 231; Holt. 684; 4 St. Tr. 677); although, if the defect be manifest, the court will in general entertain the application at any time before the verdict is delivered. (Jervis, 285).

In a recent case, the court, on the application of the crown, set aside a coroner's inquisition for defects apparent on the face of it; and the rule was absolute in the first instance. (In re Culley, 2 Nev. & M. 61; 5 B. & Ad. 230).

The inquisition may be good in part and bad for the residue, and quashed accordingly as to the bad part; as where it is bad so far as relates to the deodand, or where there are two substantial findings, and one of them bad. (Exp. Carruthers, 2 M. & Ry. 397; R. v. Coroner, &c. of London, cited Jerv. Ad. 408).

In addition to the objections arising upon the face of the inquisition, it may be quashed for the misconduct of either the coroner or the jury; (R. v. Hethersal, 3 Mod. 80; Jerv. 287); as where the coroner fraudulently directed the jury to find a verdict of felo de se, telling them that it was in effect the same as a finding of lunacy, the court quashed the inquisition (R. v. Wakefield, 1 Stra. 69; and see R. v. Stukeley, 12 Mod. 493); so the court will quash an inquisition taken without a view of the body, for the view ascertains the cause of the death, and is an essential part of the evidence (ante, 929); and, in like manner, where, from the decomposition of the body, no information can be derived from the view, the inquisition may be quashed upon an affidavit of the circumstances. (R. v. Bond, 1 Stra. 22; 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 9, s. 24; Jerv. 287).

Defects not aided by statute.

Defects in Inquisition not aided by Statute.]—It should be observed that the statute of jeofails, and the late act 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, which cures many trifling defects in indictments, do not extend to coroners' inquisitions.

Amending Inquisitions.

Amending Inquisitions.]—The Court of Queen's Bench have a discretionary power to amend coroners' inquisitions in furtherance of justice. This power is exercised according to the circumstances of each particular case. It seems, however, that it is only of formal defects, and not of substantial ones, that this amendment can be made. (See R. v. Evett, 6 B & Cres. 251; 9 D. & R. 237; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 97; R. v. Harrison, 1 Sid. 225; R. v. Glover, id. 259; R. v. Saloway, 3 Mod. 101; 1 Saund. 356). Where the inquisition omitted to state the place where the death happened or where the body was found, and in the body of the inquisition the names of the jurors were not inserted, and the jurors had only signed with initials, so that the exact names of the jurors nowhere appeared; it was held, that these were all defects of substance, and not amendable in the Court of Queen's Bench. (R. v. Evett, 6 B. & Cres. 247; 9 D. & R. 247),

7. Power and Duty on an Inquest.

An inquisition found that the death was occasioned by the upsetting of a mail-coach, the property of Peter Purcell & Co., the court refused, on an affidavit stating the names of all the proprietors, to strike out the word "Co." and insert the names of the other proprietors. (Rex v. Purcell, 1 Cooke & Alcock, 104).

It should be observed also, that the 20th section of the statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, does not apply to coroners' inquisitions. (See this section, "Indictment," Vol. III).

Before the amendment can be made, the inquisition must be in court, for which purpose a certiorari must be issued to the coroner to return the inquisition to the Crown Office, where it is filed. After this a venire facias is issued to bring the coroner into court to make the amendment, in obedience to which he attends personally at the Crown Office, where the amendment is made. (Comb. 58). As to the mode of obtaining this venire facias, Mr. Jervis says, p. 281, the best course is to apply in term to the Court of Queen's Bench for a rule, or in vacation to a judge at chambers for a summons, to shew cause why the amendment should not be made, and why the venire facias should not issue to bring the coroner into court, and the rule or summons should be served on the coroner or parties interested, upon the discussion of which the propriety of the amendment may be entertained, and if allowed, the venire facias will be issued.

Proceedings where inquisition quashed.

Proceedings where Inquisition quashed.]—Where an inquisition is quashed a new inquiry may by leave of the court (R. v. Saunders, 1 Stra. 167) be instituted by the coroner, (R. v. Hethersal, 3 Mod. 80), the body being disinterred by order of the Court of Queen's Bench, which will exercise a discretion in making or refusing the order, according to the circumstances of the case and the length of time the body has been buried, (Reg. v. Clerk, 1 Salk. 377; R. v. Bond, 1 Stra. 22; Anon. 30, id. 533; ante, 30).

But where there is any imputation upon the coroner he shall not again interfere in the inquiry, but a meliùs inquirendum may be awarded to take a new inquisition by special commissioners, who shall proceed by the testimony of witnesses, without viewing the body. (R. v. Bunney, 1 Salk. 190; ante, 30; Jerv. 287).

When traversable.

Effect of Inquisition.]—It appears by the best authorities, that the inquests of the coroner are in no case conclusive, and that one affected by them, either collaterally or otherwise, may deny their authority and put them in issue. (R. v. Parker, 3 Keb. 489; see Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & Cres. 615, 627; 9 D. & R. 657, S. C.; R. v. Evett, id. 247). And it is now settled that an inquisition of felo de se may be removed into Q. B., and traversed by the executors or administrators of the deceased. (1 Saund. 363, n. (s).) Doubts have been entertained whether inquisitions of flight and felo de se are traversable, but it seems they are. (See Jerv. 282 to 284; 1 Saund. 362, n.)

Inquisition equivalent to finding of a grand jury.

Where the inquisition contains the subject-matter of accusation of any person, it is equivalent to the finding of a grand jury, and such person may be tried and convicted on it. (2 Hale, 61). And if an indictment be found for the same offence, and the defendant be acquitted on the one, he must be arraigned on the other, to which he may, however, effectually plead his formal acquittal. (2 Hale, 61; Reg. v. Culliford, 1 Salk. 382).

The finding of the grand jury is regarded as of more weight than an inquisition taken before the coroner; as the court will, in their discretion, bail after the latter, but always refuse after the former; the reason of which may be, that in one case they can look into the depositions, to see if the evidence supports the charge of murder, whereas in the other, the investigation is secret, and does not admit of a summary revision. (R. v. Dalton, 2 Stra. 911 ; R. v. Magrath, id. 1242).

Trial.

It is the practice to prefer an indictment to the grand jury, and to try the party accused upon both proceedings at the same time, by which means the form of a second trial is rendered unnecessary. (R. v. Culliford, 1 Salk. 382).

Coroner's warrant of apprehension

When a coroner's jury have found that a party has murdered the deceased, the coroner may issue his warrant to apprehend him, and may commit him to prison ; he has also power to summon witnesses, and bind over persons to prosecute and give evidence. (1 Chit. C. L. 163, 164).

VIII. His Power and Duty in other Matters.

Treasure trove.

By stat. 4 Edw. I. st. II. he ought to inquire of treasure that is found ; who were the finders, and likewise who is suspected thereof ; and that may well be perceived, where one liveth riotously, haunting taverns, and hath done so of long time : hereupon he may be attached for this suspicion by four, or six or more pledges, if they may be found. (See 2 Hawk. c. 9, s. 36).

Wrecks.

Coroners may inquire of wrecks and royal fishes, as sturgeons, whales, and the like. (Staundf. 51 ; Bract. 120 ; Britt. s. 42 ; Jerv. 34).

Executing process.

Besides his judicial place, he hath also an authority ministerial as sheriff ; namely, when there is just exception taken to the sheriff, judicial process shall be awarded to the coroner, for the execution of the King's writs ; and in some special cases, the King's original writ shall be immediately directed to him. (4 Inst. 271 ; see Tidd, 9*th edit.*).

As to juries

As to his duties of office as to juries, see R. v. Dolby, 2 B. & Cres. 104 ; 3 D. & R. 311, "Jurors," Vol. III.

Outlawry.

He is bound to be present in the county court, to pronounce judgment of outlawry upon the exigent, after quinto exactus at the fifth court, if the defendant doth not appear. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1 ; Watson's Sheriff, c. 8).

Returning inquisitions, &c.

As to his duty in returning inquisitions and being present at trials, see ante, 41.

As conservator of the peace.

As to his power and duty as conservator of the peace, to arrest, and suppress affrays, &c. "see Arrest," Vol. I.

Deputy.

We have already seen that the coroner cannot in general proceed by deputy, ante, 28.

IX. His Fees.

Formerly none.

Anciently the coroner had no fees. (1 Com. 347).

Fee of 13*s.* 4*d.*

By the statute of 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, the coroner shall have for his fee, upon every inquisition taken upon the view of the body slain, 13*s.* 4*d.* of the goods and chattels of him that is the slayer or murderer, if he have any goods ; and if not, he shall have for his said fee of such amerciaments as shall fortune any township to be amerced for escape of such murderers. So also stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 3, 4.

Fee of 20*s* and also 9*d.* a mile.

Moreover, by stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1, for every inquisition (not taken upon view of a body dying in gaol) which shall be duly taken in any township or place contributing to the rates directed by stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, (the County Rate Act), he shall have 20*s.* and also 9*d.* for every mile he shall be compelled to travel from his usual place of abode to take such inquisition ; to be paid by order of the justices in sessions out of the county rates ; for which order no fee shall be paid. (See R. v. Justices of Warwick, post, 940 ; "County Rate," post).

Sect. 2. "And for every inquisition taken on view of a body dying in prison, he shall be paid so much, not exceeding 20*s.*, as the justices in sessions shall allow, to be paid in like manner."

9. His Fees.

Sect. 5. "But no coroner of the King's household, and of the verge of the King's palaces, nor any coroner of the admiralty, nor of the county palatine of Durham, nor of the city of London and borough of Southwark, or of any franchises belonging to the said city, nor of any city, town, or franchise not contributory to the county rates, or within which such rates have not been usually assessed, shall be entitled to any benefit by this act; but they shall have such fees and salaries as they were allowed before this act, or as shall be allowed by the persons by whom they have been appointed. (See R. v. Justices of W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 T. R. 52).

Not to apply to certain coroners.

A coroner under this statute is not entitled to any compensation for the miles travelled by him in returning to his usual place of abode from taking an inquisition. (R. v. Justices of Oxfordshire, 2 B. & Ald. 203). W. E. Taunton had obtained a rule nisi for a mandamus to the defendant to make an order for paying one Cecil, a coroner for that county, a certain sum of money out of the county rates, being a compensation, at the rate of 9*d.* per mile, for the several miles travelled by him as coroner in returning to his usual place of abode, from taking several inquisitions set forth in his affidavits. After argument of the case, per Curiam, "The words are, that the coroner shall be allowed 9*d.* per mile for every mile he is compelled to travel from the place of his abode to take the inquisition. The two termini are therefore clearly pointed out, and the coroner can only charge for the miles between them. Now the miles he travels in returning are obviously not from his usual place of abode, and therefore there is no pretence for this charge. Besides, at the time of the passing of the act (which is the proper period to be considered) this was an ample compensation." Rule discharged with costs.

No fee for returning.

In R. v. Justices of Kent (11 East, 229), it was held discretionary in the justices whether they will allow the fee under stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1; they are judges whether the inquisition was duly taken; and the coroner has not necessarily a right to inquire of all such deaths as are not natural.

Discretionary in justices to allow

A coroner cannot have a fee for taking an inquest on a dead body manifestly drowned on the high seas and cast on shore. (R. v. Justices of Yorkshire (W. R.), 7 T. R. 52).

Inquest on body drowned at sea.

The coroner is allowed only for every mile which he is compelled to travel from the usual place of his abode to take the inquisition. Therefore, where there are several inquisitions taken at the same place, and upon one journey, he cannot claim mileage for his travelling expenses for more than one inquisition. (R. v. Justices of Warwick, 8 D. & R. 147; 5 B. & Cres. 430, S. C.).

Where two inquests.

On an inquest taken on a dead body, under 25 Geo. II. c. 29, the inquisition must, in order to entitle the coroner to his fee, be signed by all the jurors. (R. v. Justices of Norfolk, 1 Nolan, 14).

Inquest must be signed by all the jurors.

Coroners of such places and franchises as do not contribute to the county rates cannot claim fees under the 25 Geo. II. (R. v. Justices of Yorkshire (W. R.), 7 T. R. 52).

Places not contributing to county rate.

Should the justices improperly refuse to allow fees to a coroner, his only mode of compelling them to make the allowance, or of trying his right to such as may be questionable, is to apply to the Court of King's Bench for a mandamus. In which case the writ must allege all the circumstances of the case, must shew that he is entitled to the relief prayed, and that he had a right to call upon the magistrates to do that, for the non-performance of which the writ was sued out. (R. v. Justices of Yorkshire (W. R.), 7 T. R. 52). If there be any thing criminal in the refusal, the magistrate might be indicted, or have a criminal information filed against him.

Mandamus to compel allowance of fees.

As to the coroner's fees in boroughs, see post, "Corporations."

In boroughs.

11. Punishment for not doing his Duty.

Exempt from offices.

X. Other Privileges.

Coroners are exempted from serving offices which are inconsistent with the duties of coroner, and are privileged from being summoned on juries. (2 Roll. Abr. 632, s. 4; F. N. B. 167; Jerv. 63).

They are privileged from arrest while in the execution of their judicial duties, and consequently whilst going to, being at, and returning from an inquest. (See Jerv. 63).

XI. His Punishment for not doing his Duty.

Concealing felonies, neglecting duty, &c.

3 Hen. 7, c. 1.

25 Geo. 2, c. 29.

Removable from office for extortion or neglect of duty or misbehaviour.

Coroners concealing felonies, or not doing their duty through favour of the misdoers, shall be imprisoned a year, and fined at the King's pleasure. (3 Edw. I. c. 9).

And by stat. 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, if any coroner be remiss, and make not inquisition upon view of the body dead, and certify the same to the gaol delivery, he shall forfeit to the King 100*s*.

And by stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, if any coroner, not appointed by an annual election or nomination, or whose office is not annexed to any other office, shall be convicted of extortion or wilful neglect of his duty, or misdemeanor in his office, the court before whom he shall be so convicted may adjudge him to be removed from his office; and thereupon, if he shall have been elected by the freeholders, a writ shall issue for amoving him, and electing another in his stead; and if he hath been appointed by the lord of any liberty or franchise, or in any other manner than by the freeholders, the person entitled to nomination shall, on notice of such judgment of amoval, nominate another person in his stead.

And see further as to his removal from office, ante, 27.

7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

If a coroner do not return the depositions and recognisances pursuant to stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, 5, (ante, 41), the court may, in a summary way, set such fine upon him as they shall think proper.

Suppressing inquisition.

In one case a coroner was discharged from his office, and fined 100*l*., for not returning an inquisition to the next gaol delivery, but suppressing it. (Lord Buckhurst's case, 1 Keb. 280).

Influencing jury.

In R. v. Coates (cited Dick. Just. 515), a coroner was discharged from office for using corrupt influence over the jury. And see further when he may be removed, ante, 27.

Offence at common law.

At common law if a coroner be guilty of misconduct, an attachment (Andrews v. Sharp, 2 Bla. Rep. 911; R. v. Peckham, id. 1218), or an information or indictment (R. v. Scory, 1 Leach, 43), lies against him: as where he told the jury that a verdict of felo de se and lunacy were the same. (R. v. Wakefield, 1 Str. 68). So where he excluded some of the jurors, in order to find the deceased non compos. (R. v. Stukeley, 12 Mod. 493). In R. v. Scory, (1 Leach, C. L. 43), the coroner charged the jury to find the prisoner guilty of murder: they, however, returned a verdict of accidental death, which the coroner recorded, but committed the prisoner to gaol for murder: upon which the Court of King's Bench granted a rule nisi for a criminal information against the coroner.

Where a coroner inserted in the verdict that the jury had found three guilty of murder, instead of one only, he was holden to have committed a forgery. (R. v. Marsh, 3 Salk. 172).

If a coroner take an inquisition without viewing the body, he is criminally to blame; for the view ascertains the cause of the death, and an inquisition can be taken super visum corporis only.

In 3 Inst. 149, it is stated that a coroner was committed to prison, and fined 40*s*., because he refused to view a body, unless he was paid, for himself 6*s*. 8*d*., and for his clerk 2*s*. But if the body has been so long buried that no information can be obtained from the view, the coroner will not be justified in causing it to be disinterred; and if he do so, it would seem that he may be fined. (R. v. Parker, 2 Lev. 140; Jerv. 65).

One coroner is answerable, civilly, for the acts of his co-coroner. (Naylor v. Sharply, 1 Mod. 193; 2 Mod. 23, S. C.). But no criminal responsibility can attach upon one who is constructively only a participator in the abuse; and therefore where one coroner gave to another a general authority to act in his name, it was held that he was not responsible, criminally, for an abuse of that authority, committed without his concurrence or participation. (Lord Coningsby v. Steed, 8 Mod. 193; see R. v. Huggins, Ld. Raym. 1574; 2 Stra. 882, S. C.; Staundf. 53 a; 2 Hale, 59).

Offence of coroner.

No action lies against a coroner for any act done by him when acting judicially and within the scope of his jurisdiction. (Garnett v. Ferrand, 6 B. & C. 611; 9 D. & R. 657; Floyd v. Barker, 12 Rep. 14; Lutw. 195, 1560; Groenvelt v. Burwell, 1 Ld. Raym. 454; Hamond v. Howell, 1 Mod. 184; 2 Mod. 218, S. C.).

Action against for acts done.

The office of coroners for the county of Durham is regulated by the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 64.

"And whereas in divers cities, towns and boroughs, the common lands and public stock of such cities, towns and boroughs, and the rents and profits thereof, have been held and applied for the particular benefit of the citizens, freemen and burgesses of the said cities, towns and boroughs respectively, or of certain of them, or of the widows or kindred of them, or certain of them, and have not been applied to public purposes: be it therefore enacted, that every person who now is or hereafter may be an inhabitant of any borough, and also every person who has been admitted or who might hereafter have been admitted a freeman or burgess of any borough if this act had not been passed, or who now is or hereafter may be the wife or widow or son or daughter of any freeman or burgess, or who may have espoused or may hereafter espouse the daughter or widow of any freeman or burgess, or who has been or may hereafter be bound an apprentice, shall have and enjoy and be entitled to acquire and enjoy the same share and benefit of the lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and of the rents and profits thereof, and of the common lands and public stock of any borough or body corporate, and of any lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and any sum or sums of money, chattels, securities for money or other personal estate, of which any person or any body corporate may be seised or possessed in whole or in part for any charitable uses or trusts, as fully and effectually, and for such time and in such manner, as he or she by any statute, charter, bye-law or custom in force at the time of passing this act might or could have had, acquired, or enjoyed, in case this act had not been passed: provided always, that the total amount

Boundaries of certain boroughs to be those settled by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64.

7. "After the passing of this act the metes and bounds of the several boroughs named in the first section of the said schedules (A.) and (B.) for the purposes of this act shall be the same as the limits thereof respectively settled and described in an act passed in the second and third year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled 'An Act to settle and describe the Divisions of Counties and the Limits of Cities and Boroughs in England and Wales, so far as respects the Election of Members to serve in Parliament;' and the metes and bounds of the several boroughs named in the second section of the schedules for the purposes of this act shall be and remain as the same are now taken to be, until such time as Parliament shall otherwise direct: provided nevertheless, that notwithstanding anything herein contained, no parish or place, or part of any parish or place, which is detached from the main part of such borough or county of a city or town corporate, shall, after the passing of this act, be included within any such borough or county; and, subject to this provision, the metes and bounds of every such borough and county shall include the whole of the liberties of such borough or county by land and by water as the same now are or are taken to be."

Included within the bounds of a borough to be part of such borough. Parts cut off from the borough to be declared part of adjoining county.

9. "Every male person of full age who on the last day of August in any year shall have occupied any house, warehouse, counting-house or shop within any borough during that year and the whole of each of the two preceding years, and also during the time of such occupation shall have been an inhabitant householder within the said borough, or within seven miles of the said borough, shall, if duly enrolled in that year according to the provisions hereinafter contained, be a burgess of such borough and member of the body corporate of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of such borough: provided always, that no such person shall be so enrolled in any year, unless he shall have been rated in respect of such premises so occupied by him within the borough to all rates made for the relief of the poor of the parish wherein such premises are Occupiers of houses and shops rated for three years to the relief of the poor, entitled to be burgesses, if resident householders within seven miles (a).

(a) See 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, ss. 8, 9, post, p. 125. A person rated for the whole of a house, which he occupies with the exception of one room underlet by the week, has a sufficient occupation to entitle him to be on the burgess roll under this section. So, also, where one house adjoined another, both being under the same roof, and having a common entrance passage into which the outer door of each opened, and a common staircase leading to the bed-rooms, each house is distinct, and may be the subject of a sufficient occupation to qualify a party to be on the roll.

But where a person let a cellar under the house for which he was rated to a person who occupied it as a warehouse, and was rated for it, there being an internal communication between the house and cellar, the occupier of the house is not qualified to be on the burgess roll. But the occupier of a house, who had assigned all his stock in trade and book debts to a creditor, is nevertheless qualified to be on the burgess

10. "No medical or surgical assistance given by the charitable trustees of any borough shall be taken to be such charitable allowance as shall disqualify any person from being enrolled a burgess as aforesaid, nor shall any person be so disqualified by reason that any child of such person shall have been admitted and taught within any public or endowed school."

11. "In every borough it shall be lawful for any person occupying any house, warehouse, counting-house or shop to claim to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such premises, whether the landlord shall or shall not be liable to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect thereof; and upon such occupier so claiming and actually paying or tendering the full amount of the last made rate then payable in respect of such premises, the overseers of the parish in which such premises are situate are hereby required to put the name of such occupier roll. (Reg. v. Eye, Mayor of, 2 Per. & D. 348; 9 Ad. & E. 670).

(a) The payment of rates required by this section, in order to qualify a person to be enrolled as a burgess, must be a bonâ fide payment by such person himself; and a payment by and at the expense of a third party, though by the authority and with the knowledge of such person, is not sufficient. (Reg. v. Bridgnorth, Mayor of, 2 Per. & D. 317; 10 Ad. & El. 66). By a local act for paving and lighting the streets &c., all houses &c., situated in the city and county of the city of Lichfield and within half a mile from any public street in the city, were to be deemed in the city. The bounds of the borough extended beyond these limits, and persons occupying beyond this distance were placed on the burgess roll. The town council had not extended the provisions of the local act to other parts of the borough as empowered by sect. 87, and they proceeded to make and levy certain rates under the local act, in which a person claiming to be put on the burgess roll was duly rated for three years, but had refused to pay. The court held, that these were not rates, the non-payment of which disqualified the party from having his name retained on the burgess roll, not being poor-rates, or borough rates levied under sect. 92. (Reg. v. Lichfield, Mayor of, 11 L. J. R., (N. S.), Q. B. 122).

(b) In the city of Lichfield there was a certain charitable institution, arising from estates granted for charitable purposes, the annual income of which was disposed of "to poor housekeepers of the city not receiving parochial relief from any parish in the city:"—Held, that receipt of relief from this charity did not disqualify a party from having his name retained on the burgess list, on the ground that he had received "parochial relief or other alms from a fund intrusted to the charitable trustees of the borough," and that the words "other alms" in this section must be read as if they were "other parochial alms." (Reg. v. Lichfield, Mayor of, 11 L. J. R., (N. S.), Q. B. 122. (See Lewis v. Hammond, 2 B. & Ald. 206; and Reg. v. The Inhabitants of Halesworth, 3 B. & Ad. 724).

upon the rate for the time being; and in case such overseer shall neglect or refuse so to do, such occupier shall nevertheless, for the purposes of this act, be deemed to have been rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such premises, from the period at which the rate shall have been made in respect of which he shall have so claimed to be rated as aforesaid: provided always, that where by virtue of any act of Parliament the landlord shall be liable to the payment of the rate for the relief of the poor in respect of any premises occupied by his tenant, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to vary or discharge the liability of such landlord, but in case the tenant who shall have been rated for such premises in consequence of any such claim as aforesaid shall make default in the payment of the poor's rate payable in respect thereof, such landlord shall be and remain liable for the payment thereof in the same manner as if he alone had been rated in respect of the premises so occupied by his tenant."

In case of titles by descent, &c. how the occupation is to be reckoned.

12. "Where any house, warehouse, counting-house or shop in any borough shall come to any person by descent, marriage, marriage settlement, devise or promotion to any benefice or office, such person shall be entitled to reckon the occupancy and rating, in respect of the occupancy thereof by the person from or by whom such house, warehouse, counting-house or shop shall have so come to him, as his own occupancy and rating conjointly with the time during which he shall have since occupied and been rated for the same, and shall be entitled to be enrolled a burgess in respect of such successive occupancy and rating, provided he shall be otherwise qualified as herein provided."

No new burgesses to be admitted who are not qualified under the act.

13. "After the passing of this act no person shall be enrolled a burgess of any borough for the purpose of enjoying the rights conferred for the first time by this act, in respect of any title other than by occupancy and payment of rates within such borough, according to the meaning and provisions of this act."

Exclusive rights of trading abolished.

14. "And whereas in divers cities, towns and boroughs a certain custom hath prevailed, and certain bye-laws have been made, that no person, not being free of a city, town or borough, or of certain guilds, mysteries or trading companies within the same, or some or one of them, shall keep any shop or place for putting to show or sale any or certain wares or merchandize by way of retail or otherwise, or use any or certain trades, occupations, mysteries or handicrafts for hire, gain or sale within the same: be it enacted, that, notwithstanding any such custom or bye-law, every person in any borough may keep any shop for the sale of all lawful wares and merchandizes by wholesale or retail, and use every lawful trade, occupation, mystery and handicraft, for hire, gain, sale or otherwise, within any borough."

Overseers to make lists of all persons entitled to be burgesses in their respective parishes (a).

15. "On the 5th day of September in every year, the overseers of the poor of every parish wholly or in part within any borough, shall make out an alphabetical list, to be called 'The Burgess List,' according to the form No. 1, in the schedule (D.) to this act annexed, of all persons who shall be entitled to be enrolled in the burgess roll of that year,

(a) Where the overseers of several parishes in a borough omitted to make out the burgess list required by this section, so that at the Revision Court of the mayor there was no list in which the name of a claimant for that parish could be inserted: — Held, that this intermediate defect in his title to be on the general burgess roll, which is made up of the several parish lists, did not preclude the court from issuing a mandamus for the insertion of his name under 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 24, post. The mere omission, whether wilful or not, to sign the burgess list required to be made out under this section, subjects an overseer to the penalty under sect. 48; and where a declaration in debt against an overseer for such a penalty, stated that it was the duty of the defendant, and of the other overseers of the parish, to make out and sign the burgess list; that the defend-

As to boroughs in which there is no town clerk.

16. Provided always, "that in any borough in which there shall be no town clerk, or in which the town clerk shall be dead or incapable of acting, all matters by this act required to be done by and with regard to the town clerk, shall be done by and with regard to the person executing duties in such borough similar to those of town clerk, and if there be no such person, or if such person shall be dead or incapable of acting, then by and with regard to such fit person as the mayor of such borough shall appoint in that behalf: provided always, that every precinct or place, whether extra-parochial or otherwise, which shall have no overseers, shall, for the purpose of making out such lists as aforesaid, be deemed within the parish adjoining thereto, such parish being wholly or in part situate within the same borough as such precinct or place; and if such precinct or place shall adjoin two or more parishes so situate as aforesaid, it shall be deemed to be within the least populous of such parishes, according to the last census for the time being; and the overant, as such overseer, ought to have signed, but that the defendant did not make out and sign such list. Plea, not guilty "by statute." On motion in arrest of judgment, on the ground that signature by the majority of overseers would be sufficient, as being virtually the signature of all, and ought therefore to have been negatived by the declaration:—Held, that the defect, if any, was cured by the verdict, because, if the signature of the majority would have been the signature of all, it had been negatived by the verdict, which found that the defendant had not signed. The signature of the overseer should be at the bottom of the list.

Semble, per Patteson, J., that all the overseers must sign the burgess list; and that where the parish consists of several divisions, and has an overseer acting separately for each division, the statute is not satisfied by each overseer signing a separate list for his own division only, but there should be one list for the whole parish. Before the commencement of such an action, no previous notice of action under s. 133 need be given by the plaintiff. (King v. Burrell, 4 Per. & D. 207; 12 A. & E. 460).

The provisions of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, as to the machinery for the formation and revision of the burgess lists, being applicable only to then existing corporations, and to the particular period at which that act took effect, need not be precisely followed in the case of new corporations, created by charter under the powers conferred on the crown by the 1 Vict. c 78, s. 49 (post), but may be followed cy-près. Therefore, the appointment in such charter of individuals named therein, to make out and revise the lists, and to act as returning officer at the first election under such charter, is good; so also, days for holding the first elections, though not agreeing with those named for the elections in the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, may be appointed by such charter.

Nor is such charter void, because it directs the person appointed to make out the first list, to include in it only "all inhabitant householders within the borough, who shall possess the qualifications required by the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, instead of including also all persons occupying shops, &c., within the borough, and being inhabitant householders residing within seven miles thereof, according to the schedule to that act. Persons omitted from overseers' lists to give notice to town clerk.

17. Affirmation may be substituted for oath.

21. "Every person authorized by law to make an affirmation instead of taking an oath shall make such affirmation in every case in which by this act an oath is required to be taken; and if any person taking any oath required by this act, or making any affirmation instead of taking such oath, shall wilfully swear or affirm falsely, such person shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished accordingly."

Elections to be held before mayor and assessors.

32. "Every election of councillors within any borough according to the provisions of this act shall be held before the mayor and assessors for the time being of such borough, except as herein is excepted; and the voting at every such election shall commence at nine o'clock in the forenoon, and shall finally close at four o'clock in the afternoon of the same day, and shall be conducted in manner following; (that is to say), every burgess entitled to vote in the election of councillors, may vote for any number of persons, not exceeding the number of councillors then to be chosen, by delivering to the mayor and assessors, or other presiding officer as hereinafter mentioned, a voting paper, containing the Christian names and surnames of the persons for whom he votes, with their respective places of abode and descriptions, such paper being previously signed with the name of the burgess voting, and with the name of the street, lane, or other place in which the property for which he appears to be rated on the burgess roll is situated."

Mode of voting

Polling booths to be provided.

33. "At every election in any borough, the mayor, if it shall appear to him expedient for taking the poll at such election, may cause booths to be erected or rooms to be hired and used as such booths for different parts of such borough, which may be situated either in one place or in several places, and shall be so divided and allotted into compartments as to the mayor shall seem most convenient; and the mayor shall appoint a clerk to take the poll at each compartment, and shall cause to be affixed on the most conspicuous part of each of the said booths the names of the parts for which such booth is respectively allotted; and no person shall be admitted to vote at any such election except at the booth allotted for the part wherein the house, warehouse, counting-house, or shop occupied by him as described in the burgess roll may be; but in case no booth shall happen to be provided for any particular part as aforesaid, the votes of the persons voting in respect of property situate in any part so omitted may be taken at any of the said booths; and public notice of the situation, division, and allotments of the different booths shall be given two days before the commencement of the poll by the mayor; and in case the booths shall be situated in different places the mayor may appoint a deputy to preside at each place: provided also, that no election shall be holden under this act in any borough in any church, chapel, or other place of public worship."

No inquiry of the voter except as to his identity, and whether he has voted before at the same election.

34. "No inquiry shall be permitted at any election as to the right of any person to vote as a burgess in any borough, except only as follows; (that is to say) that the mayor or other presiding officer shall, if required by any two burgesses entitled to vote in the same borough, put to any voter at the time of his delivering in his voting paper, and not afterwards, the following questions, or any of them, and no other:—

Forms of questions as to these points.

1. Are you the person whose name is signed as A. B. to the voting paper now delivered in by you?

(a) See 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 10, post, 125.

2. Are you the person whose name appears as A. B, on the burgess roll now in force for this borough, being registered therein as rated for property described to be situated in [here specify the street &c. as described in the burgess roll] ?
3. Have you already voted at the present election ?

And no person required to answer any of the said questions shall be permitted or qualified to vote until he shall have answered the same; and if any person shall wilfully make a false answer to any of the questions aforesaid, he shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and may be indicted and punished accordingly" (a).

Result of election how to be declared (b).

35. "The mayor and assessors shall examine the voting papers so delivered as aforesaid, for the purpose of ascertaining which of the several persons voted for are elected, and so many of such persons, being equal to the number of persons then to be chosen as shall have the greatest number of votes, shall be deemed to be elected; and in case of an equality in the number of votes for any two or more persons, the mayor and assessors, or any two of them, shall name from amongst those persons for whom the number of votes shall be equal, so many as shall be necessary to complete the requisite number of persons to be chosen; and the mayor shall cause the voting papers to be kept in the office of the town clerk during six calendar months at the least after every such election (c); and the town clerk shall permit any burgess to inspect the voting papers of any year, on payment of one shilling for every search (d), and the mayor shall publish a list of the names of the persons so elected not later than two of the clock in the afternoon of the day next but one following the day of such election, unless such day be Sunday, and then on the Monday following."

(b) After the result of the election has been duly declared under this section, and the name of P. included in the list of town councillors duly published in pursuance of that section, the aldermen and assessors cannot, on the subsequent discovery of a supposed error in counting the legal votes, publish a second list at a later hour on the same day omitting the name of P. and substituting that of R. P., on making the proper declarations, is in de facto, and a mandamus will lie to the mayor, &c., to receive and count his vote; leaving the other party to contest the validity of the election by quo warranto. (Reg. v. Leeds, Mayor of, 11 Ad. & E. 512: Reg. v. Derby, Councillors of, 2 N. & P. 589).

(c) The voting papers given in at the election of councillors under the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, which, by section 35, the mayor is to cause to be kept in the town clerk's office for six months after the election, are not such public documents as to prove themselves on production from the proper custody. Where, therefore, such papers having been handed over by the mayor to the town clerk were by his clerk delivered over to the clerk of the succeeding town clerk, who produced them at the trial, it was held that the former town clerk also should have been called to prove that the papers transmitted by him were the same which he had received from the mayor. (Reg v. Ledgard, 3 Nev. & Per. 513; 8 Ad. & E. 535).

The court will not order a town clerk, against whom a criminal information has been filed for misconduct in his office relating to an election of councillors of the borough, to produce the election papers which are in his official custody, in order that they may be impounded, to be forthcoming at the trial as evidence against him; though it is suggested, that the six months during which the clerk is required to keep the papers will expire before the trial. (Rex v. Nicholetts, 5 Ad. & E. 376).

(d) The town clerk is not compellable under this clause to allow two burgesses at once to inspect the voting papers deposited with him after an election of town councillors, or to give more than one of the papers to one person at the same time, but he is bound to allow any burgess who brings a list of his own to compare it with the papers produced by the town clerk, and mark it according to what he finds there. (Rex v. Arnold, 4 Ad. & E. 657).

An alderman to be chosen to preside at election in case of the death or inability of the mayor.

36. "If the mayor of any borough shall, at the time when it shall be necessary to execute the powers and duties herein provided with respect to elections, be dead, absent, or otherwise incapable of acting, the council of such borough shall forthwith elect one of the aldermen to execute all such powers and duties in the place of the mayor: provided that in the first election of councillors, and of auditors and assessors, as hereinafter provided, the mayor alone shall act with all the powers and duties hereinbefore enacted concerning the mayor and assessors jointly in such elections."

Election of auditors and assessors.

37. "On the 1st day of March, in the year 1836, and in every succeeding year, the burgesses of every borough shall elect from the persons qualified to be councillors by a majority of votes, two burgesses, who shall be and be called auditors of such borough, and two burgesses, who shall be and be called assessors of such borough: and every such auditor and assessor shall continue in office until the 1st day of March in the year following his election; and the election of such auditors and assessors respectively shall be in form and manner hereinbefore provided for the election of councillors: provided nevertheless, that in every such election of auditors or assessors no burgess shall vote for more than one person to be an auditor or assessor: provided also, that no burgess shall be eligible to be or be elected such auditor or assessor as aforesaid who shall be of the council, or the town clerk or treasurer of such borough." (See 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 15, post, 126).

Existing mayors and councillors to go out of office on election of councillors under this act.

38. "After the declaration of the first election of the councillors under the provisions of this act in any borough, the mayor, aldermen, and common councilmen, and all other members of the common council or governing body of the body corporate named in conjunction with such borough in the said Schedules (A.) and (B.), by whatever name or style they may be known or called, then in office, shall go out of office, and their whole powers and duties shall cease: provided, nevertheless, that any of the persons so going out of office shall be eligible to be elected and appointed under the provisions of this act: provided also, that such persons as are justices of the peace in any borough at the time of passing this act shall continue to have and exercise all the powers which at the time of passing this act they have as justices of the peace, until the 1st day of May in the year 1836, and no longer: provided also, that in every borough in which, by statute, charter, bye-law, or custom, any election is appointed to be holden between the day of the passing of this act, and the 1st day of May next, both inclusive, no such election shall be holden, but every person holding office in any borough on the day of the passing of this act shall continue to hold such office, and to have all the powers, and be subject to all the duties, and be entitled to the same salary and fees of such office, as he would have had and been if elected to such office between the day of the passing of this act and the said 1st day of May until the time provided by this act for him to go out of office; any statute, charter, bye-law or custom notwithstanding."

Where boroughs are to be divided into wards, the bounds of the wards to be determined by the barristers appointed to revise the lists.

39. "And whereas it is expedient that certain boroughs of large population should be divided into wards before any election of councillors for such boroughs should take place: be it therefore enacted, that every borough in the said Schedule (A.) shall be divided into the number of wards mentioned in such Schedule in conjunction with the name of such borough; and that it shall be lawful for the barrister or barristers appointed in pursuance of the provisions hereinbefore contained to revise the burgess and councillors' lists of any borough in the present year, and he or they is and are hereby required, within the space of six weeks next after the passing of this act, to determine and set out the extent, limits, and boundary lines of such wards, and what portions of such borough shall be included therein respectively; and the copy of the particulars of such division shall be forthwith transmitted to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, and if his Majesty, by advice of his privy council, shall approve such determination, shall be published in the London Gazette, and another copy of such particulars shall be delivered to the town clerk of such borough, to be by him safely kept among the public documents of such borough; and every such borough shall after such publication as aforesaid be deemed to be divided into such wards as shall be so determined and set out as aforesaid, and such division shall continue and be in force until the same shall be altered by authority of Parliament: provided always, that if his Majesty, by advice of his privy council, shall not approve such determination, such publication as aforesaid shall nevertheless be made, and such division be in force for the purpose of any election under the provisions of this act, and until such time as his Majesty shall, by advice of his privy council, upon further information and report from such barristers, definitively approve the division of such borough into wards, in manner hereinbefore mentioned."

Number of councillors for each ward to be assigned by the barristers according to certain rules.

40. "The said barrister or barristers shall, after the division of the borough into such number of wards as is directed by this act, apportion among the several wards of such borough the number of councillors mentioned in conjunction with the name of such borough in the said Schedule (A.); and in assigning the number of councillors to each ward the said barrister or barristers shall, as far as in his or their judgment he or they may deem it to be practicable, have regard as well to the number of persons rated to the relief of the poor in such ward as to the aggregate amount of the sums at which all the said persons shall be so rated: provided always, that the number of councillors assigned to each ward shall be a number divisible by three; and a copy of the particulars of the number of councillors so assigned to the several wards of the borough shall be forthwith transmitted to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, and, subject as aforesaid to the approval of his Majesty, by the advice of his privy council, shall be published in the London Gazette, and another copy of such particulars shall be delivered to the town clerk of the borough, to be by him safely kept among the public documents of such borough; and the number of councillors so assigned to each ward of such borough shall, after such publication as aforesaid, be the number to be elected in such ward, and shall so continue until the same shall be altered by authority of Parliament: provided always, that if his Majesty, by the advice of his privy council, shall not approve the number of councillors so assigned to each ward, such publication shall nevertheless be made, and the number of councillors so assigned to each ward of such borough by such barrister shall be the number to be elected in such ward at any election of councillors under this act, until such time as his Majesty shall, by advice of his privy council, upon further information and report from such barrister, definitively approve such assignment in manner hereinbefore mentioned."

Apportionment of councillors for each ward in which the ancient division is adhered to.

41. "And whereas it may be convenient in divers boroughs to adhere in the division of the same into wards to the ancient division thereof into parishes or into districts under any local act, or to adapt such division to local circumstances, and such division so made might render difficult such apportionment of councillors as is hereinbefore directed; be it therefore enacted, that in every such case the said barrister or barristers shall be empowered, at his or their discretion, subject as aforesaid to the approval of his Majesty, by the advice of his privy council, to divide any borough in conjunction with the name of which, in the said Schedule (A.), shall be mentioned any number of wards greater than two, into any number of wards more or less by one than the number of wards mentioned in conjunction with the name of such borough in the said schedule."

Power to examine rate books.

any borough to be divided into wards, to produce such book before, and allow the same to be inspected by the said barrister or barristers; and the said barrister or barristers shall have power to administer an oath to the overseers and to all other persons, who are hereby required to answer upon oath all such questions as the said barrister or barristers may put to them, or any of them, touching any matter which the said barrister or barristers may deem necessary for enabling them to execute the duties by this act imposed upon them."

Councillors and assessors to be elected in wards by the burgesses of such wards.

43. "In every case in which there shall be a division into wards of any borough, the burgesses of every such ward, and none others, shall on the day fixed for the first election of councillors separately elect from the persons qualified to be councillors the whole number of councillors assigned to such ward respectively, and on the 1st day of November in any subsequent year shall separately elect from the persons qualified to be councillors one third part of the whole number of councillors assigned to such ward, and on the 1st day of March next after the first election of councillors in such ward, and in every subsequent year, shall separately elect from the persons qualified to be councillors two assessors for such ward; and every such ward election first after such division into wards of any such borough shall be held before the mayor, or the person whom the mayor for the time being shall appoint in that behalf, and in every succeeding year shall be held before the alderman (a) whom the councillors chosen in such ward shall yearly appoint in that behalf, and before the two assessors of such ward; and the assessors who shall hold the court for revising the burgess lists with the mayor shall be the assessors of the mayor's ward (b), and the votings and other proceedings in all other respects at such ward elections shall be conducted in the same manner as at elections of councillors or assessors respectively by the burgesses of the whole borough, and the alderman and assessors of each ward shall have the same powers in regard to elections in their ward as the mayor and assessors for the whole borough if not divided into wards; and every person so elected a councillor or assessor in such ward shall hold his office for the same time that he would have held it if he had been elected by the burgesses of the whole borough, and if the number elected in such ward had been the whole number for the borough."

Burgesses to vote in the ward in which their property is situated.

44. "Every burgess of any borough shall be entitled to vote in the election of the councillors and assessors to be chosen within that ward in which the property of such burgess for which he appears to be rated on the burgess roll for the time being of such borough shall appear to be situated, and not otherwise; and if any burgess shall be rated in respect of distinct premises in two or more wards, then he shall be entitled to be enrolled and to vote in such one of the said wards as he shall select, but not in more than one."

Lists of the burgesses in each ward to be made out yearly.

45. "For the purpose of better ascertaining who are the burgesses of any such ward, the burgess roll of every borough so divided into wards, shall thenceforward be made out by or under the direction of the town clerk, in alphabetical lists of the burgesses in each ward, to be called 'Ward Lists.'"

Manner of proceeding if any person is elected a councillor in more than one ward

46. "If at any election of councillors or assessors for any borough any person shall be elected a councillor or assessor in more than one of the wards of such borough, he shall within three days after notice thereof choose, or on his default the mayor shall declare for which one of the said wards such councillor or assessor shall serve, and such person shall thereupon be held to be elected in that ward only which he shall so choose, or which the mayor shall so declare."

(a) As to election of aldermen see 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 14, post, 124.

(b) See this section in part repealed by 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 4, post, 124.

Occasional vacancies of councillor, auditor, or assessor, to be filled up by fresh election (a).

47. "If any extraordinary vacancy shall be occasioned in the office of councillor, auditor, or assessor for any borough, the burgesses entitled to vote shall, on a day to be fixed by the mayor of such borough, or in the case of a councillor or assessor, where the borough shall have been divided into wards, by the alderman of the ward in which the vacancy has happened, (such day not to be later than ten days after such vacancy), elect from the persons qualified to be councillors another burgess to supply such vacancy; and such election shall be held, and the voting and other proceedings, in case of a contest, shall be conducted in the same manner, and subject to the same provisions as are hereinbefore enacted with respect to the election of councillors as aforesaid; and every person so elected shall hold such office until the time at which the person in room of whom he was chosen would regularly have gone out of office, and he shall then go out of office, but shall be capable of immediate re-election if then qualified as herein provided: provided always, that after the full number to be regularly elected of the councillors in any year shall have declared their acceptance of office, no new election of councillors shall be made by reason of such extraordinary vacancy, unless the number of councillors remaining after such vacancy shall not exceed two thirds of the whole number of the council of such borough."

Penalties on mayor, overseers, &c. neglecting to comply with provisions of this act (b).

48. "If any mayor, alderman, or assessor of any borough, who shall be in office at the time herein appointed for the revision by them of the burgess list under this act, or for any election of councillors, assessors, or auditors, which he is required to conduct or declare, shall neglect or refuse to revise such burgess list, or to conduct or declare such election as aforesaid, every such mayor, alderman, and assessor shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds; and if any overseer of any parish wholly or in part within any borough shall neglect or refuse to make out, sign, and deliver such list as aforesaid, or if the town clerk of any borough shall neglect or refuse to receive, print, and publish such lists as aforesaid, or if any such overseer or town clerk shall refuse to allow any such lists to be perused by any person having right thereunto, every such overseer and town clerk respectively for every such offence shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds; and the said penalties hereby in such case imposed shall be recovered, with full costs of suit, by any person who will sue for the same within three calendar months after the commission of such offence, by action of debt or on the case, in any of his Majesty's superior courts of record; and the money so to be recovered shall, after payment of the costs and expenses attending the recovery thereof, be paid and apportioned as follows; (that is to say), one moiety thereof to the person so suing, and the other moiety thereof to the treasurer, to be appointed by virtue of this act, to be by him applied in aid of the borough fund hereinafter mentioned."

Council to elect the mayor every year from the councillors

49. "On the ninth day of November in every year the council of the borough shall elect out of the aldermen or councillors of such borough a fit person to be the mayor of such borough, who shall continue in his office for one whole year; and in case a vacancy shall be occasioned in the office of mayor of the borough during such year by reason of any person who shall have been elected to such office not accepting the same, or by reason of his dying or ceasing to hold the said office, the council of the borough shall, within ten days after such vacancy, elect out of the aldermen or councillors of the said borough another fit person to be the mayor thereof for the remainder of the then current year."

(a) See the provisions of this section in part repealed, and further enactments as to the supplying of vacancies, 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, ss 11, 12, 13, post, 125.

(b) See ante, 63, n. (a), as to the recovery of penalties under this section. An overseer who neglects to make out a burgess list, is only liable for one penalty under this section, and cannot be sued for a second penalty for refusing a perusal of the same burgess list. (Gregory v. Fell, 6 Jur. 422, Exch.) But each overseer who neglects to sign the burgess list incurs the penalty; and all the overseers of a parish divided into districts must sign the list for that parish. (King v. Share, 11 L. J. R. (N. S.) Q. B. 163; and see King v Burrell, ante, p. 64).

As to the manner of conducting the election of mayor, aldermen, and councillors, according to the directions contained in the preceding sections, the following cases have been decided :—

The quarterly meeting appointed (s. 69) to be held at noon on the 9th of November, ought to be the first, if not the only meeting of the council on that day, and the first act to be done ought to be the election of a mayor.

If new aldermen be elected, either at such quarterly meeting or at an earlier meeting held on the same day, but before the election of the mayor, such election of aldermen is void.

Sect. 25 does not prevent the outgoing aldermen from voting in the election of mayor, although the candidate for whom they vote be an alderman. Also, the person elected may be an outgoing alderman: and if he afterwards preside at the election of aldermen, he may at such election (under the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 14, post) give a casting vote, but not an original vote; for the mayor's right to vote in the first instance under 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 69, is restricted by the 25th section of that act, when the mayor is an outgoing alderman. (Reg. v. M'Gowan, Dudley, Maddy, and Stanley, 11 Ad. & E. 869).

An election of alderman by lists, where each elector has the opportunity of objecting to any of the lists proposed, or of proposing and voting for any other candidate, is good. (Reg. v. Brightwell, 2 Per. & D. 413; 10 Ad. & E. 171).

No person is eligible to the office of alderman, unless his name appears on the burgess roll in force for the current municipal year during which he is elected. (Reg. v. Hervey, 2 B. T. Vac. 1842).

The returning officer, at an election of councillors, has merely the ministerial duty to perform of returning the candidates who have the actual majority of votes, without reference to their possessing or not, in his judgment, the proper qualification: and where, to a quo warranto for exercising the office of councillor, the defendant pleaded that he was duly elected, and issue was joined thereon, it was held sufficient for the relator to prove at the trial that other candidates had the actual majority, without proving their qualification. (Reg. v. Ledgard, 3 Nev. & P. 513; 8 Ad. & E. 535).

The votes given at a municipal election for a candidate rendered ineligible by the express words of an act of Parliament, in consequence of his holding another office in the same corporation, are not thrown away unless express notice of the ineligibility has been given to the voters. And, therefore, at an annual election of councillors in one of the wards of a borough divided into two wards, a majority of votes was declared in favour of a candidate who was an assessor for the other ward. No notice of the ineligibility of this candidate had been given, but the mayor rejected his name from the list published by him pursuant to section 35, and inserted the name of a candidate having a minority of votes, who accepted the office. The court granted a quo warranto against the latter candidate. (Reg. v. Hiorns, 3 Nev. & P. 48; 7 Ad. & El. 963).

A councillor of Lichfield having been absent from the borough for more than six months, the town council, in October, declared his place vacant according to the provisions of sect. 52, and appointed the following 1st of November for the election of a councillor in his stead. On the same 1st of November three other councillors, whose triennial period of service had expired, went out of office, and the election to fill up the four vacant places was held on the same day. No distinction was made either in the proclamation of the lists of candidates or in the voting papers, between the candidates for the extraordinary vacancy occasioned by absence, and the candidates for the ordinary vacancies, so that it could not be discovered who was elected to fill the former place as distinguished from the latter. The court held an election conducted in this manner clearly irregular. (Reg. v. Rawley, Q. B., E. T., May 6, 1842).

Mayor, aldermen, and councillors, auditors, and assessors, not to act until they have made a declaration of acceptance of office.

Sect. 50. "No person elected a mayor, alderman, or councillor, or auditor or assessor, for any borough, shall be capable of acting as such, except in administering the declaration hereinafter contained, until he shall have made and subscribed before any two or more such aldermen or councillors (who are hereby respectively authorized and required to administer the same to each other) a declaration in the words or to the effect following; (that is to say),

I, A. B, having been elected mayor [or "alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor"] for the borough of , do hereby declare, that I take the said office upon myself, and will duly and faithfully fulfil the duties thereof according to the best of my judgment and ability; [and in the case of the party being qualified by estate say], and I do hereby declare that I am seised or possessed of real or personal estate [or both, as the case may be] to the amount of one thousand pounds [or "five hundred pounds," as the case may require], over and above what will satisfy all my debts.

Aldermen, if required, to make a declaration of qualification once in three years (a).

"And that every alderman who shall have made and subscribed the foregoing declaration in respect of estate shall once in every period of three years, if required in writing so to do by any two members of the council, make and subscribe a declaration that he is qualified to the same amount in real or personal estate, or both, as the case may then be, as the amount mentioned in the declaration originally made and subscribed by him: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to dispense with the obligation of any person to make and subscribe the declaration provided and enjoined by an act made in the ninth year of his late Majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for repealing so much of several Acts as imposes the necessity of receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a Qualification for certain Offices and Employments.'" See "Oaths," Vol. V., and "Office and Officers," (ib.)

9 Geo. 4, c. 17 (c).

Every burgess elected to the office of alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor, and every councillor elected to the office of mayor, shall accept the office or pay a fine to the borough fund (b).

51. "Every person duly qualified who shall be elected to the office of alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor, and every councillor who shall be elected to the office of mayor for any borough, shall accept such office to which he shall have been elected, or shall in lieu thereof pay to the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of such borough such fine not exceeding fifty pounds in case of aldermen, councillors, auditors, or as-

I, A. B., being one of the people called Quakers, (or one of the persuasion of the people called Quakers, or of the united brethren called Moravians, or of the denomination called Separatists, as the case may be), having conscientious scruples against subscribing the declaration contained in an act passed in the ninth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled "An Act for repealing so much of several Acts as imposes the necessity of receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper as a Qualification for certain Offices and Employments," do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm that I will not exercise any power or authority or influence which I may possess by virtue of the office of to injure or weaken the Protestant Church as it is by law established in England, nor to disturb the said church, or the bishops and clergy of the said church, in the possession of any rights or privileges to which such church or the said bishops and clergy may be by law entitled.

sessors, and such fine not exceeding one hundred pounds in case of mayor, as the council of such borough by a bye-law to be made as hereinafter provided shall declare in that behalf; and such fine, if not duly paid, shall be levied by the warrant of any justice having jurisdiction within the borough, who is hereby required on the application of the council to issue the same, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person so refusing to accept office, with the reasonable charges of such distress; and every such person so elected shall accept such office by making and subscribing the declaration hereinbefore mentioned within five days after notice of his election, otherwise such person shall be liable to pay the said fine as for his non-acceptance of such office, and such office shall thereupon be deemed to be vacant, and shall be filled up by a fresh election, to be made in the manner hereinbefore mentioned: provided always, that no person disabled by lunacy or imbecility of mind, or by deafness, blindness, or other permanent infirmity of body, shall be liable to such fine as aforesaid; provided also, that every person so elected to any such office who shall be above the age of sixty-five years, or who shall have already served such office respectively, or paid the fine for not accepting such office respectively, within five years from the day on which he shall be so re-elected, shall be exempted from accepting or serving the same office if he shall claim such exemption within five days after notice of his election: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to compel the acceptance of any office or duty whatever in any borough by any military, naval, or marine officer in his Majesty's service on full pay, or by any officer or other person employed and residing within any of his Majesty's dockyards, victualling establishments, arsenals, or barracks."

Exemptions.

Any mayor, alderman or councillor, if he shall be declared bankrupt or insolvent, or absent himself from the borough, shall lose his office (a);

52. Provided always, "that if any person holding the office of mayor, alderman, or councillor for any borough shall be declared bankrupt, or shall apply to take the benefit of any act for the relief of insolvent debtors, or shall compound by deed with his creditors, or being mayor shall be absent for more than two calendar months, or being an alderman or councillor for more than six months at one and the same time, unless in case of illness, from the borough of which he shall be mayor, alderman, or councillor, then and in every such case such person shall thereupon immediately become disqualified and shall cease to hold the office of such mayor, alderman, or councillor as aforesaid, and in the case of such absence shall be liable to the same fine, to be recovered in the same manner as if he had refused to accept the said office; and the council thereupon shall forthwith declare the said office to be void, and shall signify the same by notice in writing under the hands of three or more of them, countersigned by the town clerk, to be affixed in some public place within the borough, and the said office shall thereupon become void; but every person so becoming disqualified and ceasing to hold such office on account of his being declared a bankrupt, or of his applying to take the benefit of any act for the relief of insolvent and the council shall thereupon declare the office void (b).

(a) A bankrupt uncertificated at the time of election is not disqualified from being elected a councillor. The disqualification exists only where the bankruptcy occurs during the holding of the office. (Rex v. Chitty, 1 Nev. & P. 78; 5 Ad. & E. 609).

(b) Previous to the annual election of councillors in November, in a borough divided into wards, the mayor published a notice, purporting to be made with the concurrence of the aldermen and assessors, to the effect that two vacancies were to be filled up, one in the room of A. B. going out by rotation, and one in the room of C. D., who had been declared a bankrupt. The council had not declared the office of C. D. to be void, or given any notice thereof. At the election, 250 burgesses voted for two candidates jointly, and 120 voted for a third singly:—Held, that the votes given for the two candidates were thrown away, and that the third candidate, to whom the 120 votes were given, was duly elected. debtors, or having compounded with his creditors as aforesaid, shall, on obtaining his certificate or on payment of his debts in full, be capable (if otherwise qualified) of being re-elected to such office; and every person becoming disqualified to hold such office on account of absence as aforesaid shall on his return to such borough be capable of being re-elected to such office, provided he shall then be otherwise qualified."

Penalty on persons not qualified, &c. acting as mayor, alderman, or councillor.

53. "If any person shall act as mayor, alderman, or councillor, or auditor or assessor, for any borough, without having made the declaration hereinbefore required in that behalf, or without being duly qualified at the time of making such declaration, or after he shall cease to be qualified according to the provisions of this act, or after he shall have become disqualified to hold any such office, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, such sum to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by any person who will sue for the same within three calendar months after the commission of such offence, by action of debt or on the case, in any of his Majesty's superior courts of record; and every person so sued by reason of not being so qualified in respect of estate shall prove that he was at the time of so acting qualified as aforesaid, or otherwise shall pay the said penalty, without any further evidence being given on the part of the plaintiff than that such person has acted as the mayor, or as alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor (as the case may be) of such borough: provided always, that it shall be lawful for any defendant, by judge's order to be obtained within fourteen days after he shall have been served with process in any such action, to require the plaintiff to give security for costs; and in such case all further proceedings in the said cause shall be stayed until the plaintiff shall give security to the satisfaction of the proper officer of the court for the costs of such action in case a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue such action, or if upon demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff; and the defendant shall in either of such cases recover his full costs as between attorney and client: provided also, that no such action shall be brought except by a burgess of such borough, nor unless the burgess bringing the same shall, within fourteen days after the commission of the offence, have served a notice in writing personally upon the party committing such offence of his intention to bring such action; and in case the plaintiff in any such action shall obtain a verdict, the money so to be recovered shall, after payment of the costs and expenses attending the recovery thereof, be paid and apportioned as follows; (that is to say), one moiety thereof to the person so suing, and the other moiety thereof to the treasurer to be appointed by virtue of this act, to be by him applied in aid of the borough fund: provided always, that all acts and proceedings of any person in possession of the office of mayor, alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor, and acting as a mayor, alderman, councillor, auditor, or assessor, shall, notwithstanding such disqualification or want of qualification, be as valid and effectual as if such person had been duly qualified."

Proviso.

Persons convicted of bribery disqualified from voting at any election in the borough (a).

54. "If any person who shall have or claim to have any right to vote in any election of mayor, or of a councillor, auditor, or assessor of any borough, shall, after the passing of this act, ask or take any money or other reward by way of gift, loan, or other device, or agree or contract for any money, gift, office, employment, or other reward whatsoever, to give or forbear to give his vote in any such election, or if any person, by himself or any person employed by him, shall, by any gift or reward, or by any promise, agreement, or security for any gift or reward, corrupt or procure, or offer to corrupt or procure, any person to give or forbear to give his vote in any such election, such person so offending in any of the cases aforesaid, shall, for every such offence, forfeit the Persons offending in any of the cases aforesaid discovering others so offending to be discharged from all penalties.

55. "If any person offending in any of the cases aforesaid shall, within the space of twelve months next after such election as aforesaid, discover any other person offending in any of the cases aforesaid, so that such other person be thereon convicted, such person so discovering, and not having been before that time convicted of any such offence, shall be indemnified and discharged from all penalties and disabilities which he shall then have incurred by any such offence."

No person liable to incapacity, penalty, &c unless prosecuted within two years.

56. "Provided always, that no person shall be made liable to any incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty by this act imposed, in any of the cases aforesaid, unless prosecution be commenced within two years after such incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty shall be incurred, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

The mayor to be a justice of the peace for the borough and returning officer at elections of members to serve in Parliament (a).

57. "The mayor for the time being of every borough shall be a justice of the peace of and for such borough, and shall continue to be such justice of the peace during the next succeeding year after he shall cease to be mayor, unless disqualified as aforesaid; and such mayor shall (during the time of his mayoralty) have precedence in all places within the borough, and in boroughs which return a member or members to serve in Parliament, other than the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and other than cities and towns which are counties of themselves, shall be the returning officer at all such elections; and in case the mayor shall, at the time when he shall be required to perform the duties of such returning officer, be dead, absent, or otherwise incapable of acting, or in case there shall be no mayor, the council of such borough shall forthwith elect one of the aldermen to be the returning officer for such borough in the place of the mayor being so dead, absent, or otherwise incapable: provided always, that in every case where there shall be more than one mayor within the boundaries of any borough, as the same are or shall at any future time be settled in so far as respects the election of members to serve in Parliament, the mayor of that borough to which the writ of election shall be directed shall be the returning officer."

Power to council to appoint town clerk, treasurer, and other officers (b).

58. "The council of every borough, on the 9th day of November in this present year, shall appoint a fit person, not being a member of the council, to be the town clerk of such borough, who shall hold his office during pleasure; and in any borough may be an attorney of one of his

(a) By the stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 47, (4 August, 1840), the enactment in the 9 Anne, c. 20, "that no person or persons who had been or should be in the annual office of mayor, bailiff, or other officer or officers to whom it belonged to preside at the election and make return of any member to serve in Parliament, for one whole year, should be capable to be chosen into the same office for the year immediately ensuing," &c. &c., is repealed; and it is further enacted, "that no person who shall before the passing of this act have been re-elected into any office by virtue of which it belongs to him to preside at any election, or make return of any member to serve in Parliament, shall be deemed to have been incapable of being chosen into such office, or be liable to have his right to exercise such office questioned, by reason of so much of the recited act as is hereby repealed. (s. 2.) (See Reg. v. Corporation of Pembroke, 8 Dowl. P. C. 302.)

Majesty's superior courts at Westminster, any law, statute, charter, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding; and the council of every borough shall in every year appoint another fit person, not being a member of the council, to be the treasurer of the borough, and also such other officers as have been usually appointed in such borough, or as they shall think necessary for enabling them to carry into execution the various powers and duties vested in them by virtue of this act, and may from time to time discontinue the appointment of such officers as shall appear to them not necessary to be re-appointed; and shall take such security for the due execution of his office by any such town clerk, treasurer, or other officer, as the said council shall think proper; and shall order to be paid to the mayor, and to the town clerk and treasurer, and to every such other officer to be employed as aforesaid, such salary or allowance as the said council shall think reasonable; and in case of a vacancy in any such office as aforesaid by death, resignation, removal, or otherwise, the council of such borough may appoint another fit person in the place of the person so making such vacancy; provided that the town clerk and treasurer shall not be the same person."

and to take security for the discharge of their official duties.

Salaries.

59. "The treasurer of any borough shall pay no money on account of the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of such borough, save only in such case as is provided by this act, or upon the order in writing of the council, signed by three or more members of the council, and countersigned by the town clerk of such borough, or by order of the court of sessions of the peace for the borough, or of a justice of the peace acting in and for the borough in the discharge of his judicial duty, in such case as is provided by this act, or in such case as a court of sessions of the peace for any county, or a justice of the peace acting in and for a county in the discharge of his judicial duty, may make an order for the payment of money on the treasurer of such county, or for the payment of the salaries granted to any recorder or police magistrate as hereinafter provided."

Treasurer to pay no money but by order of council.

60. "Every town clerk, treasurer, or other officer appointed by the council as aforesaid, shall, at such times during the continuance of his office, or within three months after the expiration of his office, and in such manner as the said council shall direct, deliver to the council, or to such person as they shall authorize for that purpose, a true account in writing of all matters committed to his charge by virtue of this act, and also of all monies which shall have been by him received by virtue or for the purposes of this act, and how much thereof shall have been paid and disbursed, and for what purposes, together with proper vouchers for such payments, and also of a list of the names of all such persons as shall not have paid the monies due from them for the purposes of this act, and of the amount due from each of them; and every such officer shall pay all such monies as shall remain due from him to the a valid appointment. (Rex v. Poole, 1 Jur. 942). Although a candidate for the office of town clerk might, before the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 104, s. 8, post, 138, have been disqualified as a candidate, by reason of his being unable to resign his office as a member of the town council, yet the mayor was bound at a contested election to put the question, whether he should or should not be elected. (Rex v. Shebbeare, 1 Jur. 7). The town clerk of a borough cannot maintain an action of debt against the corporation for fees in respect of the performance of duties imposed upon him by this act or by the Reform Act, and which these acts make imperative. And no contract on the part of the corporation to pay such fees will be implied, although the town clerk received no stated salary; and, before the passing of this act, payments were made to him by the corporation for the performance of duties imposed on him by the Reform Act. (Jones v. Carmarthen (Mayor of), 8 M. & W. 605). A town clerk has a lien on papers of the corporation with respect to which he has done work as attorney or solicitor, but not on such as he holds merely as town clerk. (a) Under this section and sect. 65, county magistrates may determine complaints against corporate officers refusing to deliver up papers, though such officers reside within the precincts of the corporation, and the corporation have magistrates. (In re Gateshead (Justices), 6 Ad. & E. 550, n.) Three magistrates, acting under this section, committed the crier of the borough to the county gaol, until he should deliver up the bell, which was stated in the conviction and commitment to be the property of the council of the borough. This conviction was afterwards quashed on appeal:—Held, that the magistrates had jurisdiction to convict; and, there being nothing on the face of the conviction to make it void, that trespass would not lie against the magistrates. (Baylis v. Strickland, 1 Scott, N. R. 540; 1 Man. & G. 592. See the forms of the information and warrant of commitment in this case, at the end of this section).

The insertion of the name of a town in Schedule A. of the Municipal Corporation Reform Act, is primâ facie evidence of the existence of a municipal corporation there; but if facts be adduced on affidavit to negative that presumption, a mandamus will not issue to compel the delivery of books, papers, monies, &c., by the ancient officers of the town to the council elected under the new act. (Reg. v. Greene, 1 Nev. & Per. 63; 6 Ad. & E. 548).

thereof, to the said council, or to such other person as aforesaid, as the case may be: provided always, that no person so committed shall be detained in prison for want of sufficient distress only for a longer space of time than three calendar months: provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall prevent or abridge any remedy by action against any such officer so offending as aforesaid, or against any surety for any such officer, but such officer shall not be sued by action and also proceeded against in a summary manner by virtue of this act for the same cause."

Proviso.

Remedy by action.

61. "In the city of Oxford, in the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in the counties of the cities of Bristol, Canterbury, Chester, Coventry, Exeter, Gloucester, Lichfield, Lincoln, Norwich, Worcester, and York, and in the counties of the towns of Carmarthen, Haverfordwest, Kingston-upon Hull, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Nottingham, Poole, and Southampton, the council shall on the first day of November [altered to ninth of November by 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 105, s. 5, post, 140], in every year appoint a fit person to execute the office of sheriff, with the like duties and powers as the sheriff or the person filling the office of sheriff in the said town and counties respectively would have had if this act had not passed; and every person who, at the time of the passing of this act, shall hold the office or execute the duties of sheriff in the said town and counties respectively shall continue to hold and execute the same until the first appointment of a sheriff therein under the provisions of this act, and no longer."

Councils of cities and towns which are counties to name a sheriff.

62. "The council of every borough in which a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden, as is hereinafter provided, shall, within ten days next after the grant of the said court shall have been signified to the council of such borough, appoint a fit person, not being an alderman or councillor, to be coroner of such borough so long as he shall well behave himself in his office of coroner, and shall fill up every vacancy of the office of coroner of the borough, by death, resignation, or removal, within ten days next after such vacancy shall have occurred, and none thereafter shall take any inquisition which belongs to the office of coroner within such borough save only the coroner so from time to time to be appointed; and every such coroner, for every inquisition which he shall duly take within such borough, shall be entitled to have the sum of twenty shillings, and also the sum of ninepence for every mile exceeding two miles which he shall be compelled to travel from his usual place of abode to take such inquisition, to be paid by the treasurer out of the borough fund of such borough, by order of the court of quarter sessions for such borough."

In certain boroughs, council to appoint a coroner.

63. "On or before the first day of February in every year after the passing of this act, every coroner appointed in any borough shall make and transmit to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state a return in writing, according to such form as the said secretary of state from time to time shall direct, of all the cases in which he may have been called upon to hold an inquest touching the cause of death of any person during the year ending on the thirty-first day of December immediately preceding."

Coroners to make returns to secretary of state.

64. "In every borough in and for which no separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden, no person from and after the end of this present year shall take any inquisition which belongs to the office of coroner within such borough, save only the coroner for the county or district in which such borough is situated; and the coroner of such county or district, for every inquisition which he shall duly take within any place or precinct within any such borough, shall be entitled to have such ratable fees and salary as would be allowed and due to him, and to be allowed and paid in like manner as for any other inquisition taken by him within such county: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to annul, diminish, or affect the authority of the lord high admiral, or of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of the United Kingdom for the time being, or of the judge of the high court of admiralty of England, as the lieutenant of the lord high admiral in the said court, to appoint coroners to act within the jurisdiction of the admiralty in the several ports and havens, and on the sea coast of England, and to take inquisitions touching deaths happening within the said jurisdiction, as hath heretofore been done."

Council empowered to remove certain officers (a).

65. "The council elected under this act in any borough shall have power to remove from his office every bailiff, treasurer, or chamberlain, and every other ministerial or executive officer of such borough and body corporate who shall be in office at the time of the first election of councillors under this act; and every such bailiff, treasurer, or chamberlain, and every other ministerial or executive officer in such borough, shall continue to act in the same capacity as heretofore, and to execute all the duties heretofore belonging to his office, and be entitled to have the same salaries, fees, and emoluments as he would have had if this act had not passed, until he shall be removed from his office, and no longer, unless he shall be re-appointed according to the provisions of this act; and every officer who shall be in possession or receipt of any monies, goods, valuable securities, books, and papers belonging to or concerning the body corporate whose officer he is, shall deliver up and account for the same to the council of such body corporate appointed under this act; and the council shall have the same remedy against such officer to recover the same as is hereinbefore provided in the case of officers appointed by such council: provided always, that all the charters, deeds, muniments, and records of every borough, or relating to the property thereof, shall be kept in such place as the council from time to time shall direct, and the town clerk for the time being shall have the charge and custody of and be responsible for the same."

Such officers to continue until removed (b).

Officers to receive compensation on removal (c).

66. "Every officer of any borough or county who shall be in any office of profit at the time of the passing of this act, whose office shall be abolished, or who shall be removed from his office under the provisions of this act, or who shall not be re-appointed as aforesaid, shall be entitled

(a) To justify the removal of a corporate officer, there must be misconduct specially in the execution of his office; and misconduct in duties which he has performed for the corporation, but which are not necessarily any part of his official duty, is not sufficient. (Reg. v Newbury (Mayor, &c), 1 Gale & D 388). A refusal by the town clerk to deliver up to the town council certain corporation documents and the corporation seal, and an opposition by him to a petition by the council to obtain the appointment of charity trustees, do not constitute sufficient cause to warrant his removal from an office held during good behaviour. Nor is such cause furnished by acting in concert with another person who addressed abusive language to an alderman and magistrate of the borough in a public part of the borough. (Reg. v. Treasury (Lords), In re Tibbits, 2 Per. & D. 498; 10 Ad. & E 371).

Reservation of certain pensions and allowances.

68. "All pensions and allowances granted on or before the fifth day of June in this present year by the corporate body named in the said schedules (A.) and (B.) in conjunction with any borough, to any retired officer or servant, or to the widow or child of any officer or servant, and all stipends and allowances which during seven years next before the said fifth day of June have been usually paid and granted to the minister or late minister of any church or chapel, or to the master or usher of any school, or to the governor or master of any hospital within such borough, and all charitable allowances which have been usually paid as aforesaid to the inmates of any almshouses by such corporate body, shall be secured, as soon as conveniently may be after the passing of this act, to every person entitled or accustomed to have and receive the same, by bond or obligation under the common seal of the borough out of whose funds the same shall be payable in a sufficient penalty, conditioned for the payment to such person, his executors and administrators, of such pension, stipend, or allowance, with all arrears thereof (if any) accrued due before the date of such bond; and such bond or obligation shall be prepared and executed at the expense of the borough fund."

All acts of the council to be decided by a majority of councillors present; one third part of the whole number to be a quorum.

69. Quarterly meetings of council.

70. "It shall be lawful for the council of any borough to appoint out of their own body, from time to time, such and so many committees, either of a general or special nature, and consisting of such number of persons as they may think fit, for any purposes which, in the discretion of such council, would be better regulated and managed by means of such committees: provided always, that the acts of every such committee shall be submitted to the council for their approval."

Council may appoint committees.

71. "And whereas divers bodies corporate now stand seised or possessed of sundry hereditaments and personal estate, in trust, in whole or in part, for certain charitable trusts, and it is expedient that the administration thereof be kept distinct from that of the public stock and borough fund; be it enacted, that in every borough in which the body corporate, or any one or more of the members of such body corporate, in his or their corporate capacity, now stands or stand solely, or together with any person or persons elected solely by such body corporate, or solely by any particular number, class, or description of members of

(a) Property appropriated by a municipal corporation to the maintenance of lecturers to preach before the corporation, is not property held by the corporation upon a charitable trust, within the meaning of this section. (Re Oxford Charities, 3 Myl. & Cr. 239). But it is not necessary that a corporation should be possessed of the legal estate of charity lands, to come within this section. (In the matter of the Charities of the Borough of King's Lynn: In the matter of Framingham's Hospital Charity; In the matter of 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, 3 Jur. 402—C.); and if property be granted to a corporation, subject to a payment for charitable purposes imposed by the grantor, this falls under the provisions of sect. 71; and sect. 68 applies, not to such property, but to cases where the payment has been made by the gift of the corporation itself. (Rex v. Sankey, 5 Ad. & El. 423). All the estate and interest of the old trustees in the charitable funds vested in them as members of the corporation at the time of the passing of the act, ceased and determined on the 1st of August, 1836; and therefore the new trustees had been properly appointed by the master under an order of the Lord Chancellor, bearing date the 20th of August, 1836. (Bignold v. Springfield, 8 Scott, 101).

New trustees of a charity were appointed under the Municipal Corporation Act. The trustees afterwards presented a petition under the 52 Geo. III. c. 101, stating that it was doubtful whether the legal estate in the charity property was vested in them, and that the town council claimed certain powers adversely to the trustees, and raising several other doubtful and difficult questions relating to the charity:—Held, that the Court had no jurisdiction to decide questions of such a nature upon petition. (In re Charity of W. Phillips, &c., 8 Sim. 381). The enactment in this clause does not extend to charities, the property of which is vested in trustees, and of which the old corporations were visitors, and had the nomination of the objects only. (Att.-Gen. v. Newbury Corporation, 1 Coop. 72).

(a) By a local act establishing a court of requests for the borough of B., it was enacted, that the mayor, aldermen, and common councilmen for the time being of the borough, the justices for a certain district, and the ministers of certain parishes, with other persons, should be the commissioners thereof; and that in case of a vacancy in the situation of clerk of the court, the mayor and aldermen of the borough should appoint a successor. A vacancy in the situation of clerk having occurred, the plaintiff and defendant, who were both members of the town council, became candidates. At a meeting of the town council specially summoned for the purpose of electing a clerk, the defendant was first elected by the mayor and aldermen only, after which an election took place before the town council, when the plaintiff was elected. Each of the parties voted for the other at the last election, and the plaintiff, before voting and before the election was completed, tendered his resignation of his place in the council to the mayor in a letter, with fifty pounds as a fine on resignation under sect. 51. No bye-law had then been made declaring the fine on resignation, and the mayor returned the fifty pounds. At a subsequent quarterly meeting of the council, the plaintiff was again elected by the council, no previous notice having been given of the intention to elect a clerk of the court of requests at that meeting: — Held, that the case fell within this section of the act, and that neither sect. 73 nor sect. 8 of the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 105, (post, 140), applied; that the true construction of sect. 72 was, that the body corporate under this act should be trustees or commissioners for executing by the town council "the powers and provisions" of all acts of Parliament of which "powers and provisions" the old body corporate or any of the members thereof in their corporate capacity were sole commissioners or trustees before the election of the town council, and that, as the mayor and aldermen were by the local act sole trustees or commissioners for the purpose of appointing the clerk, their powers devolved upon the town council, and that plaintiff was therefore duly elected at the first meeting:—Held also, that under all the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff's resignation of the office of town councillor was sufficient, but that if it was not, his election to the office of clerk had the effect of vacating his office of town councillor. Council to appoint a limited number of councillors to be joint trustees for certain purposes.

73. "In every borough in which the body corporate, or a particular or limited number, class, or description of members of the body corporate, or of persons appointed by the body corporate, was or were before the passing of this act trustees, jointly with other trustees for the execution of any act of Parliament, or of any trust, or in which the body corporate, or any particular or limited number, class, or description of members or nominees of the body corporate, by any statute, charter, bye-law or custom, was or were before the passing of this act lawfully appointed to or exercised any powers, duties, or functions whatsoever not otherwise herein provided for, and the continuance of which is not inconsistent with the provisions of this act, the council of such borough, on the day named in such act as last aforesaid, or in the deed or will by which such trust is created for a new election, nomination, or appointment of trustees, or on which such new election, nomination, or appointment has usually been made, (and if there shall be no such day named or usually observed, then on the first day of January in every year), shall appoint the like number of members of the council, or as near as may be to the like number of members of the council, as there were theretofore members or nominees of such corporate body who in right of their office were such trustees, or charged with the execution of such powers, duties, and functions, in room of the members or nominees of such corporate body ceasing to be trustees, or ceasing to exercise such powers, duties, and functions by virtue of this act, and in every case of extraordinary vacancy among the trustees or persons so appointed by the council, shall forthwith appoint one other member of the council in the room of the person by whom such vacancy has been made, and to hold his trust or office for such time as the person by whom such vacancy has been made would regularly have held it."

A watch committee to be appointed, to consist of the mayor and councillors, such committee to appoint constables for the borough

76. "The council to be elected for any borough shall, immediately after their first election, and so from time to time thereafter as they shall deem expedient, appoint for such time as they may think proper, a sufficient number of their own body, who, together with the mayor of the borough for the time being, shall be and be called the watch committee for such borough; and all the powers hereinafter given to such committee may be executed by the majority of those who shall be present at any meeting of such committee, the whole number present at such meeting being not less than three; and such watch committee shall, within three weeks after their first formation, and so from time to time thereafter, as occasion shall require, appoint a sufficient number of fit men, who shall be sworn in before some justice of the peace having jurisdiction within the borough to act as constables for preserving the peace by day and by night, and preventing robberies and other felonies, and apprehending offenders against the peace; and the men so sworn shall not only within such borough, but also within the county in which such borough or part thereof shall be situated, and also within every county being within seven miles of any part of such borough, and also within all liberties in any such county, have all such powers and privileges, and be liable to all such duties and responsibilities as any constable duly appointed now has, or hereafter may have within his constablewick, by virtue of the common law of this realm, or of any statutes made, or to be made, and shall obey all such lawful commands as they may from time to time receive from any of the justices of the peace having jurisdiction within such borough, or within any county in which they shall be called on to act as constables for conducting themselves in the execution of their office."

Constables to be for the county, &c. as well as borough.

Watch committee to make regulations for the management of the constables.

77. "The watch committee for any such borough as aforesaid may from time to time frame such regulations as they shall deem expedient for preventing neglect or abuse, and for rendering such constables efficient in the discharge of their duties; and the said committee, or any two justices of the peace having jurisdiction within the borough, may at any time suspend or dismiss any constable whom they shall think negligent in the discharge of his duty or otherwise unfit for the same; and when any man shall be so dismissed, or cease to belong to the said constabulary force, all powers vested in him as a constable by virtue of this act shall immediately cease; and no man so dismissed as aforesaid shall be re-appointed without the consent of two of the justices of the peace having jurisdiction within the borough."

Power to constables to apprehend disorderly persons, &c.

78. "It shall be lawful for any constable during the time of his being on duty to apprehend all idle and disorderly persons whom he shall find disturbing the public peace, or whom he shall have just cause to suspect of intention to commit a felony, and to deliver any person so apprehended into the custody of the constable appointed under this act, who shall be in attendance at the nearest watch-house, in order that such person may be secured until he can be brought before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law, or may give bail for his appearance before a justice of the peace, if the constable shall think fit to take bail, in the manner hereinafter mentioned."

Constables attending at the watch-houses in the night may take bail by recognisance from persons brought before them for petty misdemeanors; such recognisance to be conditioned for the appearance of the parties before a magistrate.

79. "Where any person charged with any petty misdemeanor shall be brought without the warrant of a justice of the peace into the custody of any constable appointed under this act, during his attendance in the night-time at any watch-house within any such borough as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such constable, if he shall think fit, to take bail by recognisance, without any fee or reward, from such person, conditioned that such person shall appear for examination within two days before a justice of the peace within the borough at some time and place to be specified in the recognisance; and every recognisance so taken shall be of equal obligation on the parties entering into the same, and liable to the same proceedings for the estreating thereof, as if the same had been taken before a justice of the peace; and the constable shall enter in a book to be kept for that purpose in every watch-house, the names, residence and occupation of the party, and his surety or sureties, if any, entering into such recognisance, together with the condition thereof, and the sums respectively acknowledged, and shall lay the same before such justice as shall be present at the time and place when and where the party is required to appear; and if the party does not appear at the time and place required, or within one hour after, the justice shall cause a record of the recognisance to be drawn up, to be signed by the constable, and shall return the same to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the borough, or for the county in which such borough is situate, in those boroughs for which there shall be no separate general or quarter sessions of the peace, with a certificate at the back thereof, signed by such justice, that the party has not complied with the obligation therein contained; and the clerk of the peace shall make the like estreats and schedules of every such recognisance as of recognisances forfeited in the sessions of the peace; and if the party not appearing shall apply by any person on his behalf to postpone the hearing of the charge against him, and the justice shall think fit to consent thereto, the justice shall be at liberty to enlarge the recognisance to such further time as he shall appoint; and when the matter shall be heard and determined, either by the dismissal of the complaint or by binding the party over to answer the matter thereof at the sessions, or otherwise, the recognisance for the appearance of the party before a justice shall be discharged without fee or reward."

In default of appearance, recognisance to be forfeited.

Time of hearing may be postponed.

Penalty for assaults on constables.

81. "If any person shall assault or resist any constable of any borough appointed under this act, in the execution of his duty, or shall aid or incite any person so to assault or resist, every such offender, being convicted thereof before any two justices of the peace, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding five pounds as the said justices shall think meet: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any prosecution by way of indictment against any person so offending, but so as that such person shall not be prosecuted by indictment, and also proceeded against under this act for the same offence."

Regulation and payment of expenses.

82. "The treasurer of every borough appointed under this act shall pay to the constables of such borough appointed under this act such salaries, wages, and allowances, and at such periods as the watch committee for such borough shall, subject to the approbation of the council, direct, and the council shall order to be paid also any extraordinary expenses which such persons shall appear to have necessarily incurred in apprehending offenders, and executing the orders of any justice of the peace having jurisdiction within such borough, such expenses having been first examined and approved by such justice; and the said treasurer shall also pay such further sums as the watch committee shall, subject to the approbation of the council, award to any of the persons belonging to the said constabulary force, as a reward for extraordinary diligence or exertion, or as a compensation for wounds or severe injuries received in the performance of their duty, or as an allowance to such of them as shall be disabled by bodily injury received, or shall be worn out by length of service, and all other charges and expenses which the watch committee shall, subject to the approbation of the council, direct to be paid for the purposes of the constabulary force under this act."

83. "Any two or more of the justices of the peace having jurisdiction within any borough are hereby authorized and required in the month of October in every year to nominate and appoint by precept in writing, under their hands, so many as they shall think fit of the inhabitants of such borough (not legally exempt from serving the office of constable) to act as special constables within such borough whensoever they shall be required by the warrant of any of the justices of the peace having jurisdiction within such borough so to act, and not otherwise; and every such warrant shall recite that in the opinion of the justice granting the same, the ordinary police force of the borough is insufficient at that time to maintain the peace of the borough; and every person so appointed a special constable shall take the oath set forth in the act passed in the session of parliament holden in the first and second years of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for Amending the Laws relative to the Appointment of Special Constables, and for the better Preservation of the Peace,' and shall have the powers and immunities and be liable to the duties and penalties enacted by the said last-mentioned act; and every person so appointed a special constable shall receive, out of the borough fund, for every day during which he shall be called out to act as such, the sum of 3*s.* 6*d.*, and no more."

1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 41. Vol. I., tit. "Constables."

Payment of special constables.

On notice of appointment of constables, the present provisions in local act as to watching, &c. to cease.

84. "As soon as constables shall have been appointed by the watch committee for any borough, a notice, signed by the mayor of such borough, specifying the day on which such constables shall begin to act, shall be fixed on the door of the town hall and every church within such borough; and on the day so specified in such notice so much of all acts named in conjunction with such borough in the Schedule (E.) to this act annexed, and of all acts made before the passing of this act, as relates to the appointment, regulation, powers and duties, or to the assessment or collection of any rate to provide for the expenses of any watchmen, constables, patrol or police for any place situated within such borough, shall cease and determine; and all watch-houses and watch-boxes in any such place, and all arms, accoutrements, and other necessaries provided at the public expense for any watchmen, constables, patrol or police therein, shall be given up to such persons as shall be named by the said mayor in such notice, for the use and accommodation of the constables to be appointed under this act, and all the property so to be given up shall be deemed to belong to the body corporate of such borough; and in case any person having the charge, control or possession of any watch-house, watch-box, arms, accoutrements, or necessaries as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to give up the same as hereinbefore required, every such offender, being convicted thereof before any two justices of the peace, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay, over and above the value of the property not given up, such sum not exceeding five pounds, as the said justices shall think meet; and where there shall be any building in any such place as aforesaid, a part only of which building shall have been heretofore used as a watch-house, such part shall be given up every day, from the hour of four in the afternoon until the hour of nine in the forenoon, for the use and accommodation of the constables to be appointed under this act; and if any person having the charge, control or possession of any such building, shall neglect or refuse to give up such part thereof for the purposes aforesaid, or to permit free access thereto or egress therefrom during any portion of the time above prescribed, every such offender, being convicted thereof before any two justices of the peace, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay such sum not exceeding five pounds as the said justices shall think meet: provided nevertheless, that in every case in which before the passing of this act a rate might be levied in any borough for the purpose of watching, conjointly with any other purpose, nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prevent the levying and collecting of such rate for such other purpose solely, or to repeal the powers given in any act so far as the same relate to such other purpose: provided always, that where the amount of such rate before the passing of this act might not exceed a given rate in the pound on the value of property ratable thereunto, the rate so to be levied for such other purpose solely shall not exceed such proportion of the said given rate in the pound as shall appear to have been expended for such purpose other than watching by an account of the average yearly expenditure during the last seven years, or where such rate shall not have been levied during seven years, then during such less number of years as such rate shall have been levied."

Watch boxes, arms, &c. to be given up for the use of the constables appointed under this act.

Penalty for not giving them up.

85. Provided always, "That any rate for defraying the expenses of any watchmen, constables, patrol, or police, in any such place as aforesaid, made previously to the day specified in such notice as aforesaid, shall be levied and collected in the same manner as if this act had not been passed: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the levying and collecting of any rate in any such place as aforesaid, for the purpose of paying any debt contracted before the passing of this act, or the interest of any such debt, but that such rate shall and may be levied and collected in the same manner as if this act had not been passed."

Power for council to order parts of borough not within a local act as to lighting, to be included in such act.

87. "And whereas parts of certain boroughs are within the provisions of one or more local act or acts for regulating the lighting thereof, and certain other parts of the same boroughs are not within the provisions of any local act for regulating the lighting thereof, and for want of such lighting the efficiency of the constables may be much diminished, and great facilities afforded for the commission of crimes, and for the escape of offenders; for remedy thereof, be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for the council of any borough in any part of which there is a local act for the lighting thereof to make an order that any part of such borough not being within the provisions of any local act for the lighting thereof, shall, from and after a certain day to be named in such order, be taken to be within the provisions of such local act or acts for lighting any part of such borough as the common council shall specify in such order; and after such day the part named in such order shall be within the provisions of the act or acts so specified, so far as relates to lighting, or to any rates authorized to be levied for the purpose of lighting, as fully as if such part had been originally named in such act or acts, anything in such act or acts to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that every part named in such order shall be lighted in the like manner as those parts which before the making of such order were within the provisions of such local act, and that the rate to be raised for the purpose of defraying the expenses of lighting any part so named in such order shall not exceed the average expense in the pound of the lighting of the other parts of such borough."

Council may assume the powers of inspectors under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, for lighting any part of the borough not within a local act for lighting the same (a).

88. "If the council of any borough chosen under this act shall, by public notice to be affixed on the outer door of the town hall, or in some public place within the borough, declare that on a certain day, to be named in such notice, not less than twenty-one days after the day on which such public notice shall have been given, they will take upon themselves the powers given to the inspectors named in a certain act made in the third and fourth year of his present Majesty, intituled, 'An Act to repeal an Act of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, for the Lighting and Watching of Parishes in England and Wales, and to make other provisions in lieu thereof,' so far as the same relates to the lighting the whole or any part of any borough which is not within the provisions of any local act, or in which there is no power of levying rates for lighting the same, the council of such borough shall, after the day named in such notice, have the same powers and duties as belong to inspectors under the said last-recited act in regard to lighting and to levying rates for the purpose of lighting such part of the borough, except so far as the same are contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of this act; and in such case the council shall have the sole power to fix and determine the amount of money which they will call for in any one year for the purpose of lighting such part of the borough, so that such sum shall not exceed the rate of six-pence in the pound on the full and fair annual value of all property ratable to the relief of the poor within such part of the borough: provided also, that it shall not be lawful in such case for the inhabitants of such part of the borough at any time to determine that the provisions of the said recited act shall cease to be acted upon."

Act not to interfere with the regulations for the government, &c. of dock yards, arsenals, &c.

Application of surplus.

(a) The costs of defending quo warranto informations against an alderman of a borough, and of prosecuting a criminal information against a person for assaulting a justice, are not payable out of the borough fund. (Reg. v. Bridgewater (Council), 2 Per. & D. 558; 10 Ad. & E. 281). But a municipal corporation is justified in discharging out of the corporate funds the expenses of defending quo warranto informations against individual members, if the object of such informations be to impeach the title, or destroy the legal existence of the corporation as a body. And therefore, where, before the Municipal Corporation Act, an individual member had incurred costs and charges in defending quo warranto informations against himself and others, without authority from them, and afterwards obtained a bond, with the corporate seal affixed, for the reimbursement of those costs and charges.—it was held, that there was a lawful debt existing before the act, and that it was saved by the 92nd section of the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76. (Holdsworth v. Dartmouth (Mayor), 10 Ad & Ell. 490: S. P. Att.-Gen. v. Norwich (Mayor), 2 Myl. & Cr. 406). Where persons intrusted with the administration of a fund have incurred proper expenses in performing duties thrown upon them by their fiduciary situation, they have a right in law and in equity to reimburse themselves out of the funds in their hands without any special provision. (Ib.) And see Att.-Gen. v. Norwich (Corporation), 1 Kee. 700. And see as to the administration of the borough fund, 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 104, post, 137.

and all arrears of interest due thereon shall have been fully paid and satisfied; and in case the borough fund shall not be sufficient for the purposes aforesaid, the council of the borough is hereby authorized and required from time to time to estimate, as correctly as may be, what amount, in addition to such fund, will be sufficient for the payment of the expenses to be incurred in carrying into effect the provisions of this act; and in order to raise the amount so estimated, the said council is hereby authorized and required from time to time to order a borough rate in the nature of a county rate to be made within their borough, and for that purpose the council of such borough shall have within their borough all the powers which any justices of the peace assembled at their general or quarter sessions in any county in England have within the limits of their commission by virtue of an act made in the fifty-fifth year of his late Majesty King George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to amend an Act of his late Majesty King George the Second, for the more easy assessing, collecting, and levying of county rates,' or as near thereto as the nature of the case will admit, except as is hereinafter excepted; and all warrants required by the said act to be issued under the hands and seals of two or more justices shall in like case be signed by the mayor (b), and sealed with the seal of the borough; provided that such council shall not be empowered to receive, hear, or determine any appeal against any such rate; and if any person shall think himself aggrieved by any such rate, it shall be lawful for him to appeal to the

(a) See post, "County Rate."

(b) The 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 104, s. 5, post, enables the mayor to issue his warrant for levying the rate to be directed to the high constable of the borough, or other officer or person appointed by the council for collecting the rate.

(c) The power of appeal against a borough rate is confined to the grounds of appeal against a county rate, under 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 14, and therefore an individual cannot appeal for any personal grievance, or on the ground of the rate being retrospective. (Reg. v. Bath (Recorder,) 1 Per. & D. 622; 9 Ad. & Ell. 871). The appeal is given exclusively to the public officer of the district or division, the churchwarden or overseer. When the word "inhabitant" is used, it is not to be understood as being applicable to any individual, but to such only as, for for the purpose of appeal, represents some place where the clause supposes neither churchwarden nor overseer to exist; and who must, therefore, be understood to be placed upon the same footing as churchwardens and overseers. (Per Denman, C. J., delivering the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, 9 Ad. & Ell. 878). Notice of the appeal to the town clerk is sufficient, as he is the officer of the town council, who made the rate. (Reg. v. Carmarthen, 3 Nev. & Per. 19; 7 Ad. & Ell. 758). The notice must state directly that the party appealing is aggrieved, or must shew facts from which it can be collected. And on an appeal against a borough rate, no notice being proved, except as before mentioned, the recorder refused to hear the appeal, or to enter and respite. The court refused a mandamus to compel him to hear it; though it was stated on affidavit that the appellant was a party aggrieved, and that the omission in the notice arose from oversight. (Rex v. Bond, 6 Ad. & Ell. 905).

Where an appeal against a borough rate was, at the request of the town clerk, adjourned from the Epiphany to the Michaelmas sessions, but in the meantime the rate was abandoned: it was held, that the recorder ought to have heard the appeal, although there was no rate produced, and no secondary evidence of it given. (Rex v. Stamford (Recorder), 1 Per. & D. 72) As to an information seeking to invalidate a borough rate, see Att.-Gen. v. Corporation of Poole, 2 Kee. 190. See "Appeal," Vol. I.).

The effect of sect. 132, (post, 119), is to take away certiorari in the case of an order of borough sessions quashing an appeal against a rate made under this section. (Reg. v. Rippon, (JJ.), 7 Ad. & Ell. 417) But this is now remedied by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44, (post, 133), which grants a certiorari to remove any order for the payment of money out of the borough fund, and which enactment is retrospective. (Reg. v. Bridgewater, (Council), 10 Ad. & Ell. 281).

recorder hereinafter mentioned at the next quarter sessions for the borough in which such rate has been made, or in case there shall be no recorder within such borough, to the justices at the next court of quarter sessions for the county within which such borough is situate or whereunto it is adjacent; and such recorder or justices respectively shall have power to hear and determine the same, and to award relief in the premises, as in the case of an appeal against any county rate; and all such sums levied in pursuance of such borough rate shall be paid over to the account of the borough fund, and, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall be applied to all purposes to which, before the passing of this act, a borough rate or county rate was by law applicable in such borough or county: provided that in every case in which before the passing of this act any rate might be levied in any borough, or in any parish or place made part of any borough under the provisions of this act, for the purpose of watching solely by day or by night, or for the purpose of watching by day or by night conjointly with any other purpose, it shall be lawful for the council of such borough to levy

Watch rate may be levied not exceeding 6d. in the pound, or in certain cases the average rate.

(a) By stat. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 28, intituled "An Act for more equally assessing and levying Watch Rates in certain Boroughs," [19th July, 1839], reciting "Whereas by reason of the restrictions contained in an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled 'An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales, the Watch Rate authorized by the said Act to be levied upon those parts of the Boroughs within the provisions of the said Act which are regularly watched is insufficient for that purpose, and the deficiency in many cases is paid out of the Borough Rate, to which all parts of the Borough, whether or not regularly watched, are liable:' for remedy thereof, be it enacted, that after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the council of any borough named in either of the schedules to the said act to levy a watch rate upon the occupiers of all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments within those parts of the borough which shall be watched by day and by night, and which from time to time, by any order of the council of any such borough, shall be declared liable to such watch rate; and every such rate shall be made upon an estimate of the net annual value of the several hereditaments rated thereunto, that is to say, of the rent at which, one year with another, the same might in their actual state be reasonably expected to let from year to year, the probable annual average cost of the repairs, insurances, and other expenses (if any) necessary to maintain the hereditaments in their actual state, and all rates, taxes, and public charges, except tithes or tithe commutation rent-charges (if any), being paid by the tenant, and either by one rate made yearly, or by two or more rates made half-yearly, or otherwise: provided always, that no such rate shall exceed, in any one year, the rate of sixpence in the pound on the net annual value of the hereditaments rated thereunto, unless in those boroughs in which, at the time of passing the said act, the sum authorized by the said act to be levied by way of watch rate exceeded the sum which might have been then raised by the said rate of sixpence in the pound; and in such cases as last aforesaid it shall be lawful to levy a watch rate under this act upon all the hereditaments liable thereunto, at such rate as would have sufficed to raise such greater sum: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to either of the Universities, so as to make the members thereof liable to pay to any rate to be made in pursuance of this act to which the said Universities or the members thereof were not liable to contribute before the passing of this act, nor shall be deemed to affect the liability of the borough fund to make good any deficiency of the watch rate towards the expenses of the police, should any such deficiency arise, nor to make liable to the watch rate any lands, tenements, or hereditaments which are now exempted by any local act from the payment of watch rates, or to alter the comparative liability of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments to the watch rate, which by any local act are now, in respect of any watch rate, entitled to any deduction from or chargeable with any increase upon an equal pound rate; but the like comparative deductions and increased charges shall be made in respect of such hereditaments in the rates to which such hereditaments shall be rated under this act."

2. "That for the purposes aforesaid the council of every such borough, and all other persons interested or concerned therein, shall have all the powers heretofore given to them respectively, in the matter of the borough rate and watch rate or either of them, by the said act or by any other subsequent act, for ordering, making, assessing, levying, raising, collecting, or paying the same, or as near thereto as the nature of the case will admit." As to the powers of the council of any borough. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 28.

And by stat. 3 & 4 Vict. c. 28, [23rd July, 1840], intituled "An Act to explain and amend an Act of the second and third Years of her present Majesty, for more equally assessing and levying Watch Rates in certain Boroughs," reciting, "Whereas by an act passed in the session of parliament holden in the second and third years of the reign of her present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for more equally assessing and levying Watch Rates in certain Boroughs,' after reciting therein that by reason of the restrictions contained in an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales,' the watch rate authorized to be levied upon those parts of the boroughs within the provisions of the said act which were regularly watched was insufficient for that purpose, and the deficiency in many cases was paid out of the borough rate to which all parts of the borough, whether or not regularly watched, were liable; for remedy thereof it was enacted, amongst other things, that it should be lawful for the council of any borough named in either of the schedules to the said act of his late Majesty to levy a watch rate upon the occupiers of all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments within those parts of the borough which should be watched by day and by night, and which from time to time, by any order of the council of any such borough, should be declared liable to such watch rate, provided that no such rate should exceed in any one year the rate of sixpence in the pound on the net annual value of the hereditaments rated thereunto, unless in those boroughs in which at the time of passing the said act of his late Majesty the sum authorized to be levied by way of watch rate exceeded the sum which might have been then raised by the said rate of sixpence in the pound: and whereas the said act of her present Majesty was intended to apply to boroughs in which, from the deficiency of the borough fund, it had become or might become necessary that borough rates should be laid; but doubts have been entertained whether the same act may not apply to cases of municipal boroughs in which there are borough funds sufficient for the purposes of defraying the expenses of the constabulary force of such boroughs, together with all other expenses payable out of the borough fund, with the aid of the amount only of watch rate which could be raised under the provisions of the said act of his said late Majesty, and without the aid of any borough rate; and doubts are also entertained whether by the said act of her present Majesty it is not imperative upon the council of each borough to levy in each borough a watch rate to the extent of sixpence in the pound; and in order to remove such doubts, it was declared, that after the passing of this act the said act of her present Majesty shall not apply or be deemed to apply to any borough in which the borough fund is sufficient, with the aid of the amount only of watch rate which could be raised under the provisions of the said act of his late Majesty and without the aid of any borough rate, to defray the expense of the constabulary force of the borough, together with all the other expenses legally payable out of the borough fund, by virtue of the said act of his late Majesty, or any other act or acts of parliament: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed to take away or lessen, or to vary or affect, the particular benefit or rights to common lands and public stock, and to lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and to the rents and profits thereof, or to any sum or sums of money, chattels, securities for money, or other personal estate which are reserved by the said recited act of his late Majesty to every person who then was or thereafter might be an inhabitant of any borough, and also to every person who had been admitted, or who might thereafter have been admitted, a freeman or burgess of any borough if that act had not been passed, or who then was or thereafter might be the wife or widow, or son or daughter, of any freeman or burgess, or who had espoused or might thereafter espouse the daughter or widow of any freeman or

It having been decided that this section did not authorize the council to make a rate to satisfy by-gone expenses, (Woods v. Reed, 2 Mee. & Wels. 777); and it being doubtful whether the words were sufficiently comprehensive to extend to borough rates, the provisions which the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, had made with respect to county rates, the 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 81, (17th July, 1837), intituled, "An Act to provide for the levying of rates in boroughs and towns having municipal corporations in England and Wales," was passed, which after reciting, that "by an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled, 'An Act to provide for the regulation of municipal corporations in England and Wales,' authority was given to the council of any borough in certain cases to levy a borough rate, and in certain other cases to levy a watch rate, and the same powers and authorities were thereby given to them for that purpose as by law are given to justices of the peace at sessions with respect to a county rate: and whereas no authority was thereby given to the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of any parish or place, or other persons, who may thereby be legally ordered to pay or levy such rate, to pay the same out of the poor rate of such respective parishes or places, or otherwise to levy the same upon the inhabitants thereof:" enacted, "that in all cases where by the said act or by this act a borough rate or watch rate may be made and Limiting amount of watch rate to be annually levied.

2. "And it was declared, that the amount of watch rate to be levied by the council of any borough under the authority of the said recited act of her present Majesty shall be at the discretion of each such council, but not exceeding in any one year the sum of sixpence in the pound, as limited by the same act."

levied in any borough, the council of such borough may order the churchwardens and overseers of every parish or place within which such rate may be levied, or such other persons as by law may make a poor rate for any such parish or place within the limits of such borough, to pay the amount of such part and portion of such rate for which such parish or place respectively shall be liable out of the poor rate made and collected or to be made or collected for such parish or place; or the said council, instead of ordering such churchwardens and overseers or other persons to pay the same out of the poor rate, may order them to make and collect a certain pound rate upon and from the occupiers or possessors of all rateable property within which such parish or place, for the amount of the rate for which such parish or place may be liable as aforesaid; and if such churchwardens, overseers, and other persons, upon being so ordered to pay such rate out of the poor rate, or to make and collect a pound rate as aforesaid, shall refuse or neglect to do so, the amount thereof may be made and levied off the goods of them or any of them by distress by virtue of a warrant in that behalf under the hand and seal of the mayor of such borough, or of any two justices of the peace in and for the same; or if any person liable to pay such pound rate shall neglect or refuse to pay the same, the amount thereof may be levied upon his goods by distress in like manner."

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 81.

2. "That it shall be lawful for the council of any borough, at any time within six calendar months next after the passing of this act, to make and levy a borough rate for the purpose of defraying any expenses incurred before the passing of this act in putting in execution the provisions of the said act for regulating corporations; and every such rate shall be made, levied, and recovered in the manner provided by the said act for regulating corporations and by this act." (As to the rates made under this section, see Reg. v. Ipswich (Recorder), 8 Dowl. 103).

Council of borough empowered to levy a rate for carrying former act into execution.

3. "Provided always, That in every case in which any parish or place liable to support its own poor shall be partly within and partly without any such borough, and in the case of every extra-parochial place wholly or partly within any such borough, the council of the borough shall appoint one or more proper person or persons to act as overseer or overseers within that part of such parish or any such place which is within the borough, for making, levying, and collecting any such borough rate or watch rate therein; and in every such case of a divided parish or place, if the borough is not liable to the county rate, the justices of the peace having jurisdiction over that part of such parish or place which is not within the borough shall appoint one or more proper person or persons to act as overseer or overseers within that part of such parish or place which is not within the borough, for making, levying, and collecting the county rate therein; and the person or persons so respectively to be appointed shall have the like powers vested in him or them, and shall be subject to the same regulations and penalties, for levying and collecting any such borough rate, watch rate, or county rate within that part of such parish or place for which he or they is or are appointed, as if he or they was or were appointed overseer or overseers of the poor under any law or laws now or hereafter to be in force." (And see 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 29, post, 129).

Regulating the collection of borough and county rates in divided places.

The object of this enactment is further explained by Tindal, (C. J.), delivering the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, in Fernley v. Worthington, 1 Scott, N. R., p. 448.—"It is to be observed," says his Lordship, "that there are three distinct powers given by the 12th section of the 55th Geo. III. c. 51; first, the power to the justices in sessions to make the rate and issue warrants for its collection by the high constable; secondly, the power given to the justices out of sessions to issue a warrant for the levy of the rate upon the goods of any overseer, &c., refusing to pay the assessment to the high constable; thirdly, the power to the overseers or persons appointed to act as such, to levy by rate the sums assessed, or to reimburse themselves by a special rate, such sums as they shall have paid on account of the county rate. Now the 92nd section of the Municipal Corporation Act, though it gives the same powers to the council to make the rate, and confers upon the mayor the power of levying by distress the assessment upon the overseers and other collectors of rates, makes no express provision authorizing the overseers of the poor to pay such assessments out of the poor rate, or to make any special rate to reimburse themselves the amount paid over to the borough rate. And doubts having arisen, whether, in the absence of any such express provision, the overseers would be justified in so applying the rates in their hands, or in levying a special rate to reimburse themselves according to the provisions of the county rate act, the statute of 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 81 was passed, the first section of which act, after reciting that no authority was given by the 5 & 6 of Will. IV., c. 76, to the churchwardens, overseers, or other persons who might thereby be legally ordered to pay or levy such rates to pay the same out of the poor-rate of such parishes or places, or otherwise to levy the same upon the inhabitants thereof, authorizes the council to order the overseers to pay the assessment of the borough rate out of the poor-rate, or to make and collect a pound rate for the purpose. And then inasmuch as this provision would not apply to extra-parochial places, or to parishes or townships partly within and partly without the borough, the third section expressly provided for such cases: and thus the omissions in the Municipal Corporation Act with respect to the borough rate are completely supplied, and the borough rate and county rate are placed on the same footing for the future in respect of extra-parochial places and divided parishes."

Accounts of receipts and disbursements to be kept, audited, and published (a).

By the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 93, "The treasurer of every borough shall, in books to be kept for that purpose, enter true accounts of all sums of money by him received and paid, and of the several matters for which such sums shall have been received and paid, and the books containing the accounts shall at all seasonable times be open to the inspection of any of the aldermen or councillors of such borough; and all the accounts, with all vouchers and papers relating thereto, shall in the months of March and September in every year be submitted by the treasurer of the borough to the auditors herein-before provided to be elected, and to such member of the council as the mayor shall name, on the 1st day of March in every year, or in case of extraordinary vacancy within ten days next after such vacancy, for the purpose of being examined and audited, from the 1st day of September in the year preceding to the 1st day of March, and from the first day of March to the 1st day of September in the year in which the said auditors were elected and named, and if the said accounts shall be found to be correct, the auditors shall sign the same; and after such accounts shall have been so examined and audited in the month of September in every year, the treasurer shall make out in writing, and shall cause to be printed, a full abstract of his accounts for the year, and a copy thereof shall be open to the inspection of all the rate-payers of such borough, and copies thereof shall be delivered to all rate-payers of such borough applying for the same, on payment of a reasonable price for each copy."

Power of sale and leasing restrained.

94. "It shall not be lawful for the council of any body corporate to be elected under this act, to sell, mortgage, or alienate the lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the said body corporate, or any part thereof, except in pursuance of some covenant, contract, or agreement, bonâ fide made or entered into, on or before the 5th day of June in this

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

95. Provided always, "that in all cases in which any body corporate shall on the 5th day of June in this present year have been bound or engaged by any covenant or agreement, express or implied, or have been enjoined by any deed, will, or other document, or have been sanctioned or warranted by ancient usage, or by custom or practice, to make any renewal of any lease for years, or for life or lives, or for years determinable with any life or lives at any fixed or determinate or known or accustomed period, or after the lapse of any number of years, or on the dropping of any life or lives, and years determinable after the lapse of any number of years, at a fine certain, or under any special or specific terms or conditions, and also in all cases in which any body corporate shall theretofore have ordinarily made renewal of any lease for years, or for life or lives, or for years determinable with any life or lives at any fixed or determinate or known or accustomed period, or after the lapse of any number of years, or upon the dropping of any life or lives, upon the payment of an arbitrary fine, it shall be lawful for the council of such borough to renew such lease for such term or number of years, either absolutely or determinable with any life or lives, or for such life or lives, and at such rent, and upon the payment of such fine or premium, either certain or arbitrary, and with or without any covenant for the future renewal thereof, as such body corporate could or might have done in case this act had not been passed."

Collusive purchases, sales, and demises of corporate property since the 5th June, 1835, for undue consideration, may be set aside (a).

97. "It shall be lawful for the council first to be elected in any borough under the provisions of this act, to call in question all purchases, sales, leases, and demises not made in pursuance of some such bonâ fide covenant, contract, agreement, or resolution made or entered into as aforesaid before the said 5th day of June, and all contracts for the purchase, sale, lease, or demise of any lands, tenements, and hereditaments, and all divisions and appropriations of the monies, goods, and valuable securities, or any part of the real or personal estate, of which on or before the 5th day of June in this present year, the body corporate of which they are the council, whether in their own right or as trustees for charitable or other purposes, was seised or possessed, which shall have been made or contracted between the said 5th day of June and the day of the declaration of their election; and for that purpose, if it shall appear to the said council that there is ground for believing that any such purchase, sale, lease, or demise, or such contract, or such division or appropriation of the premises, was collusively made for no consideration, or for an inadequate consideration, it shall be lawful for the council of such borough, at any time within six calendar months next after the first election of councillors under this act shall have been declared in such borough, upon notice of their intention being first given in the London Gazette, and also affixed on the outer door of the town hall or in some public place within the borough, to cause the

(a) The Court of Chancery still has jurisdiction to relieve against collusive alienation of corporate property, notwithstanding the remedy provided by this section; but as by this act corporate property is applicable to public purposes, the attorney-general must sue in such cases in conjunction with the corporation. The Municipal Corporation Act has not destroyed the individuality of the old corporations, but has merely varied the mode in which the officers are to be chosen. If some of the members of a corporation are instrumental in unlawfully dispossessing the corporation of its property, they are personally liable. (Att.-Gen. v. Wilson, 9 Sim. 30). The funds, &c. belonging to the municipal corporations of boroughs named in schedules A. and B., became, upon the passing of this act, subject to certain public trusts to be exercised by the new council, only in the manner and for the purposes prescribed by the act. An appropriation of such funds made by the old corporation after the passing of the act, but before the election of the new council, and having for its object to endow the churches and chapels of the established church within the borough, with fixed stipends for their several ministers, is not an appropriation warranted by the act, and is therefore a breach of trust. The ordinary jurisdiction of the court over such a transaction by means of an information seeking to have the funds recalled and the appropriation rescinded as being a breach of trust, is not ousted by the special remedies provided in certain cases by the 97th section of the act. And, semble, those remedies would not be applicable in any case to a transaction of the above description. (Att.-Gen. v. Aspinall, 2 Myl. & Cr. 613).

100. "The council of every borough to which a separate commission of the peace shall be granted under the provisions of this act shall be authorized and required to provide and furnish one or more fit and suitable office or offices, to be called 'the police office' or 'offices' of the borough, for the purpose of transacting the business of the justices of such borough, and to pay from time to time, out of the borough fund, such sums as may be necessary for providing, upholding and furnishing, and for the necessary expenses of such police office or offices: provided that no room in any house licensed as a victualling house or alehouse shall be used for the purposes of any such police office."

102. "It shall be lawful for the justices of every borough to which a separate commission of the peace shall be granted as aforesaid, at their first or any other meeting, and they are hereby respectively required to appoint a fit person to be the clerk to the justices of such borough, to be removable at their pleasure, and so as often as there shall be a vacancy in the said office of clerk to the justices by death, resignation, removal or otherwise: provided that it shall not be lawful for the said justices to appoint or continue as such clerk to the justices any alderman or councillor of such borough, or clerk of the peace of such borough, or the partner of such clerk of the peace, or any clerk or person in the employ of such clerk of the peace: provided also, that it shall not be lawful for the said clerk to the justices, by himself or his partner, to be directly or indirectly interested or employed in the prosecution of any offender committed for trial by the justices of whom he shall be such clerk as aforesaid, or any of them, at any court of gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions; and any person being an alderman or councillor, or clerk of the peace of any borough, or the partner or clerk, or in the employ of such clerk of the peace, who shall act as clerk to the justices of such borough, or shall otherwise offend in the premises, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds, one moiety thereof to the treasurer of such borough, to be paid over to the credit and account of the borough fund of such borough, and the other moiety thereof, with full costs of suit, to any person who will sue for the same in any of his Majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Justices to appoint a clerk, who shall not be clerk of the peace, or an alderman or councillor, nor be concerned in the prosecution of offenders committed by the borough justices.

103. "The council of every borough which shall be desirous that a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be or continue to be holden in and for such borough shall signify the same by petition to his Majesty in council, setting forth the grounds of the application, the state of the gaol, and the salary which they are willing to pay to the recorder in that behalf; and it shall be lawful for his Majesty, if he shall be pleased, thereupon to grant that a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be thenceforward holden in and for such borough, to appoint for such borough, or for any two or more of such boroughs conjointly, a fit person, being a barrister at law of not less than five years' standing, who shall be and be called the recorder of such borough or boroughs, and shall hold such office during his good behaviour, and upon any vacancy in any such office to appoint another

104. "Provided nevertheless, that no recorder or person assigned to keep the peace within any such borough shall be capable of acting as recorder or justice of the peace within such borough until he shall have taken the oaths provided to be taken by justices of the peace, except the oath as to qualification by estate, and until he shall have made before the mayor or before any two or more of the aldermen or councillors of such borough (who is and are hereby authorized and required to administer the same) a declaration in the following form; (that is to say);

"'I A. B. do hereby declare, that I will faithfully and impartially execute the office of recorder [or 'justice of the peace'] for the borough of , according to the best of my judgment and ability.'"

Sessions of the peace to be held for the borough, of which the recorder to be the sole judge (a).

(a) As to the jurisdiction and powers conferred on the borough sessions under this and the subsequent sections, the following cases have been decided:—

A borough, with a grant of quarter sessions under 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, has exclusive jurisdiction to try an appeal against an order of removal made by borough justices. (Reg. v. Salop, (Justices), 1 Gale & D. 146). The borough sessions have jurisdiction to try appeals against orders of removal; and whether or not, since the passing of that statute, they have exclusive jurisdiction over appeals against orders of removal, if they are the next sessions after the order is made, the county sessions have no jurisdiction to try such appeal. (Reg. v. St. Edmund's Sarum (Inhabs.), 1 Gale & D. 137). The parish of B. contains the borough of B., which is not co-extensive with the parish, and which before the Municipal Corporation Act had a quarter sessions, with jurisdiction over the whole parish The borough had not six justices, and therefore the parish had the power of appealing to the county sessions against a poor rate under 1 Geo. 4, c. 36. The Municipal Corporation Act threw the outlying parts of the parish into the county jurisdiction: —Held, that sect. 111 did not take away the power of an inhabitant in the outlying parts of the parish to appeal against a poor's rate to the county sessions, and that the sessions might amend or quash the whole rate (Reg. v. Bridgewater, Inhabs., 2 Per. & D. 586; 10 Ad. & E 751).

5 & 6 Will 4, c. 76.

Recorder not to make or levy county rate, or grant licenses (a).

106. "In the absence of the recorder and deputy recorder, the mayor shall be authorized and required, at the proper times appointed for the holding of such court of quarter sessions of the peace in and for such borough, to open the said court, and to adjourn over the holding of the same, and to respite all recognizances conditioned for appearing at the same, until such further day as such mayor then and there, and so from time to time, shall cause to be proclaimed: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained shall authorize or require any such mayor to sit as a judge of the said court for the trial of offenders, or to do any other act in the character of a judge of such court, save only in opening and adjourning the same, and respiting the said recognizances in manner aforesaid."

Quære, whether a parish, part of which is a borough of exclusive jurisdiction, and part in a county, and which had more than six justices at the time of passing the Municipal Corporation Act, has the power of appeal any where against a poor's rate? Ib.

The recorder of a borough, which has a commission of the peace and a court of quarter sessions, though it is not a county, has power to try an appeal against an order made by justices or parish officers, under stat. 9 Geo IV. c. 38, for the costs of removing an insane pauper to a lunatic asylum. (Reg. v. St. Lawrence, Ludlow, Inhabs., 3 Per. & D. 155; 11 Ad. & E. 172).

The recorder of a municipal sessions may, on ordering costs, refer the taxation of the amount to an officer of the court, but such taxation must be adopted by him during the continuance of the same sessions, and an order for such costs, founded on a subsequent adoption, is invalid. (Reg. v. Long. 1 Gale & D. 367). In counties of cities, and counties of towns, to which a court of quarter sessions has been granted under stat. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, the recorder, by sect. 105, has the powers relating to inspectors of weights and measures given by sect. 17 of stat. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 63, to the magistrates in quarter sessions assembled, although the present jurisdiction of the recorder be limited to a district less extensive than that which the county comprehended up to the time of passing those statutes. (Reg. v. Hull, Recorder, 8 Ad. & E 638).

(See further, as to the jurisdiction of the recorder, and the borough justices, 7 Will IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, ss. 30—35, post, 130).

(a) In a borough, the original charter of which contained a ne intromittant clause, and to which a separate court of quarter sessions had been granted since the stat. 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, an appeal lies from the justices at a special sessions for licensing public houses, under 9 Geo IV. c. 61, to the justices of the county in their quarter sessions, notwithstanding the 111th section of the former act. (Reg. v. Deane, 1 Gale & D. 292).

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

Capital jurisdictions, and all other criminal jurisdictions in boroughs, other than are specified in this act, abolished.

107. "After the 1st day of May, 1836, all powers and jurisdictions to try treasons, capital felonies, and all other criminal jurisdictions whatsoever granted or confirmed by any law, statute, letters patent, grant, or charter whatsoever, to any mayor, bailiff, alderman, recorder, or other corporate or chartered officer, or corporate or chartered justice of the peace whomsoever, in any borough, and all right of any body corporate in any borough, or any of the members thereof, by virtue of any law, statute, letters patent, grant, or charter whatsoever, to elect or nominate any justices to keep the peace in or for any borough, or by any members of any such corporate body to act as such justices of the peace in or for any of the last-named boroughs other than is herein declared, shall cease: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to restrain or prevent the holding of any court of gaol delivery or general or quarter sessions of the peace in and for any borough for which such court may now be holden, until the said 1st day of May, but every such court may be holden in like manner, and with the same powers, until the said 1st day of May, as if this act had not been passed."

Chartered admiralty jurisdictions abolished.

108. "From and after the passing of this act, so much of all laws, statutes, and usages, and so much of all royal and other charters, grants, and letters patent heretofore granted to any borough or body corporate, whereby such borough or any place within the precincts or liberties of the same, or such body corporate, or the freemen or inhabitants of the same, claims or claim to be exempted and released from the jurisdiction and office of the lord high admiral of England, or of the high court of the admiralty of England, or whereby any body corporate, or any mayor, bailiff, recorder, steward, or other chartered or corporate officer of any borough, has or claims anything belonging to the office of admiral, whether or not to be exercised by virtue of any commission to them or any of them to be directed, shall be and the same is hereby repealed: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to alter or affect the jurisdiction and office of the lord warden in his office of admiral of the cinque ports: provided also, that all suits and matters wherein before the passing of this act the rights of any salvors, or any droits or perquisites to the office of admiral belonging were drawn into question, may be continued, heard, determined, and adjudicated upon in like manner as if this act had not passed."

Certain exceptions in 38 Geo. 3, c. 52, repealed.

109. "And whereas an act was passed in the 38th year of his late Majesty George the Third, intituled 'An Act to regulate the Trial of Causes, Indictments, and other Proceedings which arise within the Counties of certain Cities and Towns Corporate within this Kingdom,' but certain cities and counties of cities were excepted out of the operation of the same: and whereas it is expedient to repeal in part the said exceptions; be it therefore enacted, that so much of the last-recited act as provides that nothing therein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the city or county of the city of Bristol, or the city or county of the city of Chester, or to the criminal jurisdiction of the city of Exeter and county of the same city, shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed shall be taken to be a county of a town corporate, and to be within all the provisions of the last-recited act; and that after the 1st day of May, in the year 1836, and until his Majesty shall be pleased to direct a commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery to be executed within any county of a city or town corporate, all bills of indictment for offences committed within such county of a city or town corporate shall be preferred and all proceedings upon such indictments shall be had as in the last-recited act is authorized to be done, and the counties of the cities and towns corporate named in the first column of the Schedule (C.) to this act annexed shall be considered as next adjoining to the county named in conjunction with the same respectively in the second column of the said Schedule (C.)"

Berwick-upon-Tweed to be a county of a town.

As to trial of offences committed in counties of cities and towns corporate.

110. "After the said 1st day of May, 1836, every person who shall then stand committed to take his trial at any court of gaol delivery, general or quarter sessions of the peace for any borough, charged with any offence which the recorder of such borough after the said 1st day of May will not have jurisdiction to try, may be lawfully removed and committed to the gaol or house of correction of the county in which or adjoining to which such borough is situated, there to remain and take his trial at the next court of quarter sessions for such county, if the offence is cognizable by a court of quarter sessions, and if not, then before the judges of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery at their next circuit; and all persons bound by recognizance to prosecute and give evidence against such offenders shall be bound to appear to prosecute and give their evidence at the court at which such offenders shall be tried as aforesaid; and all such recognizances and all depositions relating to such charges shall be transmitted to the proper officer of the court where such offenders shall be tried; and the sheriff, under-sheriff, gaolers, and other officers of the county in which such offenders shall be so tried are hereby authorized and required in every such case to receive every prisoner so committed to their custody, and him safely to keep until delivered by due course of law; and the judges of assize and others named in his Majesty's commissions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, or the justices for the county, as the case may be, in which such offenders shall be tried, are hereby authorized and required to hear and determine all such cases, and to order the payment of the usual and fit expenses of the prosecutors and witnesses, and all other costs and expenses which in like case may be directed to be paid by order of the court."

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

Offenders committed to borough sessions whose jurisdiction is taken away to be tried in adjoining county.

111. "After the said 1st day of May, 1836, the justices assigned or hereafter to be assigned to keep the peace in and for the county in which any borough is situated, to which his Majesty shall not have granted that a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden in and for the same, shall exercise the jurisdiction of justices of the peace in and for such borough as fully as by law they and each of them can or ought to do in and for the said county; and no part of any borough in and for which a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden shall be within the jurisdiction of the justices of any county from which such borough before the passing of this act was exempt; any law, statute, letters patent, charter, grant, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

County justices to have jurisdiction in all boroughs which have not a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace under this act (a).

112. "Within ten days after the grant of a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace to any borough, the council of such borough shall send a copy of such grant, sealed with the seal of the borough, to the clerk of the peace of the county in which such borough or any part thereof is situated; and after the grant of such court to any borough, it shall not be lawful for the justices of the peace of any county wherein such borough or part of such borough is situate to assess any messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments within such borough to any county rate thereafter to be made, but every part of every such borough shall thenceforward be wholly free and discharged from contributing, otherwise than is hereinafter provided, to any rate or assessment of any kind of and for the county in which any part of such borough is situated: provided nevertheless, that all arrears of such rates theretofore made may be levied and collected as if this act had not been passed."

Certain boroughs not to be assessed to county rates (b).

113. "And whereas by an act made in the 7th year of his late Majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for improving the Administration of Criminal Justice in England and Wales,' it was enacted that all sums directed to be paid by virtue of that act in respect of felonies and misdemeanors therein enumerated, committed in liberties, franchises, cities, towns, and places which do not contribute to the payment of any county rate, should be paid as therein is directed: be it therefore enacted, that all sums directed to be paid by virtue of the last-recited act in respect to felonies and such misdemeanors as aforesaid, committed or supposed to have been committed in any borough in which a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden, shall be paid out of the borough fund of such borough, anything in the said act contained notwithstanding; and the order of court shall in every such case be directed to the treasurer of such borough instead of the treasurer of the county."

Treasurers of counties to keep an account of expenses of prosecution of offenders sent by such boroughs for trial at the assizes, and make order on them for payment thereof. In case of difference respecting such account the same to be referred to arbitration, as provided in 5 Geo. 4, c. 85 (a).

114. "The treasurer of every county in England and Wales shall keep an account of all costs arising out of the prosecution, maintenance, and punishment, conveyance and transport of all offenders committed for trial to the assizes in such county from any borough in which a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace shall be holden; and the treasurer of every such county shall, not more than twice in every year, send a copy of the said account to the council of each of the said boroughs, and shall make an order for payment of the same on the council of such borough; and the council of every such borough shall forthwith order the same, with all reasonable charges of making and sending such account, to be paid to the treasurer of such county out of the borough fund; and in case any difference shall arise concerning the said account, it shall be decided by the arbitration of a barrister to be named as is provided in the case of differences with respect to the payment of monies under contracts made by authority of an act made in the 5th year of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for amending an Act of the last Session of Parliament, relating to the building, repairing, and enlarging of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction, and for procuring Information as to the State of all other Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales:' provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or restrain the powers given by the last-mentioned act of contracting with the justices of the peace having authority or jurisdiction in and over any gaol or house of correction of the county wherein or where such borough is situated, or whereto it is adjacent, for the conveyance, support, and maintenance in such last-mentioned gaol or house of correction of pri-

(a) See "Gaols," Vol. III. Under this section, the treasurer of a county may make an order upon the council of a borough, having a separate court of quarter sessions, for the costs arising out of the punishment and maintenance of offenders committed for trial to the county assizes from the borough:—Held, that this clause applied to prisoners committed, in the first instance, to the borough gaol before trial, and, after trial at the assizes, committed to the county prison in execution of their sentences; and that the council was liable, although there was no contract in force, under 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, between the county and borough justices, for the maintenance of such prisoners:—Held, also, that the council was liable, not only for the expenses of food, clothing, and punishment of such prisoners, but for a proportionate share of the general expenses of the county gaol. (Reg. v. Johnson, 2 Per. & D. 610; 10 Ad. & E. 740, S. C.).

An order of county justices, authorizing a contract with the council of a borough for the maintenance of borough prisoners in the county house of correction, in pursuance of the provisions of this declaration, is an order made under the 5 Geo. IV. c. 85, though the town council derive their power of contracting from this act; and, therefore, sect. 132 does prevent the removal of such order by certiorari. A borough, though chartered by the Crown under 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49, (post, 134), and having a grant of quarter sessions, cannot contract with the justices of the next county or division, for the maintenance of borough prisoners in their house of correction, under this section, if the borough has never had a gaol of its own. (Reg. v. Lancashire, (JJ.), 11 Ad. & E. 144).

soners committed thereto from such borough, save only that all such powers shall, after the 1st day of May, 1836, be vested in the council of such borough in the name of the body corporate whose council they are, and in none other; and for the purpose of making such contracts as aforesaid, the council of such borough, and none other, shall have power to make the orders required by the said last-mentioned act to be made by the justices of the borough at the borough sessions." 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76.

115. "In every case in which it shall have been made to appear to the satisfaction of one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state that there is in any borough a gaol or house of correction fit for the confinement of prisoners, the council of any borough shall have the same powers of contracting, in the name of the body corporate whose council they are, with any person or body corporate having the government or ordering of such last-mentioned gaol or house of correction, in like manner as is hereinbefore enacted concerning contracts with justices of the peace having authority or jurisdiction in and over county gaols and houses of correction; and all the provisions of the last-recited act made in the fifth year of his late Majesty shall extend, or as nearly as may be, to all such contracts for the conveyance to and support and maintenance of offenders in such borough, gaol, or house of correction; and in case his Majesty shall have granted to the borough in which such gaol or house of correction shall be situated a separate court of quarter sessions of the peace, such offenders may be tried and sentenced by such court for all offences of which the court has cognisance, and punished accordingly; and all the provisions of the last-recited act made in the fifth year of his late Majesty shall extend as nearly as may be to the trial and punishment of such offenders, and to all acts necessary for such trial or consequent thereon." Council may contract for committing prisoners to the gaol of another borough, if sufficient (a).

116. "And whereas by an act passed in the fourth year of his late Majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relating to the building, repairing, and regulating of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales,' it was provided, That certain cities, towns, and places included in a certain schedule (A.) to the said act annexed should be taken to be within the provisions of the same: and whereas by an act passed in the 5th year of his late Majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for amending an Act of the last Session of Parliament, relating to the building, repairing, and enlarging of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction, and for procuring Information as to the State of all other Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales,' so much of the last-recited act as related to the cities of Canterbury, Lichfield, and Lincoln, was repealed; be it therefore enacted, that the council of every borough named in the last-mentioned schedule (A.) (except the cities of Canterbury, Lichfield, and Lincoln), shall have within their borough all the powers (except in hearing and determining appeals against convictions) which any justices of the peace assembled at their general or quarter sessions in any county in England have within the limits of their commission by virtue of the said last-recited acts or either of them, or as near thereto as the nature of the case will admit; and all things in the said last-recited acts, or either of them, provided to be done at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, shall be done at some quarterly meeting of the council of such borough." Council of certain boroughs to have the same powers under the Acts 4 Geo. 4, c. 64, and 5 Geo. 4, c. 85, as justices of the peace have at their sessions in counties (b).

117. "The treasurer of every county in England and Wales shall keep an account of all sums of money received in aid or on account of the county rate, and of the sum of money expended out of the county rate for other purposes than the costs arising out of the prosecution, Boroughs to pay a proportion of the other county expenditure.

(a) By 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 105, s 1, post, 139, county justices may contract with council of borough in which there is a sufficient gaol for the committal of county prisoners thereto.

Recorders to be sole judges of borough courts in which they act as assessors. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 105.

34. "That in every such borough court of record in which the recorder acts as assessor he shall after the passing of this act be the sole judge; and that the provisions of this act and of the said act for regulating corporations, and also of an act passed in the last session of Parliament, intituled 'An Act for the better Administration of Justice in certain Boroughs,' shall extend to all such courts of which the recorder now acts as assessor, or of which he shall hereafter become the judge, any thing in the last-mentioned acts or either of them to the contrary notwithstanding."

Jurors may be summoned more than once yearly when all who are qualified have been once summoned.

37. "That the several councils of the cities of Canterbury, Lichfield, and Lincoln, and of every other borough named in the schedules to the said act for regulating corporations, shall have all the powers for building, enlarging, and repairing any gaol or house of correction belonging to their city or borough respectively which the justices having the government or ordering of any gaol or house of correction in any city or borough within the provisions of an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relating to the building, repairing, and regulating of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales,' or of an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for amending an Act of the last Session of Parliament relating to the building, repairing, and enlarging of certain Gaols and Houses of Correction, and for procuring Information as to the State of all other Gaols and Houses of Correction in England and Wales,' had in general or quarter sessions before the passing of the said act for regulating corporations; subject nevertheless to any alteration made in the last-recited acts, or either of them, by an act made in the fifth and sixth years of his Majesty, intituled 'An Act for effecting greater Uniformity of Practice in the Government of the several Prisons in England and Wales, and for appointing Inspectors of Prisons in Great Britain,' and all things by any act of Parliament provided to be done at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, in relation to the building, enlarging, or repairing any such gaol or house of correction, shall be done at some quarterly meeting of the council of the city or borough: provided always, that before the building, enlarging, or repairing any such gaol or house of correction the expediency thereof shall first be certified under the hand of the recorder or other judge of such city or borough: provided also, that all rules and regulations made for the government of any prisoners confined in any such gaol or house of correction shall be approved by two or more justices acting in and for that city or borough before they shall be transmitted to the secretary of state."

(a) This section amounts to a partial repeal of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 132, (ante, 119), and has been held to be retrospective in its operation. Under that section, therefore, the town council may apply for a certiorari to remove an order of a previous council. The payments were made by the treasurer, and his accounts audited; afterwards stat. 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, passed. The court, under this section, upon the affidavit of a burgess, who applied in pursuance of the instructions of a subsequent town council, granted a certiorari to bring up the orders of the previous town council, and quashed them. Receipts for monies, and application thereof.

48. "That in every case the receipt of the person or persons authorized to give a receipt to the said company or society, by any instrument under the corporate seal of the said borough, and also signed and sealed by the clerk to the charitable trustees, shall be an effectual discharge to the said company or society; and all monies so paid shall be applied to the uses and in the manner provided by the said act; that is to say, so much of the said monies as may be held on charitable trusts shall be paid over to the charitable trustees of the said borough, and so much as the said body corporate shall be entitled to beneficially shall be paid over to the treasurer of the borough, and applied as directed by the said act as part of the borough fund; but no such public company or society as aforesaid shall be bound to see to the due application thereof, or to the validity of the appointment of the clerk to the charitable trustees, or to the execution of any such instrument by any of the said trustees, or to inquire whether or not the said stocks, funds, securities, or monies are charged with or held upon any charitable trust; and every person authorized to receive any monies under this act shall account to the council and to the charitable trustees respectively for all monies so received by him, and the council and trustees respectively shall have the same remedies against any such person refusing or wilfully neglecting so to account as are provided by the said act for regulating corporations, in the case of a treasurer or other officer appointed by the council refusing or wilfully neglecting to account, as provided by the said act, during the continuance of his office, or within three months after the expiration of his office."

Powers of the act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, may be granted by the crown to towns or boroughs, though not corporate.

49. "That if the inhabitant householders of any town or borough in England or Wales shall petition his Majesty to grant to them a charter of incorporation, it shall be lawful for his Majesty, by any such charter, if he shall think fit by the advice of his privy council to grant the same, to extend to the inhabitants of any such town or borough within the district to be set forth in such charter all the powers and provisions of the said act for regulating corporations, whether such town or borough be or be not a corporate town or borough, or be or be not named in either of the schedules to the said act: provided nevertheless, that notice of every such petition, and of the time when it shall please his Majesty to order the same be taken into consideration by his privy council, shall be published in the London Gazette one month at least before such petition shall be so considered, but such publication shall not need to be by royal proclamation."

The following case has been decided with respect to the powers vested in her Majesty in council by this section:—A petition, which had been agreed upon at a meeting of the rate-payers of the parliamentary borough of Manchester, convened by public advertisement, and which was in fact attended by 1000, and which petition was afterwards signed by 4000 inhabitant householders of the borough, was presented to her Majesty, praying for the grant of a charter of incorporation to the inhabitants of such borough, under the provisions of the stat. 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49. Afterwards, and before the day appointed for this petition being taken into consideration by the privy council, a counter petition, signed by 6000 of such inhabitant householders, was presented to her Majesty, praying her not to grant such charter. The whole number of inhabitant householders of the borough amounted to 48,000:—Held, (on error in the Exchequer Chamber)—first, that the second petition did not necessarily, in point of law, deprive her Majesty of the power to grant such charter upon the first petition; but that, whether the first petition was, under all the circumstances, the petition of the inhabitant householders of the borough, so as to authorize the exercise of the powers conferred by the 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49, was a question of fact for a jury; and that the determination of the privy council to advise the crown to grant the charter upon such petition was not conclusive of its validity. Secondly, that the grant of such charter of incorporation is an exercise of the common-law prerogative of the crown, although it also extends to the new corporation the powers of the Municipal Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, which the crown has power to do only by virtue of the 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49. Thirdly, that such charter may be granted to a part only (to be defined therein) of the borough, from the whole of which the petition emanated, and need not be conferred upon the inhabitant householders of the whole borough. Fourthly, that the crown may, by its common-law prerogative, appoint, in such charter, the number, and set out the limits, of the wards in the new borough. And, lastly, that the crown may also, by such charter, delegate to an individual the power of appointing the first members of such corporation; or may, at all events, appoint a person to ascertain the individuals who compose the class to whom the charter is granted. (Lord Denman, C. J., and Williams, J., dissentientibus). (Rutter v. Chapman, 8 Mee. & W. 1).

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78.

Where a charter of incorporation had been granted under this section, the court discharged a rule for quo warranto information at the instance of a private relator against a coroner appointed under the charter, on the ground that all the objections taken to his title applied equally to the charter itself, and that the charter could not be attacked through him. (Reg. v. Taylor, 3 Per. & D. 652; 11 Ad. & E. 505).

Business to be transacted at general or quarter sessions for the counties, &c., in which boroughs are situate.

50. "That, in all boroughs and places where general or quarter sessions of the peace have under and by virtue of the said recited act ceased or been discontinued to be holden, all such business, matters, and things which, under or by virtue of any general or local act of Parliament, or any usage or custom, ought or were usually heard, decided, or transacted at such general or quarter sessions by the justices of the peace, with the assistance of any juries there assembled, shall and may hereafter be heard, decided, and transacted by the general or quarter sessions of the peace for the counties, ridings, or divisions, liberties, or jurisdictions in which such boroughs are situate, and by the justices of the peace and juries there assembled respectively."

5 & 6 Vict. c 111.

Doubts having arisen as to the validity of certain charters granted in pursuance of the provisions of this and the former act, the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 111 [12th August, 1842] was passed, which, after reciting that since the passing of an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty, intituled "An Act to provide for the regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales," charters of incorporation have been granted to certain boroughs in England, in pursuance of the provisions of the said act, and of the acts afterwards passed for amending the said act, and that doubts have arisen respecting the validity of the said charters, and it was expedient that such doubts be removed, enacts, "That the said several charters of incorporation, and also all grants of separate courts of sessions of the peace, issued or granted to any of the said boroughs, and all acts or proceedings done or had in pursuance thereof respectively before the passing of this act, shall be deemed good and lawful from the time of such several grants, acts, and proceedings respectively."

2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64.

By stat. 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 103, intituled "An Act to make temporary Provision for the Boundaries of certain Boroughs," [20th August, 1836], reciting "Whereas by the provisions of an act passed in the last session of Parliament, intituled 'An Act to provide for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales,' the boundaries of certain boroughs named in the schedules (A.) and (B.) to the said act annexed were made to include all the liberties of such boroughs and large tracts of land beyond the limits of the towns, and which ought not to be included therein;" be it therefore enacted, "That so much of the said act for regulating corporations as provides that the metes and bounds of every borough and county named in the said act shall include the whole of the liberties of such borough and county by land and by water is hereby repealed; and that, notwithstanding any thing in the said act contained, no part of any county, or of the liberties of any borough, town, or city named in the first sections of the schedules (A.) and (B.) annexed to the said act for regulating corporations, which before the passing of the said act was not part of such borough, town, or city, or within the parliamentary boundary of such borough, town, or city, shall be taken to be within the metes and bounds of any such borough, town, or city, or within the county of such borough, town, or city, or to be within the jurisdiction of the justices of such borough, town, or city, or county of a borough, town, or city; and that no part of any county, or of the liberties of any borough, town or city named in the second section of the said schedules (A.) and (B.), which was not part of such borough, town, or city before the passing of an act passed in the 2nd and 3rd year of his Majesty, intituled 'An Act to settle and describe the Divisions of Counties, and the Limits of Cities

(a) The construction put upon this act, as to the mode of determining the present boundaries of cities and boroughs, seems to be, that those parts of each county of a city or borough which were in fact the town or city itself, subject to its ordinary municipal government, bearing its ordinary municipal burdens, and entitled to its ordinary municipal privileges before the passing of the 2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 64, are now alone to be deemed liable to the municipal burdens imposed by the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76. (Mayor of Coventry v. Lythall, Exch. T. I. Of Prosecutor and Witnesses in Prosecutions by Indictment.

Prosecutor's costs at common law.

At common law, as it is a general principle that the King neither pays nor receives costs, and as an indictment, though carried on by an individual, is always considered as his suit, no costs are payable, whatever may be the event of the prosecution (Hullock, 557); and therefore even in cases where the costs are afterwards allowed, throughout the whole of the proceedings the prosecutor must defray his own expenses, and the court will not allow him to proceed in formâ pauperis, unless some special ground be laid for the application. (3 Burr. 1308; Com. Dig. Formâ Pauperis). By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 22 and 23, &c., as will be presently seen, this discouragement to the prosecution of offenders is materially removed.

Of witnesses in civil proceedings.

It seems that in civil proceedings a witness is not obliged to attend unless his expenses are tendered to him, pursuant to stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9; and if after such tender he neglect to appear, he may be fined according to the directions of that statute, or punished by attachment for a contempt of the court, as the circumstances of the case shall appear to be. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; Ld. Raym. 1529; 2 Stra. 1054, 1150).

In criminal proceedings.

But in criminal proceedings the demands of public justice supersede every consideration of private inconvenience, and witnesses are by the common law bound unconditionally to attend the trial upon which they may be summoned, and be bound over to give their evidence. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; R. v. Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321). To persons of opulence and public spirit this obligation cannot either be hard or injurious, but indigent witnesses grew weary of expensive attendance, and frequently bore their own charges to their great hindrance and loss; and Lord Hale complains of the want of power in judges to allow witnesses their charges as a great defect in this part of judicial administration. (2 Hale, 282: see "Evidence," Vol. II.)

But now, by the stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, the costs of prosecutors and witnesses are allowed in most criminal cases.

By statute 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, courts may order payment of the expenses of prosecutions for felonies (a).

And with regard to the payment of the expenses of prosecutions for felony, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64 (a), s. 22, enacts, "that the court before which any person shall be prosecuted or tried for any felony is hereby authorized and empowered, at the request of the prosecutor or any other person, who shall appear on recognizance or subpœna to prosecute or give evidence against any person accused of any felony, to order payment unto the prosecutor of the costs and expenses which such prosecutor shall incur in preferring the indictment, and also payment to the prosecutor and witnesses for the prosecution, of such sums of money as to the court shall seem reasonable and sufficient to reimburse such prosecutor and witnesses for the expenses they shall have severally incurred in attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates and the grand jury, and in otherwise carrying on such prosecution, and also to compensate them for their trouble and loss of time therein; and, although no bill of indictment be preferred, it shall still be lawful for the court, where any person shall, in the opinion of the court, bonâ fide have attended the court in obedience to any such recognizance or subpœna, to order payment unto such person of such sum of money as to the court shall seem reasonable and sufficient to reimburse such person for the expenses which he or she shall have bonâ fide incurred by reason of attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and by reason of such recognizance or subpœna, and also to compensate such person for trouble and loss of time; and the amount of expenses of attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and the compensation for trouble and loss of time therein shall be ascertained by the certificate of such magistrate or magistrates, granted before the trial or attendance in court, if such magistrate or magistrates shall think fit to grant the same (b); and that the amount of all the other expenses and Allowance to persons attending on recognizance, where no bill is preferred.

(a) This act repeals the stat. 25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 11, the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 3, s. 3, and the stat. 18 Geo. III. c. 19, ss. 7, 8, and also the stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 70, with the exception of the 7th section, which is still in force, that section relating only to the mode of prosecuting disorderly houses, post, "Disorderly House."

(b) This provision that the compensation for trouble and loss of time in attending before the magistrate, and compensation shall be ascertained by the proper officer of the court, subject nevertheless to the regulations to be established in the manner hereinafter mentioned."

23. After reciting that "for want of power in the court to order payment of the expenses of any prosecution for a misdemeanor, many individuals are deterred, by the expense, from prosecuting persons guilty of misdemeanors, who thereby escape the punishment due to their offences;" it is enacted, "that where any prosecutor or other person shall appear before any court on recognizance or subpœna, to prosecute or give evidence against any person indicted of any assault with intent to commit felony, of any attempt to commit felony, of any riot, of any misdemeanor for receiving any stolen property, knowing the same to have been stolen, of any assault upon a peace officer in the execution of his duty, or upon any person acting in aid of such officer, of any neglect or breach of duty as a peace officer, of any assault committed in pursuance of any conspiracy to raise the rate of wages, of knowingly and designedly obtaining any property by false pretences, of wilful and indecent exposure of the person, of wilful and corrupt perjury, or of subornation of perjury, every such court is hereby authorized and empowered to order payment of the costs and expenses of the prosecutor and witnesses for the prosecution, together with a compensation for their trouble and loss of time, in the same manner as courts are hereinbefore authorized and empowered to order the same in cases of felony; and although no bill of indictment be preferred, it shall still be lawful for the court, where any person shall have bonâ fide attended the court, in obedience to any such recognizance, to order payment of the expenses of such person, together with a compensation for his or her trouble and loss of time, in the same manner as in cases of felony: provided, that in cases of misdemeanor, the power of ordering the payment of expenses and compensation shall not extend to the attendance before the examining magistrate."

Order of payment to be made out by clerk of assize, &c., and paid by county treasurer (b).

24. "Every order for payment to any prosecutor or other person as aforesaid, shall be forthwith made out and delivered by the proper officer of the court unto such prosecutor or other person, upon being paid for the same the sum of one shilling for the prosecutor, and sixpence for each other person, and no more; and except in the cases hereinafter provided for, shall be made upon the treasurer of the county, riding, or division in which the offence shall have been committed, or shall have been supposed to have been committed, who is hereby authorized and required, upon sight of every such order, forthwith to pay to the person named therein, or to any one duly authorized to receive the same on his or her behalf, the money in such order mentioned, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts."

In places not contributing to county rate (c).

25. After reciting that "felonies and such misdemeanors as are hereinbefore enumerated may be committed in liberties, franchises, also the expenses before him, are to be ascertained by his certificate, granted before the time of the trial, if he shall think fit to grant such certificate, is new.

(a) This provision is wholly new. It will be observed it is not unlike the 22nd section, relating to costs &c. in felonies, except that there is no power of allowing expenses or compensation for the attendance before the magistrate.

(b) This provision is a re-enactment of the 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 6, which, together with the 18 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 8, are repealed by the 7 Geo. IV.

(c) This provision is nearly the same as those of the 9th and 10th sections of the 58 Geo. III. c. 70, now repealed. It should seem that this provision virtually repeals the 60 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3.

By stat. 60 Geo. III. c. 14, s. 3, "in all cases of any commitment to the county gaol, under the authority of this act, all the expenses to which the county may be put by reason of such commitment, together with all such expenses of the prosecution and witnesses as the judge shall be pleased to allow by virtue of any law now in force, shall cities, towns, and places which do not contribute to the payment of any county rate, some of which raise a rate in the nature of a county rate, and others have neither any such rate, nor any fund applicable to similar purposes; and it is just that such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, and places should be charged with all costs, expenses, and compensations ordered by virtue of this act, in respect of felonies and such misdemeanors committed therein respectively;" enacts, "that all sums directed to be paid by virtue of this act, in respect of felonies and of such misdemeanors as aforesaid, committed or supposed to have been committed in such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, and places, shall be paid out of the rate in the nature of a county rate, or out of any fund applicable to similar purposes, where there is such a rate or fund, by the treasurer or other officer having the collection or disbursement of such rate or fund; and where there is no such rate or fund in such liberties, franchises, cities, towns, or places, shall be paid out of the rate or fund for the relief of the poor of the parish, township, district, or precinct therein, where the offence was committed, or supposed to have been committed, by the overseers or other officers having the collection or disbursement of such last-mentioned rate or fund; and the order of court shall in every such case be directed to such treasurer, overseers, or other officers respectively, instead of the treasurer of the county, riding, or division, as the case may require."

Regulation of rates of allowance (a).

26. "For the better regulation of costs and expenses in the cases aforesaid, and for preventing abuses in respect thereof," enacts, "that it shall be lawful for justices of the peace of any county, riding, or division, or of any liberty, franchise, city, town, or place chargeable with costs be borne and paid by the said town, liberty, soke or place within which such offence shall have been committed, in like manner, and to be raised by the same means whereby such expenses would have been raised and paid if the offender had been prosecuted and tried within the limits of such exclusive jurisdiction; and that the judge, or court of oyer and terminer and general gaol delivery, shall have full power and authority to make such order touching such costs and expenses as such judge or court shall deem proper; and also to direct by whom and in what manner such expenses shall in the first instance be paid and borne, and in what manner the same shall be repaid and raised within the limits of such exclusive jurisdiction, in case there be no treasurer or other officer within the same, who by the custom and usage of such place ought to pay the same in the first instance."

(a) This provision is new. It has been observed by Mr. Carrington that this enactment, if followed up by the justices at the sessions fixing a scale of allowances, as proposed, might produce inconvenience, and this on two grounds:—1st, because the justices at sessions can know very little about what a criminal prosecution ought to cost, and the allowance in no two counties would be similar; and, 2nd, because nothing can vary more than the expenses of different cases; and therefore each must stand on its own peculiar circumstances. What scale of allowances could meet at all equally a case of stealing a pocket-handkerchief and an important case of burglary against several prisoners, founded on circumstantial evidence, to be deposed to by forty or fifty witnesses, and explained to the counsel in a brief of twenty sheets? Any scale of allowances fairly applicable to the one, would be absurd if applied to the other; and therefore there ought, from the nature of things, to be a discretion, vested somewhere, in allowing the expenses in each particular case; and it may be said, (no doubt very unjustly), that as the justices are all payers of the county rate, they will fix the most niggardly scale of allowances; and therefore, in all cases of real importance to the justice of the country, in all cases where a great crime has been committed, and the guilt of the parties is difficult to be traced, the prosecutor, after receiving an order for his expenses, and the thanks of the court for having done his duty to the country, will find that he has not only been robbed to a large amount, but that the allowance of expenses is so small as to leave him 30*l.* or 40*l.* out of pocket for his public spirit. (Carr. C. L. 114).

and expenses under the provision aforesaid, in quarter sessions assembled, to establish, and from time to time to alter, such regulations as to the rate of any costs and expenses thereafter to be allowed by virtue of this act, as to them shall seem just and reasonable; which regulations having received the approbation and signature of one justice of gaol delivery or of great sessions for the county wherein any such regulations shall have been established, shall be binding on all persons whatsoever."

Regulations to be signed by a judge.

Admiralty prosecutions.

27. "For enabling the High Court of Admiralty to order the payment of the costs and expenses of prosecutors and witnesses, and compensation for their trouble and loss of time, in cases in which other courts have a like power under this act," enacts, "that it shall be lawful for the judge of the said Court of Admiralty, in every case of felony, and in every case of misdemeanor of the denominations hereinbefore enumerated, committed upon the high seas, to order the assistant to the counsel for the affairs of the Admiralty and navy to pay such costs, expenses, and compensation to prosecutors and witnesses, in like manner as other courts may order the treasurer of the county to pay the same; and such assistant is hereby authorized and required, upon sight of every such order, forthwith to pay to the person named therein, or to any one duly authorized to receive the same on his or her behalf, the money in such order mentioned, and shall be allowed the same in his accounts." See ante, "Admiralty."

4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 36. Central Criminal Court.

The 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 36, s. 12, empowers the Central Criminal Court to order the costs and expenses of prosecutors and witnesses, allowable under the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, to be paid by the treasurer of the county in which the offence was committed.

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76. In corporations.

By the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 113 (ante, "Corporations," p. 57), all sums directed to be paid by the above enactments of 7 Geo. IV. in respect of felonies and such misdemeanors as therein mentioned, committed in any borough in which a separate quarter sessions shall be holden, shall be paid out of the borough fund, and the order of the court shall in such case be directed to the treasurer of such borough.

Decisions and observations on the foregoing enactments.

It will be observed that these provisions of the 7 Geo. IV. do not allow the expenses of apprehending the prisoner, as was the case under the 58 Geo. III. but only his expenses, loss of time, &c. "in attending before the examining magistrate or magistrates, and the grand jury, and in otherwise carrying on such prosecution." The 28th, 29th, and 30th sections of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, however, in some respects supply this omission by allowing superior courts to grant rewards to parties active in apprehending offenders. See this, "Rewards," Vol. V.

It seems that the above enactments meant to give costs to those parties only who have previously gone before a magistrate, and that they do not apply to cases where an indictment is preferred after a magistrate has dismissed the complaint. (See per Littledale, J., 3 Ad. & Ell. 416).

And it is questionable whether under this statute a prosecutor who is not bound over to prosecute at the assizes is entitled to costs at all, (see R. v. Jeyes, 3 Ad. & Ell. 416, S. C.); but in such a case, if the witnesses be subpœnaed, the court of assize may grant their expenses under the act. (Per Lord Denman, C. J., and Littledale, J. id.)

But under sect. 22, the court may, in case of felony, allow the costs of the prosecutor and witnesses, though they are not under recognizances. (Reg. v. Butterwick, 2 M. & Rob. 196).

The prosecutor in a case of perjury, who has included his name in a subpœna, is entitled to his costs as prosecutor, though he is not bound over to prosecute by a magistrate, and he is not limited to his expenses incurred as a witness only. (R. v. Sheering, 7 Carr. & P. 440).

A party who is bound over to prosecute at a superior court by a court of quarter sessions, is entitled to his expenses under the statute. (R. v. Paine, 7 C. & P. 135).

An indictment for endeavouring to conceal the birth of a child is not within the above act, and no expenses can be allowed. (Anon., Lewin, C. C. 45).

1. Of Prosecutor, &c.

An indictment for an indecent assault, with intent to incite to unnatural practices, is not within sect. 23, and the prosecutor is therefore not entitled to his costs from the county. (Reg. v. Johns, 7 Law J. Rep. (N. S.) M. C. 92).

The enactments do not apply where the indictment has been removed into King's Bench by certiorari. (R. v. Kelsey, 28 April, 1832, K. B.; R. v. Richards, 8 B. & Cres. 420; 2 Man. & R. 405; R. v. Treasurer of Exeter, 6 M. & Ry. 167).

And where an indictment for a riot was preferred at the quarter sessions, and removed into the King's Bench by certiorari at the instance of the prosecutor, and the case was tried at Nisi Prius, the prosecutor was under no recognizance, and he caused himself and his witnesses to be subpœnaed, and defrayed all their and his own expenses, it was held, that neither the court of Nisi Prius nor the King's Bench could award costs under the above statute. (R. v. Johnson, 1827, Carr. C. L. 110; R. & M. C. C. 173, S. C.; and see R. v. Richards, 8 B. & Cres. 420).

But if an indictment for a misdemeanor be postponed on the motion of the defendant, he must pay the costs; but the prosecutor, unless a witness, will not be entitled to any remuneration for his loss of time or attendance. (R. v. Doyle, 1 Esp. Rep. 125).

In misdemeanors, not included in the 23rd section of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, if the defendant submits to a verdict upon a general understanding that he is not to be brought up for judgment, the prosecutor will not be entitled to costs without an express agreement respecting them. (R. v. Rawson, 2 B. & Cres. 592).

The prosecutor and his witnesses, being bound over, attended at the assizes and preferred the indictment which was found. The prisoner, who had been discharged by mistake, had absconded. Mr. Justice Taunton said, that under the authority of the word "prosecute" by the statute, he thought that he might order the expenses; but that if no bill had been preferred, he thought he should have had no authority. (R. v. Robey, 5 C. & P. 552).

And where the prisoner in a case of felony was at large and did not appear, the expenses of the prosecutor and witnesses, who had been bound over to appear by the coroner, were allowed. (R. v. Flannings, Lewin, C. C. 133).

If the trial be postponed at the instance of the prosecutor, in an indictment for felony, on account of the illness of a witness, the prisoner is never required to pay the costs of the prosecutor. (R. v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 591).

Where the trial of such an indictment is postponed, the court will not make any order for the expenses until after the trial has actually taken place. (Id.)

The usual expenses of prosecution may be allowed by the proper officers of the court; but the fees attendant on the examination and the allowance to the prosecutor and his witnesses on attending before the magistrate can only be allowed on the production of the certificate mentioned in the above statute; and the court has no power to allow the expenses of witnesses attending before the coroner previous to the indictment. (R. v. Rees, 5 C. & P. 302; R. v. Taylor, id. 301).

Costs to be paid by the treasurer.

If the treasurer refuse to obey the order, an attachment or indictment may be preferred against him, but a mandamus will not lie. (R. v. Treasurer of Surrey, 1 Chit. Rep. 650). A motion was made for a rule to shew cause why a mandamus should not issue to the defendant to command him to pay the sum of 5*s.* to one Kinsey, pursuant to an order of the borough sessions, as an allowance for his expenses as a witness in attending a prosecution for felony carried on in that court. The application was founded on the 53 Geo. III. c. 70. But the court said that 18 Geo. 3, c. 19. Except where the penalty amounts to 5*l.*, or upwards.

Sect. 2. "Upon the conviction of any person or persons upon any penal statute or statutes, where the penalty or penalties shall amount to or exceed the sum of five pounds, the said costs shall be deducted by the said justice or justices, according to his or their discretion, out of the said penalty or penalties, so that the said deduction shall not exceed one-fifth part of the said penalty or penalties; and the remainder of the said penalty or penalties shall be paid to, or divided among, the person or persons who would have been entitled to the whole of the penalty or penalties in case this act had not been made."

But in several instances, even where the penalty exceeds 5*l.* the act of Parliament creating the penalty also gives costs.

Sessions to make regulations

Sect. 9. "It shall and may be lawful for his Majesty's justices of the peace, in and for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, franchise or liberty, in quarter sessions assembled, to lay down or alter, from time to time, such rules and regulations, as to any costs or charges thereafter to be allowed to any person whatsoever by virtue of any part of this act, for the better carrying the intent of any part of this act into execution, and for the preventing any unnecessary expense, as to them shall seem most just and reasonable; which rules and regulations, having received the approbation and signature of one or more of his Majesty's judges of oyer and terminer, or general gaol delivery, at the assizes for the county wherein such rules and regulations shall have been made, shall be binding, and not otherwise, on all persons whatsoever; and no person whatsoever shall be allowed any greater sum of money, by virtue of this act, than according to the said rules and regulations so approved of as aforesaid, any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

The amount of the costs should be specified in the order or conviction, the justices having no power to order a party to pay costs to be taxed by their clerk or officer. (Sellwood v. Mount, 1 Gale & D. 358; Lock v. Sellwood, ib., 366; and see Reg. v. Long, 1 Gale & D. 367).

Cottages.

What.

COTTAGE (Sax. Cote), is a small house for habitation, without any land belonging to it.

31 Eliz. c 7.

By stat. 31 Eliz. c. 7, cottages were prohibited to be erected without laying at least four acres of land to the same, and divers other restrictions were thereby enjoined; but the same was repealed by stat. 15 Geo. III. c. 32, setting forth that the said statute of 31 Eliz. had laid the industrious poor under great difficulties to procure habitations, and tended very much to lessen population, and in divers other respects was inconvenient to the labouring part of the nation in general.

15 Geo 3, c. 32.

2 W. 4, c. 42.

By the 2 Will. IV. c. 42, intituled "An Act to authorize (in Parishes inclosed under any Act of Parliament) the letting of the Poor Allotments in small Portions to industrious Cottagers," [1st June, 1832], reciting "whereas in parishes inclosed under acts of Parliament there are in many cases allotments made for the benefit of the poor, chiefly with a view to fuel, which are now comparatively useless and unproductive: and whereas it would tend much to the welfare and happiness of the poor if those allotments could be let at a fair rent, and in small portions, to industrious cottagers of good character, while the distribution of fuel might be augmented by appropriating the said rents to the purchase of an additional quantity;" it is therefore enacted, "that it shall and may be lawful for the trustees of the said allotments, together with the churchwardens and overseers of the poor in parish vestry assembled, and they are hereby required, to let portions of any such allotment, not less than one fourth of a statute acre, and not exceeding one such acre, to any one individual, according to their discretion, as a yearly occupation from Michaelmas to Michaelmas, (and at such rent as land of the same quality is usually let for in the said parish), to such industrious cottagers of good character, being day labourers or journeymen legally settled in the said parish, and dwelling within or near its bounds, as shall apply for the same in the manner hereinafter mentioned."

2 Will 4, c. 42.

Trustees and parish officers in vestry assembled may let portions of poor allotments to industrious cottagers.

2. "Provided also, and be it further enacted, that the person hiring the same shall be held bound to cultivate it in such a manner as shall preserve the land in a due state of fertility."

Land to be duly cultivated.

3. "For the purpose of carrying this act into effect a vestry shall be held in the first week in September in every year, of which ten days' notice shall be given in the usual manner, at which vestry the trustees of the said allotments may attend and vote, if they shall so think fit, and at which vestry, or some adjournment thereof, any industrious cottager of good character who may desire to rent such portion of land as aforesaid may apply for the same; and the said vestry are hereby required, taking into consideration the character and circumstances of the applicant, to determine the case, either by rejecting his application, or by making an order that he shall be permitted to occupy such portion of the poor allotment, being not less than one fourth of a statute acre nor exceeding one such acre, as the said vestry in their discretion shall determine, and upon the terms hereinbefore enacted; and the said order of vestry shall be held to all intents and purposes to be a sufficient title and authority to such applicant to enter into the occupation of such land at the time therein appointed."

Vestry to be held annually to receive applications.

Order of vestry to authorize occupation.

4. "Provided always, and be it further enacted, that the rent shall be reserved and payable to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, on behalf of the vestry, in one gross sum for the whole year, and shall be paid to one or either of them at the end of the year's occupation."

Payment of rent.

5. "If the rent of such portion of land shall at any time be four weeks in arrear, or if at the end of any one year of occupation it shall be the opinion of the vestry that the land has not been duly cultivated, so as to fulfil the useful and benevolent purposes of this act, then and in such case the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any or either of them, with the consent of the vestry, may serve a notice to quit upon the occupier of such portion of land; whereupon the said occupier shall deliver up possession of the same to the churchwardens and overseers aforesaid, or any or either of them, within one week after the said notice has been duly served upon him."

If rent is in arrear, or land not duly cultivated, tenant may be evicted.

6. "If any person to whom such portion of land as aforesaid shall have been let for his or her own occupation, shall refuse to quit and to deliver up possession thereof when thereto required according to the terms of this act, or if any other person or persons shall unlawfully enter upon or take or hold possession of any such land, it shall be lawful for the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any or either of them, to exhibit a complaint against the person so in possession of such land before two of his Majesty's justices of the peace, who are hereby authorized and required to issue a summons, under their hands and seals, to the person against whom such complaint shall be made, to appear before them at a time and place appointed therein; and such justices are hereby required and empowered upon the appearance of the defendant before them, or upon proof on oath that such summons has been duly served upon him, or left at his usual place of residence, or if there should have been any difficulty in finding such usual place of residence, then upon proof on oath of such difficulty, and that such summons has been affixed on the door of the parish church of the said parish in which such land is situated, and in any extra-parochial place on some public building or other conspicuous place therein, to proceed to hear and determine the matter of such complaint, and if they shall find and adjudge the same to be true, then by warrant under their hands and seals to cause possession of the land in question to be delivered to the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or to some of them."

Arrears of rent how to be recovered.

7. "All arrears of rent for the said portions of land shall be recoverable by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any of them, on behalf of the vestry, by application to two of his Majesty's justices of the peace in petty sessions assembled, who shall thereupon summon the party complained against, and after hearing what he has to allege, should they find any rent to be due, they are required to issue a warrant under their hands and seals to levy the same upon the goods and chattels of the person from whom the said rent shall be due and owing."

Application of rent.

8. "The rent of the said portions of land shall be applied by the vestry in the purchase of fuel, to be distributed in the winter season among the poor parishioners legally settled and resident in or near the said parish."

Power to exchange, for greater convenience of cottagers

9. "If any of the said allotments shall be found to lie at an inconvenient distance from the residences of the cottagers, it shall be lawful for the vestry, by an order made to that effect, to let such allotment, or any part thereof, for the best rent that can be procured for the same, and to hire in lieu thereof for the purposes of this act land of equal value more favourably situated."

No habitations to be erected.

10. "No habitations shall be erected on the portions of land demised under this act, either at the expense of the parish or by the individuals renting the same."

Extending powers and provisions of this act to 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 42, and c. 59.

11. "And whereas by two acts of the first and second years of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled 'An Act to amend an Act of the Fifty-ninth Year of his Majesty King George the Third, for the Relief and Employment of the Poor,' and the other intituled 'An Act to enable the Churchwardens and Overseers to inclose Lands belonging to the Crown, for the Benefit of poor Persons residing in the Parish in which such Crown Land is situated,' power is given, under certain restrictions, to inclose any quantity not exceeding fifty acres of waste land and crown land respectively, for the use and benefit of the poor; be it further enacted, that in any parish where such inclosure shall exist or shall hereafter take place, or where land shall in any other manner be found appropriated for the general benefit of the poor of any parish, then and in such cases the powers and provisions of this act shall be held to apply, in so far as the same may be found applicable."

9 Geo. 4, c. 43. Division of counties.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 43, intituled, "An Act for the better Regulation of Divisions in the several Counties in England and Wales," after reciting, that "whereas by divers acts now in force it is enacted, that certain matters and things, in the same respectively mentioned, shall be transacted and determined within the divisions or limits within which the same shall arise, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling within or near to, or usually acting within, such divisions or limits respectively: and whereas the boundaries of such divisions or limits are in some instances uncertain, and in many have become inconvenient to the inhabitants within the same, from the change or increase of trade or population, or from other causes: and whereas doubts have arisen as to the authority by which such divisions or limits may from time to time be constituted, defined, or altered; and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and due provision made for the constituting, defining, and regulating from time to time such divisions or limits as the convenience of the inhabitants within the same may require;" it is enacted, "that at any time or times after the Michaelmas quarter sessions next following the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace for any county, riding, or division in England or Wales, having a separate commission of the peace, to transmit to the clerk of the peace a statement in writing, signed by such justices, of the parishes, tithings, townships, and places within the same, which, in the opinion of such justices, would form together a convenient and a proper division within and for which special sessions should thenceforward be held; or if any parishes, tithings, townships, or places, which, in the opinion of such justices, ought to be annexed, for the same purposes, to any other division in the said county than those or that of which at the time of making such statement they form part; and that every such statement shall, among other things, set forth within what existing divisions or division, limits or limit, the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places enumerated in the same, are situated or deemed to be; and also whether one or more and what existing divisions or limits will be altered by such proposed new divisions, or by the change of any place or places from one division to another; and also the names of such justices of the peace as at the date of such statement are usually resident or acting as such within the boundaries of such proposed new division."

Justices to forward to clerk of peace a statement of the townships, places, &c. that would form a proper division for which special sessions should be held.

Sect. 2. "At the quarter sessions next following the receipt of every such statement, setting forth such particulars as are above enumerated, and not otherwise, the clerk of the peace shall and he is hereby required to lay the same before such justices of the peace in such sessions assembled; and the justices of the peace for such county, riding, or division, having such separate commission of the peace, shall and they are hereby required (except in the cases hereinafter provided for) to proceed, at the quarter sessions next following the laying of such statement before them as aforesaid, to the consideration thereof, and at their discretion to adopt the same wholly or in part, or to reject the same altogether, or to adjourn their determination thereupon to the next or any succeeding quarter sessions."

Statement to be laid before justices at the next quarter sessions, who are to adopt or reject same.

9 Geo. 4, c. 43.

Clerk of peace to advertise statement and other particulars in the newspapers.

Sect. 3. "Immediately after the quarter sessions at which such statement shall have been first laid before the justices of the peace, the clerk of the peace shall cause to be published a copy of such statement in three successive numbers of one or more weekly newspapers usually published or circulated within the same county, riding, or division, and in which the advertisements of county business are usually inserted; and at the foot of such copy shall also cause notice to be given that such statement has been laid before such justices in pursuance of the directions of this act, and that the same will be taken into consideration by the court at the then next ensuing quarter sessions."

If justices approve, an order to be made for constituting a new division, and the clerk of peace to publish same

Sect. 4 ." When and so often as the justices of the peace of any such county, riding, or division, having a separate commission of the peace, shall adopt wholly or in part any such statement so laid before them, and shall determine to change any parish, tithing, township, or place, from one division to another, or to constitute any new division, within which special sessions shall thenceforward be holden, the said justices of the peace shall thereupon make an order for such alteration, or for the constituting and defining such new division, and in such last-mentioned order shall particularly enumerate the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places to be comprised within such new division, and shall also specify the division or divisions within which respectively any parishes, tithings, townships, and places, disannexed by such order from any former division, and not forming part of such new division, shall thenceforward be taken to be, and also shall affix to such new division the name of some principal and convenient parish, township, or place within the same, and also shall, in either of such orders, as the case may be, particularly set down the day from which such order shall take effect; and the clerk of the peace for such county, riding, or division, shall forthwith publish a copy of such order in three successive numbers of one or more such weekly newspapers as aforesaid, and shall transmit a copy of such order to every high constable within the limits of such new or altered division or divisions."

Sect. 5. "Nothing in this act shall be taken to authorize, and that it shall not be lawful for, any justices in any court of quarter session to make any order constituting such new division, unless upon due proof before them made in open court upon oath, that for two years next before the making of such proof there have been, and at the time of making the same there are, at the least, five justices of the peace residing in or usually acting within the boundary line proposed to be the limits of any such new division."

New divisions to be deemed lawful divisions for holding special or petty sessions, or other meetings of justices.

Sect. 6. "From and after the day so specified in such order, for the term of twenty-one years, and until further order of sessions after the expiration of that time, and subject to no alteration or revision during such term, except as hereinafter provided, all matters and things which by law are now or hereafter may be required to be, or which now are, usually transacted or determined within the division within which the same shall have arisen, or the parties therein concerned inhabit or exercise their trade or calling, and by or before one, two, or more justices of the peace dwelling or usually acting within the same, shall be transacted and determined, so far as the same matters and things arise within or concern the inhabitants of such new or altered division, or any of them, or the persons exercising their trade or calling therein, within the boundaries of such new or altered division; and such new or altered division shall thenceforward be, and be reputed and taken to be, for all purposes, and in the construction of all statutes now in force or hereafter to be made, and containing no special provision to the contrary, a lawful division for the holding of special sessions; and all bailiffs, constables, tithingmen, surveyors, overseers of the poor, and other officers, publicans, keepers of taverns, coffee houses, and victualling houses, and other persons, shall and they are hereby thenceforward required to give their attendance to and upon such justices of the peace at any time assembled in such special sessions, within the same division, as fully and effectually as by law they had been bound to do within any division reputed or taken before the passing of this act to be a lawful and accustomed division of justices for the purposes aforesaid."

9 Geo 4, c 43.

Sect. 7. "At the quarter sessions next after the laying of any such statement before the justices in such sessions assembled, it shall and may be lawful for such justices, if they shall deem it expedient and proper, not to proceed to the single consideration of such statement, but instead thereof to cause to be made an inquiry and examination into the boundary lines, extent, and other local circumstances, of all the existing and accustomed divisions for the holding of special sessions within the commission of such justices; and at such or any succeeding quarter sessions, to which the conclusion of such inquiry and examination may from time to time be adjourned, by order of sessions, to regulate, alter, new model, and subdivide all or any of such divisions, in such manner as shall appear to them proper and convenient, particularly specifying in such order the names of all such divisions, whether newly constituted, altered, or unaltered, the several parishes, tithings, townships, and places to be comprised in each, and affixing or continuing to each the name of some principal and convenient parish, township, or place within the same."

Sect. 9. "In every such order, some time, not earlier than the fourth quarter sessions next after the making thereof, shall be provisionally specified, in which the same shall be enrolled as hereinafter provided, subject to such alteration as may thereafter be made either in the particulars of the said order, or in the time of its enrolment; and that at any court of quarter sessions preceding such time, it shall and may be lawful for any one or more person or persons, or body corporate, jointly or severally, to present a petition in writing to such court, against all or any part of such order, and to produce witnesses in support of such petition; and the justices at such court assembled shall and they are hereby required to hear and determine, in a summary way, the merits of such petition, and to amend such order so far as may upon such hearing appear proper and convenient: provided always, that no such petition shall be received or examined into, unless after due proof that a notice in writing, specifying the grounds thereof, which upon the hearing shall alone be inquired into, hath been served, ten clear days before the commencement of such sessions, upon one of the overseers of the poor, or the tithingman or constable, or two substantial housekeepers of the parish, tithing, township, or place respectively, as the case may be, wherein such petitioner or petitioners shall be resident at the time of presenting such petition, and also lodged, twenty clear days before such commencement, at the office of the clerk of the peace, who shall and he is hereby required forthwith to transmit a copy thereof to each of the justices usually acting within or for the district or places or place named in such notice."

IV, c. 46, intituled "An Act for more effectually executing an Act of the last Session of Parliament, for the better Regulation of Divisions in the several Counties of England and Wales," [19th June, 1829], reciting that "Whereas by an act passed in the last session of Parliament, intituled 'An Act for the better Regulation of Divisions in the several Counties of England and Wales,' the court of quarter sessions is empowered in certain cases to make orders for altering existing divisions, and for constituting new divisions for holding petty sessions, whereby in many cases parts of a hundred, wapentake, ward, or other district in the nature of a hundred, will be severed, for the purposes aforesaid, from the main body thereof, and such hundred or other like district will thereafter be situate in two or more divisions: and whereas by divers acts it is required of high constables to give notice to, or to serve precepts on, petty constables, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, surveyors of the highways, and others, similar duties may be cast upon high constables by future acts, and the labour of executing such duties will be increased by the severance of the hundred or other like district under the provisions of the said recited act, and difficulties may arise in the due execution of process in such cases;" it is enacted, "that whensoever the court of quarter sessions shall, under the said provisions, make an order for changing any parish, tithing, township, or place, from one division to another, or an order for constituting any new division, and it shall appear to the court that any inconvenience will arise from such change if the high constable or high constables shall continue liable to perform the duties aforesaid in respect to the whole of his or their hundred or other like district, the same court of quarter sessions shall make an order for remedying such inconvenience, either by directing that where there are more than one high constable such duties shall be divided between them, in such manner as to the court shall seem fit, or, if circumstances shall so require, that the high constable or high constables shall be entirely exempted from the performance of a certain portion of those duties, and that the same portion shall be performed by the high constable of any other hundred, or by some petty constable, tithingman, or other peace officer, or by some other person or persons to be specified in the order: and every such order shall be binding on all justices, officers, and persons whomsoever."

Court of quarter sessions, on making order for division of any district, may at the same time make order respecting the duties of the high constables.

2. New divisions may be constituted if five justices are resident or acting therein.

County Court (a).

[11 Hen. VII. c. 15; 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 25; 12 Geo. II. c. 13.]

County.

ANCIENTLY, the comites, counts, or earls, had the government of the counties; and afterwards the vice-comites, or sheriffs. And the county seemeth to be nothing else but the district of the comes or count. Shire is a Saxon word from scryan, to share or divide, for that the shires and counties are divided by certain metes and bounds from each other. And the sheriff, in Saxon syregeresa, is the reve, grave, or governor of the shire; wherein he hath great power, being therein the chief officer under the king.

County court.

The sheriff holdeth in his county two courts, the torn and the county court. The torn is the king's court of record for criminal causes, and for redressing of common grievances within the county; the county court is not a court of record, but only a court-baron, for civil causes, and this is the court of the sheriff himself.

When to be holden.

By stat. 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 25, no county court shall be longer deferred than one month from court to court, so that the county court shall be kept every month, and not otherwise.

And this is to be accounted twenty-eight days to the month, and not according to the month of the calendar. (2 Inst. 71).

Where to be kept.

It may be kept at any place within the county, unless restrained by statute. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1).

Who is the judge.

The suitors, that is, the freeholders, are the judges in this court. The sheriff is not a judge of the county court, and therefore a declaration on a judgment of a county court, alleging it to have been held before sheriff and suitors, is bad on special demurrer. The court should be described as the county court of the sheriff, held before the suitors. Quære, whether, in such case, it is necessary to set out in the declaration the names of the suitors? (Jones v. Jones, 5 M. & W. 523). By the statutes concerning parliamentary elections, the sheriff is judge at the election of knights; for he must make a true return at his peril. (Barl. County Court. See Tinsley v. Nassau, M. & M. 52; 2 C. & P. 582, S. C.), and he is also judge in re-disseisin by the statute of Merton.

Of what causes this court hath cognizance

This court shall hold pleas betwixt party and party, where the debt or damage is under 40*s*. (4 Inst. 266).

But in a replevin, the sum may be above 40*s*. (4 Inst. 266).

A. became indebted to B. in a sum not exceeding 40*s*. for the carriage of a parcel of goods; and in a month afterwards incurred another debt to B. not exceeding 40*s*. for the carriage of a second parcel. A. brought two actions in the county court for the respective debts. Held, that (a) As to county courts, see Watson's Office of Sheriff, 286 to 295; Com. Dig. County, (C. 8); Greenwood on Courts; Read on County Courts. The county court it will be seen has not jurisdiction over criminal matters.

the causes of action were distinct, and that A. was entitled to sue separately for each demand; and the court of King's Bench refused a prohibition. (Rex v. Sheriff of Herefordshire, in a cause of Dealy v. Clark, 1 Bar. & Ad. 672).

A declaration in the county court stated that the defendant was summoned to answer the plaintiffs in an action of debt, without mentioning the sum demanded, and then proceeded to state that the defendant, within the jurisdiction of the court, was indebted to the plaintiffs in the sum of 1*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* for goods then and there sold and delivered, and in the sum of 1*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* for money found due on an account then and there stated, which said several sums were to be respectively paid by the defendant to the plaintiffs on request; whereby and by reason of the non-payment thereof an action hath accrued to the plaintiffs, to demand and have of and from the defendant the said several sums respectively, amounting to the sum of 1*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, yet the defendant hath not paid the said sum above demanded, or any part thereof, to the damage of the plaintiffs of 1*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* Held, that this declaration disclosed a demand exceeding 40*s.*, (the sums in the two counts being distinct), and consequently that the county court had no jurisdiction, and that resort could not be had to the bill of particulars, (which, upon a writ of false judgment, was returned as part of the record), to shew that the demand was in reality below 40*s.* (Dempster v. Purnell, 4 Scott, N. R. 30). If the plaintiffs in this case intended merely to insist upon their right to recover the balance of 1*l.* 18*s.* 8*d.* as stated in the bill of particulars, they should in their declaration have acknowledged the receipt of so much as would have reduced the debt to that amount. (Com. Dig. County, (C. 8)).

Also it hath not cognizance of trespass vi et armis, because a fine is thereby due to the king, which it cannot impose. (4 Inst. 266).

Writ of justicies.

But by virtue of a writ of justicies the court may hold plea of trespass vi et armis, and of any sum or of all actions personal above 40*s.* For this writ is in the nature of a commission to the sheriff, for the sake of despatch, to do the same justice in the county court, as might otherwise be had in the courts at Westminster. (4 Inst. 266).

By looking into any of the treatises on the county court, it will be seen that the court is considered in the nature of a court-baron. The writ of justicies, giving power to this court to hold pleas above 40*s.* in some instances, does not alter the nature of this court. This is not a court proprio vigore holding pleas of above 40*s.*, and therefore is not within the meaning of stat. 25 Geo. III. c. 80, which gives a penalty against attornies prosecuting or defending without a certificate any suit in any court holding pleas where the debt or damage shall amount to 40*s.* or more. (Cross v. Kaye, 6 T. R. 663. See Tinsley v. Nassau, M. & M. 52.).

Cause of action must arise and defendant reside within the county.

But no action can be brought in the county court, unless the cause of action arise and the defendant reside within the county. The promise must be made, and the consideration arise, within the jurisdiction. (Thom v. Chinnock, 1 Scott, N. R. 138). And where that is not the case, the action may be brought in the courts above, although for a less sum than 40*s.* For if the action cannot be brought in the inferior jurisdiction, the plaintiff is not therefore to lose his debt; but he must sue in the superior courts. (Welch v. Troyte, 2 H. Black. 29; Tubb v. Woodward, 6 T. R. 175; Haxwood v. Lester, 3 B. & P. 617). It is not necessary that the plaintiff should reside within the county. (Pritchard v. Mc Gill, 2 M. & W. 380).

Plaintiff need not reside within the county.

Where a suit commenced by justicies in the county court is removed by pone to the superior court, the declaration need not state the cause of action to have arisen within the inferior jurisdiction. (Powell v. Ansell, 3 Scott, N. R. 444).

Matters merely in aggravation of damages are inquirable of in this court, though arising out of the county. (1 Saund. 74 a, n.; Dunn v. Crump, 3 B. & B. 309, 7 Moore, 137, S. C.)

County Court.

One plaint for one trespass or contract.

By stat. 11 Hen. VII. c. 15, no plaint shall be entered in the county court but where the plaintiff or his attorney is present, and the plaintiff shall find pledges to pursue his plaint, and he shall have but one plaint for one trespass or contract, on pain of 40*s.*, half to the king, and half to the prosecutor. And one justice may examine the sheriff, or other officer making the default, and shall within a quarter of a year certify the examination into the exchequer.

But as to the pledges above mentioned they are now disused in this court, and were formerly used only in cases where the plaintiff lived out of the county. (Greenw. 11; Read's County Court).

Who shall act as attorney in this court.

By stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 13, s. 7, if any person shall commence or defend any action, or sue out any writ, process, or summons, or carry on any proceedings in the county court, who shall not be admitted attorney or solicitor according to the act of 2 Geo. II. c. 23, he shall forfeit 20*l.* with costs to him who shall sue in any court of record.

The plaintiff in this court first takes out a summons, returnable at the next county court; and if the defendant do not appear, an attachment or distringas is to be made out; but if the defendant appear, the plaintiff is to file his declaration, showing his cause of action, or matter of complaint, in what manner the action accrued, at what time and place the wrong was done, and the damage he had sustained, and taking care to state therein that all the material causes of action arose within the jurisdiction. (Greenw. 11; Read's County Court; 1 Saund. 89, n. 1).

A custom to issue a summons, and distringas, or attachment, or capias, at the same time, seems bad. (Williams v. Lord Bagot, 3 Bar. & Cres. 772).

Capias

No capias in general lies. (Com. Dig. County, c. 9; Wats. 291).

Declaration.

If the defendant doth appear, and the next court after gives a rule to declare, and the plaintiff doth not file his declaration within the time, he may be nonsuited. (Greenw. 11; Read's County Court).

The entering of the plaint is the act of the party; and in a replevin suit in the county court if no plaint be entered the bond is forfeited. (Exp. Boyle, 2 D. & R. 13).

In the same case it was held, that where a sheriff, or his deputy, neglects to enter a plaint in the county court for damage feasant, the court of King's Bench will not compel him to do so on motion. Id. The plaintiff's remedy in that case would be to apply for a mandamus to enter the plaint, or it should seem to sue the sheriff. (Id.)

Continuance.

When the plaintiff hath declared, he must continue his suit from court day to court day, otherwise the defendant may take advantage of it; and this is called a continuance, being an adjourning of the suit from time to time, to keep it on foot. (Greenw. 11; Read's County Court).

Dies datus.

The rule, or dies datus, is when further day is given to the plaintiff to declare, or to the defendant to plead, and the time given is usually to the next court day, but upon occasion it may be enlarged. (Id.)

Answer

The next court after filing the declaration, and imparlance given, the defendant is to put in his answer or plea, and if the plaintiff join issue, they may proceed to trial the next court day, if they proceed not further by replication, rejoinder, surrejoinder, and the like. (Id.)

Plea of freehold.

But if freehold be pleaded by the defendant, this court can proceed no further, for freehold shall never be tried without writ; therefore the cause must be removed: as when a defendant avoweth for damage feasant, and the plaintiff justifieth by reason of common of pasture. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 1).

Judgment and distress.

Where a verdict is given for the plaintiff, and judgment entered thereupon, a fieri facias may be awarded against the defendant's goods, which may be taken by virtue thereof and appraised and sold, to satisfy the plaintiff; but if the defendant hath no goods whereupon to levy, the plaintiff remains without remedy in this court, for it being no court of record, no capias lies there; but an action may be brought at common law upon the judgment entered. (Greenw. 22; Read's County Court; Wats. Sheriff, 292).

Causes are removed out of this court by a writ of recordari, which issues out of the Chancery, directed to the sheriff, commanding him to send the plaint that is before him in his county court (without writ of justicies) into the Court of Queen's Bench or Common Pleas, to the end the cause may be there determined. And the sheriff is hereupon to summon the other party to be in that court (into which the plaint is to be sent) at a day certain. And of all this he is to make certificate under his own seal, and the seals of four suitors of the same court. (Ib.; see Wats. Sheriff, 293). County Court. Removal by recordari.

Causes are also removed by pone, which differs in nothing from a recordari, but that it removes such suits as are before the sheriff by writ of justicies, and a recordari is to remove the suit that is by plaint only without writ. (Ib.; see Wats. Sheriff, 293). Removal by pone.

And although the plea be discontinued in the county, yet the plaintiff or defendant may remove the plaint into the Common Pleas or Queen's Bench, and it shall be good, and he shall declare upon the same. (Greenw. 22; Read's County Court). Removal after discontinuance.

In this court, after the quinto exactus, the coroner gives judgment of outlawry. (4 Inst. 266). Outlawry pronounced.

If the judgment be bad, as if the proceedings do not properly allege that the cause of action accrued within the jurisdiction, the defendant may upset the proceedings by removing them into the Queen's Bench by writ of false judgment. (See Wats. Sheriff, 294; 1 T. R. 151). False judgment.

To a writ of false judgment upon a judgment pronounced in the county court of Yorkshire, the sheriff returned, that the defendant "had not given him security to prosecute his suit," &c. The court quashed the return. (Longden v. Croots, 7 Scott, 377; S. C., Anon., Croots v. Longden, 7 Dowl. 413; 5 Bing. N. C. 410, S. C.) The 6th section of the stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 70, applies only to causes removed from the inferior court before judgment. And semble, that its operation is confined to causes removed from inferior courts of record. (Ib.)

Upon a writ of false judgment from a county court, the sheriff's return of his proceedings appearing to be no more than minutes, and not full entries of the pleadings, the court at the instance of the plaintiff made absolute a rule calling on the sheriff to complete the entries, or to state what was understood by them. (Overton v. Swettenham, 3 Bing. N. C. 786; 4 Scott, 483, S. C.) But, as the plaintiff came to ask for a favour, the rule was made absolute only on payment of costs. (Ib.)

Out of the county court is derived the hundred court, for the ease of the subject; and it hath like jurisdiction as the county court, and may be held every three weeks. (2 Inst. 71). Hundred court.

No action will lie against the judge of a court for an act done by him in his judicial capacity, when acting within his jurisdiction. And, therefore, where a sheriff issues a warrant of execution in his judicial capacity, as judge in a county court, he is not liable to an action for the act of his bailiff. Consequently trespass will not lie against a sheriff where his bailiff took the goods of a wrong person, under a warrant issued by him in his judicial capacity. (Tinsley v. Nassau, M. & M. 52; 2 C. & P. 582, S. C.; Pitcher v. King, 9 Ad. & Ell. 288; 1 P. & D. 297; and see Holroyd v. Breare, 2 B. & Ald. 473; Vol. I., "Baron Court"). But it seems the sheriff would be responsible where he directs the process to bailiffs specially nominated by the party who sues it out, taking an indemnity. (Bradley v. Carr, 3 Scott, N. R., 523; 3 M. & Gr. 221, S. C.) Sheriff, when not liable for acts of bailiff.

The King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons are now abolished; but by the 5 Vict. c. 22, ss. 8, 9, the provisions of the 55 Geo. If a fine be imposed on a county, which the justices at sessions think illegal, they may order the expense of litigating the question to be defrayed out of the county stock. R. v. Essex, 4 T. R. 591). The sessions had ordained money to be advanced by the treasurer to defend the county in a litigation respecting a fine of 500*l.* imposed on them by Lord Loughborough, at the assizes, for not repairing the county gaol, and which had been estreated into the Exchequer. On being removed by certiorari, it was objected that the magistrates could apply the public money to such purposes only as are specifically provided for by act of Parliament, or sanctioned by long usage. But the court held, that the order was good; for wherever a duty is imposed on a county, and where costs necessarily and incidentally arise in questioning the propriety of acts done to enforce that duty, the magistrates, who have the superintendence over the county purse, have necessarily a right to defray such expenses out of the county stock. And Buller, J. said, "in his opinion, the true construction of the act is, that the necessary expenses of every thing relating to the subjects therein mentioned must be borne by the county, and paid out of the county stock. If it were otherwise, the active magistrates of a county would be put in a perilous situation in a variety of cases that might happen."

Expense of litigating a question concerning a county.

But the sessions cannot order the costs of a prosecution for a misdemeanor, though carried on under the order and direction of a magistrate, to be defrayed out of the county rate. (R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 T. R. 377; ante, "Costs," p. 173; "Certiorari," Vol. I.)

Prosecution by order of magistrate.

The justices have no right, except by following the provisions of particular acts of Parliament, to anticipate the county rates, and so as to make the expense of public county works ultimately fall on different persons from those who are by law liable at the time it is incurred. An order of sessions, therefore, for levying and paying to the treasurer of the county a sum to enable him to reimburse certain persons for an antecedent debt, although such debt had been incurred for county purposes, is bad; and justices have no right to anticipate the county rates. (R. v. Justices of Flintshire, 5 B. & Ald. 761; 1 D. & R. 470, S. C.) Parke had obtained a rule nisi in Michaelmas Term, 1824, for a certiorari to remove an order of sessions of the county of Flint, dated 12th July, 1824, for levying and paying into the hands of the treasurer of that county 200*l.* 5*s.*, to enable him to pay that sum, in part payment of the claim of Messrs. Sankey. It appeared that, by a former order of sessions, the treasurer had been empowered to borrow from Messrs. Sankey, who were bankers, the sum of 1000*l.* for carrying on the public works within the county, to be repaid by instalments. This money had been advanced, from time to time, in 1817 and 1818, and repaid in account, but further advances being made, the balance remaining due to the bank was 447*l.*, in part payment of which this order was made. The affidavits on the other side stated, that the whole money had been, in fact, laid out for county purposes. The court made the rule absolute; observing, "that this was a rate to reimburse persons for a debt previously contracted, which was clearly bad, inasmuch as the justices had no right (except by following the provisions of particular acts of Parliament, which had not been done here) to anticipate the county rates, and so to make the expense ultimately fall on different persons from those who were by law liable at the time it was incurred." Writ of certiorari granted. (And see as to church rates, Vol. I. "Church Rates."

Rate to reimburse for antecedent expenses incurred for county purposes not allowed.

And where such treasurer, being authorized by an order of sessions to raise money on the credit of the county rates, obtained advances from time to time from his bankers, and died in their debt; the sessions being satisfied that the money so advanced had been bonâ fide applied to county purposes, made an order for assessing and levying a sum of money towards the repayment of the debt; the court held such order to have been improperly made, and quashed it. (R. v. Justices of Flintshire, 2 D. & R. 843.)

By an act for building a gaol, the justices of sessions were authorized to assess a special county rate upon every parish in the county, for the payment of the expenses of building such gaol, and that rate was made payable out of the monies collected in the parishes for the relief of the poor; and there was a proviso, that every tenant might deduct out of his rent one-half the amount of the rate: it was held, that commissioners under a local act for paving and lighting the town and managing the poor, could not make a retrospective rate in order to reimburse themselves in one year money which they had paid in a former year on account of such special county rate for building the gaol. (Cortis v. Kent Water Works Company, 7 B. & Cress. 314).

12 Geo. 2, c. 29. Sessions may lay a general rate instead of several rates.

Statutes as to.]—Formerly all county rates were assessed and collected by separate rates, which was not only extremely troublesome and inconvenient, but so expensive that the charge of collecting and assessing frequently exceeded the sum rated; for remedying this, by statute 12 Geo. II. c. 29, intituled, "An Act for the more easy Assessing, Collecting, and Levying of County Rates," where by section 1, after reciting that "whereas by an act passed in the twenty-second year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, for repairing and amending bridges and highways; and whereas by another act passed in the first year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, to explain and alter the said act, it is, for the more easy taxing and collecting the money for the repair of such bridges and highways thereunto adjoining, (amongst other things), enacted, 'that the justices of the peace within the several limits of their commissions shall, at their general or quarter sessions of the peace, have full power and authority, upon due presentment to them made that any bridge within their respective commissions or authorities is out of repair, and which by them hath usually or ought to have been repaired and maintained, to make assessments upon every town, parish, or place within their respective commissions for that purpose, in proportions upon each respective town and parish, as they usually have been assessed towards the repair of bridges, which assessments are to be levied and collected in the manner prescribed by the said act;' and whereas by an act passed in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of his late Majesty King William the Third, to enable justices of the peace to build and repair gaols in their respective counties, it is (amongst other things) enacted, 'that it shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace, or the greater number of them, within the limits of their commissions, upon presentment of the grand jury or grand juries at the assize, great sessions, and general gaol delivery held for the same county, of the insufficiency or inconveniency of their gaol or prison, to conclude and agree upon such sum or sums of money as upon examination of able and sufficient workmen shall be thought necessary for the building, finishing, and repairing a public gaol or gaols belonging to the shire or county whereof they are justices of the peace; and by warrant under their hands and seals, or under the hands and seals of the greater number of them, by equal proportions, to distribute and charge the sum or sums of money to be levied for the uses aforesaid upon the several hundreds, lathes, wapentakes, rape, ward, or other division of the said county, in the manner prescribed by the said act;' which said act was revived and continued by an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, for seven years, and to the end of the then next session of Parliament, and made perpetual by an act of the sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the First; and whereas by an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of King James the First, for the due execution of divers laws and statutes heretofore made against rogues, vagabonds, and sturdy beggars, and other lewd and idle persons, it is (amongst other things) enacted, 'that there shall be erected, built, or otherwise provided, within every county of this realm of England and Wales, where there is not one house of correction already built, provided, or continued, one or more fit and convenient house or houses of correction, by the justices of the peace, or the more part of them, at their respective quarter sessions; and that the master or governors of the said houses of correction shall have such sums of money yearly as shall be thought meet by the said justices, the same to be paid quarterly beforehand by the treasurers appointed by an act made in the three-and-fortieth year of the late Queen Elizabeth, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor;' which said act was to continue for seven years, and till the end of the next session of Parliament; and was further continued by an act passed in the third year of the reign of King Charles the First, intituled 'An Act for the Continuance and Repeal of divers Statutes,' unto the end of the first session of the next Parliament; and, by an act passed in the sixteenth year of the same reign, continued in force until repealed by some other act of Parliament;' and whereas by an act passed in the forty-third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor,' it is (amongst other things) enacted, 'that the justices of the peace of every county or place corporate, or the more part of them, in their general sessions to be holden next after the feast of Easter, and so yearly, as often as they shall think meet, shall rate every parish to such a weekly sum of money as they shall think convenient, so as no parish be rated above the sum of sixpence nor under the sum of a halfpenny weekly to be paid, and so as the total sum of each taxation of the parishes in every county amount not to above the rate of twopence for every parish within the said county;' and it is thereby likewise enacted, 'that the justices of the peace, at their general quarter sessions to be holden at the time of such taxation, shall set down what competent sums of money shall be sent quarterly out of every county or place corporate for the relief of the poor prisoners of the King's Bench and Marshalsea, and also of such hospitals and almshouses as shall be in the said county, and what sums of money shall be sent to every one of the said hospitals and almshouses, so as there be sent out of every county yearly twenty shillings at the least to each of the said prisons of the King's Bench and Marshalsea; which sums are rateably to be assessed upon every parish, and to be levied and collected as in and by the said act is directed;' and whereas by an act passed in the fourteenth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled 'An Act how Vagabonds shall be punished and the Poor relieved,' it is enacted, 'that the justices of the peace of every county, or the more part of them, in their general quarter sessions, shall rate every parish at such reasonable sums of money for the relief of prisoners as they shall think convenient, so as no parish be rated above sixpence or eightpence weekly; and the churchwardens of every parish shall levy the same every Sunday, and once in every quarter pay the said sums to the high constables or other head officers; and the said high constables and head officers shall pay the money received of the said churchwardens to such persons as shall be appointed by the said justices in sessions, to be by them distributed weekly for the relief of prisoners;' so much of which said act as relates to the taxing, levying, receiving, and employing of gaol money was revived and continued to the end of the then next session of Parliament by an act passed in the first year of the reign of King James the First, intituled 'An Act for continuing and reviving of divers Statutes, and for repealing of some others;' and was further continued by an act passed in the twenty-first year of the reign of the said King James, intituled 'An Act for continuing and reviving of divers Statutes, and repeal of divers others;' and was further continued to the end of the next session of Parliament by an act passed in the third year of the reign of King Charles the First, intituled 'An Act for the Repeal and Continuance of divers Statutes;' and by an act passed in the sixteenth year of the same reign was continued in force until repealed by some other act of Parliament; and whereas by an act passed in the nineteenth year of the reign of King Charles the Second, intituled 'An Act for Relief of poor Prisoners, and setting them on Work,' it is (among other things) enacted, 'that the justices of the peace at their general sessions, or the major part of them, if they think fit, may provide a stock of materials for setting poor prisoners on work, in such manner and by such ways as other county charges are levied and raised, and provide and pay fit persons to oversee such work, and make such orders concerning the premises as they from time to time shall think fit, provided that no parish be rated above sixpence by the week towards the premises;' and whereas an act passed in the twelfth year of the reign of her late Majesty Queen Anne, for reducing the laws relating to rogues, sturdy beggars, and vagrants into one act of Parliament, and for the more effectual punishing such rogues, vagabonds, sturdy beggars, and vagrants, and sending them whither they ought to be sent, it is (amongst other things) enacted, 'that the justices of the peace at their quarter sessions may from time to time, when need shall be, by such ways and means as monies for county gaols or bridges may be raised, cause such sums of money to be raised within their respective precincts and jurisdictions, for the passing and conveying or maintaining of rogues and vagabonds, as shall be necessary for those purposes; which said several rates, when collected, are to be paid, by virtue of the said several acts, into the hands of treasurers or receivers to be appointed by the justices at their respective general or quarter sessions of the peace, and to be accounted for, as in and by the said several acts are recited;' and whereas it is apparent that the manner and methods prescribed by the said several respective acts for collecting some of the said rates are impracticable, the sums charged on each parish in the respective divisions being so small that they do not by an equal pound rate amount to more than a fractional part of a farthing in the pound on the several persons thereby rateable; and if possible to have been rated, the expense of assessing and collecting the same would have amounted to more than the sum rated;' and whereas many and great doubts, difficulties, and inconveniences have arisen in making and collecting other of the said rates, therefore that the good ends and purposes of the said several statutes may be answered, and the several sums of money thereby intended to be raised may effectually be collected with as much ease and certainty and as little expense as can be to the parties obliged by the said laws to pay the same, it is enacted, 'that from and after the 1st day of September, 1739, the justices of the peace in that part of Great Britain called England, within the respective limits of their commissions, at their general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, shall have full power and authority from time to time to make one general rate or assessment for such sum or sums of money as they in their discretions shall think sufficient to answer all and every the ends and purposes of the before-recited acts, instead and in lieu of the several separate and distinct rates directed thereby to be made, levied, and collected; which rate shall be assessed upon every town, parish, or place within the respective limits of their commissions, in such proportions as any of the rates heretofore made in pursuance of the said several acts have been usually assessed; and the several and respective sums so assessed upon each and every town, parish, or place within the respective limits of their commissions, shall be collected by the high constables of the respective hundreds and divisions in which any town, parish, or place doth lie, in such manner and at such times as is hereinafter directed.'"

12 Geo. 2, c. 29.

After 1st Sept. 1739, justices to make from time to time one general assessment, instead of the several rates appointed by several acts.

This act was not passed to impose any new rates, but to facilitate the assessing, collecting, and levying of those that were previously imposed; and for that purpose, instead of the several rates for the several purposes for which rates under former acts were imposed, there was to be one general rate to answer all ends and purposes of former acts. There was no intention to vary the obligation to pay, or the right to receive; the persons before liable to pay were still liable to pay, and the persons entitled to receive were still to be the persons so entitled. (4 M. & Sel. 437).

Which rate shall be assessed in such proportions in every parish or place, as any of the rates by the said several former acts have been usually assessed.]—But now by the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, (post, 209), this is to be understood a fair and equal proportionable rate upon every division, though indeed before the passing of this latter act, notwithstanding changes of circumstances and inequalities, the sessions had no power to vary the proportions in which the county rate had usually been assessed on the several parishes. (See R. v. St. Paul's, Covent Garden, Cald. 158).

By sect. 2. "That the respective sum or sums so to be assessed and collected may be well and truly paid to the respective high constables, be it further enacted, that the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the time being of each and every parish and place within the respective counties, cities, and liberties in which they respectively lie, shall and they are hereby required, out of the money collected or to be collected for the relief of the poor of such parish or place, to pay to the high constables of the respective hundreds or divisions of the said counties, cities and liberties, the respective sum or sums of money so rated and assessed upon such parish or place, within the space of thirty days after demand thereof made in writing, to be given to the said churchwardens or overseers of the poor, or any of them, or left at their or either of their dwelling-house or houses, or affixed on any of the church doors of such parish or place to which such officer shall belong, by the said high constable or high constables of the respective hundreds or divisions; which demand the respective high constable or high constables is and are hereby required to make, at such times as the said justices of the peace, or the greater part of them, shall by their order in sessions direct; and the receipt or receipts of such high constable or high constables shall be a full and sufficient discharge to such churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or other person paying the same, and shall be allowed in their accounts as such by the justices of the peace before whom such accounts shall be passed; and in case such churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any of them, shall neglect or refuse to pay any the sum or sums of money hereby assessed, after demand made as aforesaid, such high constable or high constables shall and they are hereby empowered to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such churchwardens and overseers, or either of them, so refusing or neglecting to pay the same as aforesaid, by warrant under the hands and seals of two or more justices of the peace of the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, residing in or near such parish or place, rendering the overplus, if any there shall be, after deducting the money assessed and the charges of the distress and sale, to the owner or owners thereof."

or to be levied on them by distress

Proportion of Rate.]—R. v. Justices of Yorkshire, 12 East, 117. In this case there were two questions directed to be tried:—1. Whether the said two townships of Hartishead and Clifton, in the West Riding, did or did not before and since stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, form one constablery, known by the name of H. cum C., for the purpose of raising such rates? 2. Whether H. and C. were or were not before and since that statute two separate townships, for the purpose of raising such rates? And it was admitted that before the statute these two townships usually contributed between themselves in a certain proportion to the county rate imposed upon the two separately. The jury found that there was an union of the two townships in one joint constablery. And upon this a motion was made for a mandamus to the defendants, to make at the next quarter sessions an order upon the constablery of H. cum C. to levy a sum by an equal rate, for the proportion of the said constablery towards the county rates. And this application was granted by the court. And per Lord Ellenborough, C. J. "By stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 1, the proportions of the general rate as between the several towns, parishes and places which had before been separately assessed, were to be preserved; but the money was to be raised upon each by one aggregate rate, instead of by the several distinct rates before leviable under different acts of Parliament for distinct purposes. Now H. and C., though acting as two townships for some purposes, yet for the purpose of county rates, and quoad the act of the 12 Geo. II., they constituted but one place. The sect. 2 must be understood of parishes and places in which one general poor's rate is collected, and cannot therefore apply to a case like the present, where there is no such general fund raised upon the entire district which is assessed to the county rate. The case, therefore, must come within the provision of the 3d section (infra), that where there is no poor's rate, that is, no poor's rate co-extensive with the district assessed, the county rate shall be levied by the petty constable, 'in the same manner as the money for the relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied,' that is, by equal taxation of the inhabitants &c. of the place rated. The rate, therefore, must be levied equally on the whole of this artificial place or district, being that on which the county rates had, before the act, been usually assessed as if it had been one parish." Grose, J. and Le Blanc, J., agreed, as did Bayley, J., who said, "that by proportions, the legislature only referred to the proportions between the several districts before assessed to the county rates, with reference to the county at large."

Where there is no poor's rate, the perty constable of the place to levy the county rate.

By sect. 3. Provided nevertheless, "that in case no rate is or shall be made for the relief of the poor in any parish, township, or place, the justices of the peace in their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, shall and may by their order direct the sum of money assessed on such parish, township, or place for the purposes of this act to be rated and levied on any such parish, township, or place by any petty constables or other peace officer of or belonging to the same, in such manner as money for the relief of the poor is by law to be rated or levied; which sum so rated and levied shall be paid by such petty constable or other peace officer to the respective high constable for the hundred, division, or liberty wherein such parish, township, or place shall lie; and shall be demanded of, paid by, or levied on such petty constable or other peace officer in the same manner as any rates are hereinbefore directed to be demanded of, paid by, and levied on the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or any of them; and if such petty constable or other peace officer shall pay such sum, before the same shall be so by him rated and levied as aforesaid, he may afterwards rate and levy the same, or shall and may be allowed and reimbursed the said sum of money out of any constable's or other rate made or to be made on any such parish, township, or place, which the said justices of the peace or the greater part of them in their sessions shall order and direct." And see further the stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 8, post, 214, and 56 Geo. III. c. 49, post, 222.

As money for the relief of the poor is to be rated or levied.]—That is to say, by taxation of every inhabitant, parson, vicar, and other, and of every occupier of lands, houses, tithes, coal mines, or saleable underwoods. Stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1.

Counties excepted from paying the rate of this act out of the poor's rate.

Sect. 4. "And whereas it will be very inconvenient to many towns, parishes, and places in the several counties of York, Derby, Durham, Lancaster, Chester, Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, that the rates by this act directed to be paid by and levied on the churchwardens and overseers of the poor for the purposes aforesaid should be paid out of any rate to be made for the relief of the poor in such towns, parishes, and places; be it therefore enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace for the respective ridings, divisions, or counties of York, Derby, Durham, Lancaster, Chester, Westmoreland, Cumberland, and Northumberland, at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, if they shall think convenient, to order the sum of money directed to be assessed on any such town, parish, or place, for all or any of the purposes of this act, to be paid by and levied on the petty constable of or for any such town, parish, or place within the said counties respectively, in such manner as the same is herein directed to be paid and levied in cases where no rate is made for the relief of the poor; any thing herein contained, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

If they shall think convenient.]—By which words the justices in those counties may order the rate to be paid by either of the two methods before mentioned, according to their discretions; that is to say, either by the churchwardens and overseers out of the poor rate, or by the petty constable by an assessment after the manner of the poor rate.

Proviso in favour of places heretofore not paying all or any county rates.

Sect. 5. Provided always, "That this act, or any thing herein contained, shall not extend or be construed to extend to make any persons, liberties, divisions, or places liable to pay to any rate to be made in pursuance of this act, to which such person, liberty, division, or place did not or was not liable to contribute before the passing hereof; but that it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to order and ascertain what proportion of any rate to be made by virtue of this act shall be assessed on and paid by the several persons, liberties, divisions and places, who have usually contributed or are liable to pay only to one or more of and not to all the rates hereby intended to be raised and thrown into one general rate or assessment."

As for instance, where by stat. 22 Hen. VIII. c. 5, towns corporate are charged for the repairing of bridges within their respective liberties, and the counties for the bridges out of such liberties; in such a case, a town corporate ought not to be charged towards the bridges in the county at large; and consequently ought to have an abatement in the rate charged upon them, in such proportion as the expense of bridges is to the whole expense of the several articles charged upon the said general county rate: as if the expense of bridges be a tenth part of the whole expense, chargeable upon the county rate, then such town corporate shall have an abatement of one shilling for every ten, which it would otherwise be charged with in such rate.

13 Geo. 2, c. 18.

And by stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 7, after reciting the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, and the above sect. 5, and that "doubts have arisen whether the said act doth extend to liberties and franchises, which are not within the jurisdiction of the commissions of the peace for the counties in which such liberties and franchises lie, and so never did nor were liable to contribute to the said county rates," it is enacted, "That where any liberties or franchises within that part of Great Britain called England, have commissions of the peace within themselves, and are not subject to the jurisdiction of the commissions of the peace for the counties in which such liberties or franchises lie, and do not, nor did before the making the said in part recited act, contribute or pay to the several rates made for the said counties; it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace of such liberties and franchises, within the respective limits of their commissions, to have, use, and exercise all and singular the powers, authorities, and methods given or prescribed by the said in part recited act, and all such liberties and franchises are hereby declared to be subject thereto, in the same manner to all intents and purposes as counties at large are; any thing in the said in part recited act contained, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof, in any wise notwithstanding."

55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 24.

And by stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 24, (post, 221), where any ridings or divisions have separate commissions of the peace, or where any cities, towns, or other places have commissions of the peace within themselves, and are not subject to the jurisdiction of the commissions for the counties at large within which they lie, nor did before contribute to the general county rate, it shall and may be lawful for the justices of such separate jurisdictions to have, use, and exercise all the powers, &c. given by that act.

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76. Corporations.

And by the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 92, (ante, 95), if in any borough the borough fund shall be insufficient, the council may order a rate in the nature of a county rate to be made within the borough, and for that purpose shall have all the powers which justices in any county have by virtue of the 56 Geo. III. c. 51.

A county rate may be levied for a town erected into a county of itself, although no such rate has been ever levied before. The quarter sessions for the town and county of the town of Nottingham appointed a high constable for the ensuing year for the special purpose of collecting and raising from the overseers &c. of each parish within the town the rates &c. in the nature of a county rate. They appointed a treasurer to receive the said collection, subject to the order of the session. The application of the sum collected was directed to the relief of prisoners in prison, the repairs of the house of correction, keeper's salary, soldiers' carriages, transporting felons, and such other charges to which the same was by law applicable within the said town. The town of Nottingham was formerly part of the county; Henry VI. made it a county of itself, and confirmed the charters of its corporation, which it had by prescription. Two questions arose, viz. whether the justices had power to levy any such rate; and secondly, whether the present rate was good. Per curiam: "By the common law, as also by the statute of Winchester, officers of this nature are incident to districts, having separate jurisdiction: and in many cases a mandamus will lie to appoint officers for the first time where the exigency of circumstances require it. While the expenses were here very small, the corporation might submit to pay them without a rate; but having become heavier, that previous payment does not preclude them from making this rate, or discharge other persons from liability." (James v. Green, 12 East's Rep. 117, decided before the 55 Geo. 3, c. 51). 55 Geo. 3, c. 51.

The case of Weatherhead v. Drewry and Others (11 East, 168; ante, Vol. I. tit. "Constable") establishes that where a district has an exclusive jurisdiction of the peace it is liable to a rate in the nature of a county rate, and that the words "liberties and franchises having commissions of the peace within themselves," contained in stat. 13 Geo. II. c. 18, include "charter justices;" and that by consequence a borough having such justices may make a rate in the nature of a county rate. Charter justices.

A rate in the nature of a county rate may be levied in Berwick-upon-Tweed under the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 24, that being a place not subject to the commission of the peace of any county in England, and never having contributed to a rate made for any county, although it does not lie within the body of any English county, and although no rate had ever been levied there before; the corporation having defrayed, out of their own funds, the charges to which the sums raised by a county rate are applicable. (Rex v. Berwick-upon-Tweed, 8 B. & Cres. 327; 2 M. & R. 378, S. C.;) and the following is part of Lord Tenterden's judgment in that case; "I cannot entertain a doubt that it was the intention of the legislature, in the statutes 13 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 7, and 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 24, to include every place that had a jurisdiction of its own, and did not contribute to the county rate, and was not subject to the commission of the peace for any county. We ought to put such a construction on the words of the act as will best satisfy that intention. If the words used in their ordinary import are a little too narrow, we ought, in furtherance of the intention of the legislature, to extend them to meet a particular case. Berwick has a separate jurisdiction; it is not subject to the commission of the peace of any county, and does not, nor did, before the passing of the statute 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 24, contribute or pay to the rate made for any county. The words are, 'did not pay or contribute to the rates made for the said counties at large.' I think we must understand the words 'said counties at large' to mean any county at large. Berwick-upon-Tweed does not indeed lie within any English county, but that is immaterial. Any town or place which has a separate jurisdiction, and is not subject to the commission of the peace of any county, and does not contribute to the rate made for any county, is within the act, although it may not be within the body of an English county. As to the other point, it is established by Weatherhead v. Drewry, and James v. Green, that if the justices of Berwick had jurisdiction to make the rate, this court will not inquire into the necessity or propriety of making it. The rule for a certiorari must, therefore, be discharged."

Where a borough town was incorporated by charter, and certain members of the corporation were made justices (but without power to try felonies), and the charter contained a general non-intromittant clause, wholly preventing the interference of the county justices within the town:—Held, that a rate, in the nature of a county rate, might be imposed by the justices of the town, under the authority given by the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 24. (Mercer v. Davis, 10 Barn. & Cres. 617). The following is part of Bayley, J.'s judgment in that case:—"The case of Weatherhead v. Drewry (11 East, 169) establishes the position, that where a district has an exclusive jurisdiction of the peace, it is liable to a rate in the nature of a county rate. That, therefore, is an authority to show that the Maidstone charter having a general non-intromittant clause as to the county justices, the borough justices have power to make a rate in the nature of a county rate. The county justices are altogether excluded, and cannot in any wise interfere in any single act in their character of justices of the peace. We have been pressed with the decision in Rex v. Clarke, and if that were applicable to this case, we should have to decide another question, viz. whether the borough of Maidstone can raise its own rate for some purposes, and be liable to the general county rate for others. But the case of Rex v. Clarke is very different; for there the city justices had jurisdiction as to some matters only, and the county justices retained their power and jurisdiction as to others; and the only point decided there was, that the city ought to contribute to the county rate. Here the county justices have no jurisdiction, and the borough justices are not county justices for any purposes. They can only commit to their own gaol, and have no power to commit to the county gaol, as in the Liverpool case (Rex v. Houghton, 5 M. & Sel. 300). Then, according to Rex v. Miers, the expenses of prosecutions at the assizes for felonies committed in Maidstone are not to be paid out of the general county rate. For these reasons, I am of opinion that the rate in question was properly made, and that our judgment must be for the defendant."

In Bates v. Winstanley (4 M. & Sel. 429) it was decided that a charter giving jurisdiction to borough justices over a district not within the borough, without words of exclusive jurisdiction, does not exclude the county justices from rating the district to a county rate.

The proviso in the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, (post, 209), stating that that act shall not give any jurisdiction to the justices of the county over any places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction, is confined to franchises having a separate jurisdiction co-extensive with that possessed by the county justices; and, therefore, where the justices of the city of B. had no jurisdiction by charter to try felons, it was held that the city of B. was liable to the county rate. (R. v. Clarke, 5 B. & Ald. 665; 1 D. & R. 316, S. C.; more fully noticed, post, 210; and see R. v. Shepherd, 4 Nev. & M. 185; 2 Ad. & Ell. 298, post, 211, 212).

12 Geo. 2, c. 29. High constables to pay the monies to the treasurers appointed by the quarter sessions, and they to whomsoever the justices shall direct.

By 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, "The respective high constables shall and they are hereby required, at or before the next general or quarter sessions respectively after they or any of them shall have received such sum or sums of money, to pay the same into the hands of such person or persons (being resident in any such county, riding, division, city, liberty, or place where such rates shall be respectively made) whom the said justices shall at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, appoint to be the treasurer or treasurers (which treasurer or treasurers they are hereby authorized and empowered to nominate and appoint), such treasurer or treasurers first giving sufficient security in such sums as shall be approved of by the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to be accountable for the several and respective sums of money which shall be respectively paid to them in pursuance of this act; and to pay such sum or sums of money as shall be ordered to be paid by the justices in their general or quarter sessions, and for the due and faithful execution of the trusts reposed in him or them; and all and every such sum or sums of money as shall be paid into his or their hands by virtue of and in pursuance of this act shall be deemed and taken to be the public stock; and the said treasurer or treasurers shall and are hereby required to pay so much of the money in their hands to such person and persons as the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, shall by their orders from time to time direct and appoint, for the uses and purposes of the said recited acts, and for any other uses and purposes to which the public stock of any county, city, riding, division, or liberty is or shall be applicable by law."

Treasurers to keep books of entries, and to account upon oath.

7. "The said respective treasurer or treasurers shall and are hereby required to keep books of entries of the several sums respectively received and paid by him or them in pursuance of this act; and is and are also hereby required to deliver in true and exact accounts upon oath if required (which oath the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions are hereby empowered to administer) of all and every

the sum and sums of money respectively received and paid by him or them, distinguishing the particular uses to which such sum or sums of money have been applied, to the justices at every general or quarter sessions respectively to be holden within the limits of their commissions; and shall lay before the justices at such sessions the proper vouchers for the same." 12 Geo 2, c. 29.

8. "The respective high constables shall and they are hereby required to demand and levy such rates and assessments in manner before directed, and shall account for the same before the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, if thereunto required, in the like manner as the said treasurer or treasurers is and are hereby directed to account; and in case such high constables, or any of them, shall neglect or refuse so to demand, levy, or account, then it shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices, at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to commit such high constable or high constables to the common gaol of the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, there to remain without bail or mainprize until he or they shall have caused such rates or assessments to be demanded and levied, and shall have rendered a true account or accounts in the manner hereby directed; and in case it shall appear by such account or accounts that any sum or sums of money is or are remaining in his or their hands, which he or they shall have received of the respective churchwardens and overseers, or other persons, which ought to have been paid to the respective treasurer or treasurers, at the time or times limited by this act, or of the respective treasurer or treasurers, in order to be applied to the purposes aforesaid; and if he or they shall neglect or refuse to pay the same over into the hands of the respective treasurer or treasurers, or otherwise, if thereunto required by order of the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, then it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, at such their general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to commit such high constable or high constables to the common gaol of the county, riding, division, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, there to remain without bail or mainprize until he or they shall have made full payment of the sum or sums of money that shall appear to be due on such account or accounts; and all the accounts and vouchers of the said treasurers and high constables shall, after having been passed by the said justices at their respective general or quarter sessions, be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the time being of each county respectively, or the town clerk, high bailiff, or chief officer of any city, town corporate, or liberty, who is and are hereby required to keep them among the records of such county, city, town corporate, or liberty, to be inspected from time to time by any of the said justices (a) within the limits of their commissions, as occasion shall require, without fee or reward." High constable's charge. Penalty on default. Their and the treasurer's vouchers to be kept among the records of the county, &c.

9. "The receipts of such respective treasurer or treasurers shall be sufficient discharges to all high constables; and the discharges of the said justices of the peace, or the greater part of them, by their orders made at their respective general or quarter sessions to such treasurer or treasurers, shall be deemed and allowed as good and sufficient releases, acquittances, or discharges in any court of law or equity to all intents and purposes whatsoever." 11. "It shall and may be lawful to and for the said justices of the peace at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to continue from time to time such treasurer or treasurers in his or their office or offices so long as they shall see convenient, and to remove him or them at their pleasure, and appoint any other person or persons in his or their place; and to allow to him or them and every of them, insisting on the same, such reasonable sum or sums of money for his or their care and pains in the execution of such trust, not exceeding twenty pounds by the year, as they in their discretions shall think fit; which they are hereby empowered to direct the payment of out of the monies arising by the respective rates hereby appointed to be made."

Parishes overrated to appeal to the said sessions.

12. "In case the churchwardens and overseers of any parish or place shall at any time have reason to believe the said parish or place is overrated, such churchwardens and overseers may appeal to the respective justices of the peace at their next general or quarter sessions against such part of the rate only as may affect the parishes or places in which they serve such offices; which justices, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, are hereby authorized and empowered to hear and finally determine the same: Provided nevertheless, that upon such appeal such rate shall not be quashed or destroyed in regard to any other parishes or places assessed thereby." (See 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 14, post, 217).

No repairs of bridges &c. but upon presentments of the grand jury.

13. "No part of the money to be raised and collected in pursuance of this act shall be applied to the repair of any bridges, gaols, prisons, or houses of correction, until presentments be made by the respective grand juries at the assize, great sessions, general gaol delivery, or general or quarter sessions of the peace held for any county, riding, division, city, town corporate, or liberty, of the insufficiency, inconveniency, or want of reparation of their bridges, gaols, prisons, or houses of correction."

Justices to contract with persons for public repairs upon public notice.

"From and after the first day of June one thousand seven hundred and thirty-nine, when any public bridges, ramparts, banks or cops, or other works, are to be repaired at the expense of any county, city, riding, hundred, division, liberty, or town corporate, it shall and may be lawful to and for the justices of the peace at their general or quarter sessions respectively, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, if they think proper and convenient, after presentment to be made as aforesaid of the want of reparation of such bridges, ramparts, banks, or cops, to contract and agree with any person or persons for rebuilding, repairing, and amending of such bridges, ramparts, banks or cops as shall be within their respective counties, cities, ridings, hundreds, divisions, liberties, or towns corporate, and all other works which are to be repaired and done by assessment on the respective counties, cities, ridings, hundreds, divisions, liberties, or towns corporate, for any term or terms of years, not exceeding seven years, at a certain annual sum, payment, or allowance for the same; such contractor or contractors giving sufficient security for the due performance thereof to the respective clerk of the peace for the time being, or the town clerk, high bailiff, or chief officer of any city, town corporate, or liberty; and that such justices at their respective general or quarter sessions shall give public notice of their intention of contracting with any person or persons for rebuilding, repairing, and amending the bridges, ramparts, banks or cops, and other works aforesaid; and that such contracts shall be made at the most reasonable price or prices which shall be proposed by such contractors respectively; and that all contracts when agreed to, and to all orders relating thereto, shall be entered in a book to be

12 Geo 2, c. 29.

15. "There shall be but one rate made and assessed by the justices of the peace of the county of Middlesex, in the said county, city, and liberty of Westminster, for the several purposes aforesaid, and for the repair of the gaol commonly called New Prison, in the said county of Middlesex."

Justices to make but one rate for Middlesex.

16. "Provided nevertheless, that the justices of the peace for the city and liberty of Westminster, at their general or quarter sessions to be holden for the same city or liberty, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, shall have full power to appoint the governor or master of the house of correction within the said city or liberty, who shall have such sum of money yearly as hath been accustomed for and towards the support and maintenance of the prisoners in his custody who shall be sick or unable to work (not exceeding the present allowance of fifty pounds by the year), and direct the repairs and management thereof as they heretofore have done; and the treasurer or treasurers of the money arising by the rates in the said county of Middlesex and city and liberty of Westminster, hereby appointed to be collected, shall and is and are hereby required to obey all orders which shall from time to time be made by the said justices of the said city and liberty, or the greater part of them then and there assembled at their general or quarter sessions, for the payment of any sum or sums of money for the allowance allotted to such governor or master of the house of correction, and the repairs thereof, which orders shall be good and sufficient discharges to such treasurer or treasurers; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Such collectors obliged to make payment.

Provided always, that "all and every such person and persons so employed or to be employed shall account for and pay over the money by them respectively received, in the same manner, and under the like penalties for any neglect or refusal therein, as are to be inflicted by virtue of this act on any person or persons neglecting or refusing to account for or pay over any money remaining in his or their hands, which he or they have received in pursuance hereof; any thing in any of the said recited acts contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Justices of Middlesex to have the same powers at their general as at their quarter sessions.

20. "The justices of the peace for the said county of Middlesex, at their general sessions of the peace to be holden for the said county, shall have the same powers and authorities to put this act in execution as are hereby given them at their general quarter sessions; any thing in this or any former act, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding."

(a) The sessions, on an appeal under a local act against a county rate, confirmed the same subject to an opinion of this court on a special case which was brought up on a certiorari, but not the rate. The court made the rule absolute for quashing the order of sessions, but the justices at the next sessions refused to quash the rate, stating that the appeal was no longer before them. A rule nisi for a mandamus to the sessions to enter continuances and quash the rate, was discharged after argument, no substantial mischief being shewn to have arisen to the appellants from the rate, and the result of the sessions quashing it being to expose the collectors and receivers to actions, since the 12 Geo. 3, c. 29, s. 18, only protects the collectors where the rate is quashed upon a certiorari.

Held also, that the court could not order the justices to quash the rate. (Reg. v. St. George's, Hanover Square, 8 Law J. Rep. (N. S.), M. C. 18).

Part of the acts, 14 & 43 Eliz. and 19 Car. 2, repealed.

23. "Provided nevertheless, that such sums as have been annually paid to the King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons shall be paid out of the monies arising by virtue of this act, at such times and in such manner as is prescribed in and by an act passed in the eleventh year of the reign of his present Majesty, intituled 'An Act for the more effectual securing the Payments of certain Sums of Money directed by an Act made in the Forty-third Year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, intituled 'An Act for the Relief of the Poor,' to be paid by the respective Treasurers of every County of England and Wales, for the Relief of the Poor Prisoners of the King's Bench and Marshalsea prisons;' and such money as shall be judged necessary by the justices of the peace in sessions to be applied, in pursuance of the said recited act of the fourteenth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth, for the relief of prisoners, and of the said act of the nineteenth year of the reign of King Charles II., for providing materials for the setting poor prisoners on work, shall be paid out of the monies arising by this act." Manner of the payment of the King's Bench and Marshalsea money.

24. "If any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for any thing that shall be done in pursuance or by the authority of this present act, in every such case the action or suit shall be commenced within three months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be laid and brought in the respective county in which the cause of action or suit shall arise, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in such action or suit to be brought shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if it shall appear so to be done, or that such action or actions shall be brought after the time before limited for bringing the same as aforesaid, or shall be brought in any other county or place, that then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; and upon such verdict, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall be nonsuited, or discontinue his, her, or their actions or suit, after the defendant or defendants hath or have appeared, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have in other cases by law." (See 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 23, post, 221).

Limitation of actions.

General issue.

Treble costs (a).

Great inequalities and disproportions in the assessments to county rates were produced by length of time and the improper mode of assessments, which the writs of law had not power to remedy; wherefore the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of his late Majesty King George the Second for the more easy assessing, collecting and levying of County Rates," was passed, and whereby after reciting, "that the laws now in force are found ineffectual for the correction of the disproportions which now exist, or which may from time to time take place in the assessment of county rates," it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of the several counties of that part of Great Britain called England, assembled at their general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, and they are hereby authorized and empowered whenever circumstances shall appear to require it, to order and direct a fair and equal county rate to be made for all the purposes to which the county stock or rate is now or shall hereafter be made liable by law (a), according to the directions hereinafter mentioned; and for that purpose to assess and tax every parish, township and other place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the respective limits of their commissions, rateably and equally according to a certain pound rate (to be from time to time fixed and publicly declared by such justices), of the full and fair annual value of the messuages, lands, tenements and hereditaments, rateable to the relief of the poor therein; any law or statute to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to give any jurisdiction to the justices of the peace of the said several counties over any places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction, which before the passing of this act were subject to rates in the nature of county rates imposed and assessed by the justices of the peace for such liberties and franchises, or which were exempt from the rates of the county in which they lie, either in the whole or in part; nor to alter any proportion of county rate payable by any liberty or franchise having a separate jurisdiction as established between the county and the said liberty or franchise, provided such exemption or proportion shall have been created by or derived from grant, charter, or any special local act of Parliament; nor to compel any such liberty or franchise paying to some one or more of the rates specified in the preamble of an act passed in the twelfth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled, 'An Act for the more easy assessing, collecting and levying County Rates,' to pay to any other rate therein mentioned, to which such liberty or franchise was not liable to contribute before the passing of the said act; nor to repeal or alter the provisions of any acts now in force which shall have fixed the times and places of holding any general or annual general sessions or adjournment thereof, for the assessing the rates of any county, or for the raising, levying or collecting the same, but that such provisions so fixing the time or place of holding such general or annual general sessions or adjournment thereof, and of then and there exclusively transacting the matters therein mentioned respecting the county rates, shall be and remain in full force; and that all the matters and things which in and by this act are authorized to be done by the justices of the peace at their general or quarter sessions or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, shall be done and performed exclusively at such general or annual general sessions or at some adjournment thereof, and at no other time or place than such as shall have been fixed by any such act."

A pound rate.

Not to alter proportion of franchise having separate jurisdiction.

12 Geo. 2, c 20.

Nor to alter times of holding any general quarter sessions for assessing county rates.

The proviso in this first section of the 55 Geo III. extends only to places which have a jurisdiction separate from and co-extensive with the jurisdiction of the county justices; and, therefore, where the justices of the city of B. had no jurisdiction to try felons, it was held, that the city of B. was liable to the county rate. (R. v. Clarke, 1 D. & R. 316; 5 B. & Ald. 665, S. C.) The following is the judgment of Abbott, C. J. in that case:—" I am of opinion, that the city of Bath is liable to contribute to the county rate, and that in this case our judgment should be for the Crown. The question depends on the construction to be put upon the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 1, by which a power is given to the justices of the county to tax every parish, township and other place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the respective limits of their commissions. The first question, therefore, which arises is, whether the city of Bath be within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices of the county of Somerset. Now it appears from the statement of the case, that they alone have the power of trying felonies committed within the city. It is, therefore, clear, that Bath is within the limits of their jurisdiction. Then comes the proviso, which states, that the act shall not give any jurisdiction to the justices of the county over any places situate within the limits of any liberties or franchises having a separate jurisdiction. Then is the city of Bath a franchise 'having a separate jurisdiction?' I think that these words must mean 'having a separate jurisdiction co-extensive with that possessed by the county justices.' Here it is clear, that the justices of Bath have no such jurisdiction: for their jurisdiction is by the charter of Elizabeth confined to such trespasses, offences, defects and articles, which do or may belong to the office of a justice of the peace. It is clear from these words, that it does not extend to felony, and, therefore, is not co-extensive with that of the county justices. Then, if so, the case does not fall within that part of the proviso; but the proviso goes further, and speaks of places which before the act were 'subject to rates in the nature of county rates, or which were exempt from the rates of the county, either in the whole or in part, under some grant, charter, or local act of Parliament.' Now it is clear from the case, that the city of Bath, previously to the 55 Geo. III. was not subject to any rate in the nature of a county rate, nor do I find it stated, that it was legally exempted by any grant, charter, or local act of Parliament. Upon the whole, therefore, I am of opinion, that the city of Bath does not fall within the proviso. Nor does the 24th section, as it seems to me, carry the case any further, for that clause only applies to such franchises as have commissions of the peace within themselves, and are not subject to the jurisdiction of the commission of the peace for the counties in which they lie. Here the city of Bath was, in my opinion, subject to that jurisdiction, and our judgment, therefore, must be for the Crown."

(a) See ante, 194, 195, as to the purposes for which the rate may be made.

55 Geo. 3, c. 51.

By the charters of the borough of Marlborough the burgesses were exempt from suit of shires and hundreds, and all pleas and plaints, except pleas of the Crown, from duel, and from being impleaded out of the borough in pleas concerning tenements in the borough, and from all secular exactions. The borough had also fairs and markets, and a prison for custody of persons till delivered by law, and power to send to the county gaol prisoners apprehended for treason, murder, felony, or suspicion of felony. There was also a power to make bye-laws for the government of the inhabitants, and to have courts leet and courts of piepoudre: there were borough justices, who were prohibited from determining felony without special mandate from the Crown; the mayor was coroner, escheator, and clerk of the market; and there was a non-intromittant clause as to other justices, escheators, coroners, or clerks of the market. In practice the county magistrates exercised no jurisdiction within the borough, their warrants being backed by the borough magistrates. There were borough quarter sessions, at which misdemeanors were tried, but not felonies. There was a borough gaol, supported by the borough, in which prisoners were sometimes placed previous to examination. Prisoners to be tried at the borough quarter sessions, or remaining in custody for any time, were confined in a county bridewell within the borough, at the expense of the borough. Prisoners charged with felonies committed within the borough were tried at the county assizes, and previously confined in the said county bridewell; or where the offences were heavy, in the county gaol without the borough, in which case the borough paid the expense of conveying them to the county gaol; but the county paid the expenses of conveying them from the county bridewell to the assizes, and maintained them in the county gaol without the borough. The borough paid the expenses of passing vagrants, and of inquests, the mayor acting as coroner. The borough repaired a bridge within the borough. The above borough expenses were defrayed by a borough rate, first levied in 1775. No county rate had been levied in it. Held, that M. was a place of a separate jurisdiction, derived from charter, and one which before stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 51 was subject to rates, in the nature of county rates, imposed by its own justices, and therefore, by the proviso in sect. 1, was exempt from county rates. (Rex v. Shepherd, 2 Adol. & Ell. 298; 4 Nev. & M. 185).

Where a district situate within the local limits of the county of York had ever been deemed as part of the county of Durham, but had always contributed to the public burthens of the former county, it was held, that it was to be presumed that such district, either in the original division of land into counties, or at some subsequent period when it was separated from the county of York, made part of the county of Durham on condition of its contributing to the burthens of the county of York, in which it was locally situate, and that such district was liable to the rate imposed on that county. (Johnson v. Dealtry, 3 B. & Ald. 72; see R. v. West Riding, Yorkshire, 12 East, 117, ante, 200; R. v. Austen, D. & R. C. N. P. 24).

Under sect. 1, a borough cannot claim exemption from county rate as situate within a franchise "having a separate jurisdiction," on the ground that such borough has by charter justices of the peace, coroners, a court of record for civil causes, and a prison of its own; the justices not having power to hold sessions to try felonies, and the charter containing no non-intromittant clause; and the county justices having, in fact, often committed prisoners to the county gaol for offences done within the borough, and the maintenance of such prisoners, and the expenses of such prosecutions, (except in one instance), having been borne by the county. (Rex v. Hayward, 6 Ad. & El. 590). The court will not presume an exemption of such borough from county rate by immemorial prescription, or a lost grant, on the ground that the borough has never yet paid county rate, and has always maintained its own bridges and gaol, and borne the expenses of inquisitions held by its coroners. Ib.

Some boroughs not to be liable to county rates

By the 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, s. 112, after a grant of a separate court of quarter sessions shall have been made to any borough, the justices of the county in which such borough is situate shall not assess any property therein to any county rate thereafter to be made. But by the 113 sect. such boroughs shall bear the expenses of prosecutions at the assizes. (See ante, "Corporations," p. 111).

55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 2, "For the better enabling the said justices to make such fair and equal county rates," enacts, "That it shall be lawful for them at any general or general quarter sessions of the peace, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, (to be holden after the passing of this act), and as often as they shall deem it expedient, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to issue precepts signed by their chairman, or by the clerk of the peace, under the authority of the said court, to the high constables, petty constables, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, assessors and collectors of public rates and taxes of or for the several and respective parishes, townships, and places, whether parochial or otherwise, within their jurisdiction, or to such and so many of them as to the said justices shall seem expedient, requiring the said constables, churchwardens and overseers of the poor, assessors and collectors respectively, to make returns in writing to the justices of their respective divisions in petty sessions assembled (which returns shall be verified on oath at the time of delivery, before any two or more such justices) of the total amount of the full and fair annual value of the several estates and rateable property within the parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, to which they respectively belong, charged or assessed to the poor's rate at the time of making such return, or liable so to be, or charged or assessed on any other rate or assessment, whether parochial or public, without regard nevertheless to the actual amounts or sums assessed on the property therein, save and except in such parishes, townships, or places only, where such property is assessed to the full and fair estimated annual productive value."

Sect. 6. "If any churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, assessor or assessors, or collector or collectors, shall neglect or make default in making such return or returns as aforesaid, or if it shall happen that notwithstanding the incurring of any such penalty or penalties as aforesaid, for or on account of such neglect or default, a return for any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, shall not be made within the time limited for the making thereof, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for the said justices, and they are hereby required, either at the said general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, or at some subsequent general or quarter sessions to be held for the same county, or at some adjournment or adjournments thereof, or at some petty sessions, or adjournment or adjournments thereof respectively, as the case may be, to ascertain the annual value of the property chargeable to the county rate, within or for each and every the parish, township, and place, whether parochial or otherwise, of which the constable or constables, churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers, assessor or assessors, collector or collectors, shall have so neglected or made default in making such return as aforesaid, by issuing fresh precepts, or by such other means as may appear to the said justices the most convenient and proper towards the obtaining a just and fair estimate of such annual value; and the said justices of the peace of the county in general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment or adjournments thereof, assembled, acting on their own discretion, or on the report of any two or more justices acting in and for any division of such county, as the case may be, shall order such allowance or compensation to be made to the persons employed in ascertaining the said annual value and in making such returns as aforesaid, as to the said justices so assembled shall appear reasonable; and all such allowances and compensations, and other expenses as shall be thereby incurred, shall be by the said justices so assembled charged upon the parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, of which the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, shall have so neglected or made default as aforesaid, in addition to the proportion of the said county rate to be paid by such parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise; and such allowances, compensations, and expenses, shall and may be raised, levied, and collected by such and the like ways and means as the said county rate can or may be raised, levied, and collected, and shall be paid therewith, due distinction being made in the case of every such additional assessment between the sum or sums charged for and on account of any such expenses and the sum or sums assessed as and for the county rate." Sect. 8. "In such place or places where there is no poor's rate, (that is, co-extensive with the district assessed; Rex v. Yorkshire, W. R., ante, 200; and see post, s. 13), or overseer of the poor or churchwarden, or other officer, necessary for the execution of the provisions of this act, residing within the limits of the jurisdiction of the justices of the peace of the county requiring such returns, and in which there is any property liable to the poor's rate, but not rated or assessed thereto, it shall and may be lawful for the said justices of the peace of the county, assembled as aforesaid, or for the justices of the peace resident in and acting for any division of the county in which such place or places are situate, at any petty sessions or adjournment thereof, to be holden by them within such division as aforesaid, and they are hereby authorized and required to appoint one or more person or persons to act as overseer or overseers, (See 56 Geo. III. c. 49, post, 222; and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 2, post, 227).

Sect. 9. "For the better enabling as well the said justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, as the justices of the several divisions acting under the order or orders of the justices assembled as aforesaid, respectively, to ascertain the fair annual value of all property liable to be so rated;" enacts, "that it shall and may be lawful to and for such justices, or any two or more of them, from time to time, whenever the same may be, in the judgment of such justices, necessary for the more correct execution of this act. to cause any of the books of assessment of any rates or taxes, parliamentary or parochial, which have lately been, are now, or shall hereafter be laid on any part of the property, liable to be assessed towards the purposes for which a county rate is applicable, and the valuation by which such assessments are or were made, mentioned, and described, within any parish or place within the limits of the jurisdiction of the said justices, in the hands of any constable, churchwarden, overseer, assessor, or collector, to be brought before them or him, and to take copies or extracts of and from such books, or any parts thereof, or to order and direct any person to take such copies or extracts from such books, in the hands of them or any of them, without having the same brought before the said justices, or to call before them any such constable, churchwarden, overseer, assessor, or collector, to give evidence respecting the same, as they, or he, or any of them, shall think fit, such compensation being made to the person or persons employed for any of the purposes aforesaid, as the said justices, or any two or more of them, shall think reasonable; and if any person or persons, in whose custody or power any of the said books may be, shall neglect or refuse to attend the said justices with such book or books, or to permit any such copies or extracts to be taken as aforesaid, or to give such information or evidence on oath as may be required by such justices, (which oath such justices, or any one or more of them, are and is hereby authorized to administer), then and in every such case, every person who shall so refuse or neglect, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds; and moreover it shall be lawful for such justices in the like cases, from time to time to cause copies of the total amount assessed in each parish, township, or place, in respect of any aids or taxes payable to his Majesty, his heirs or successors, and the total amount of the valuation of the property on which such assessments were made in any year then elapsed, to be made out by the clerk to the commissioners of each district within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justices, such compensation being made to the respective clerks as the said justices, or any two of them, shall think reasonable; and if any such clerk shall neglect or refuse to make out such copies within a reasonable time after his receipt of the order of such justices, every such clerk shall forfeit and pay the sum of twenty pounds."

Sect. 10. "For the better enabling the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, chief constables, and other persons, to make accurate returns as hereinbefore required, in cases where doubts are entertained," enacts, "that it shall be lawful for them, or any of them, or for such other person or persons as they may select for that purpose, by warrant under the hands and seals of any two or more justices of the peace of the county in general or quarter sessions assembled, to enter upon,

Sect. 11. "Whenever the justices in general or quarter sessions assembled shall have ordered any county rate to be made, which they are hereby authorized to order from time to time whenever the same shall be necessary, and the justices in petty sessions shall by any of the aforesaid ways and means have ascertained to their own satisfaction the fair and just annual value of any or of all the rateable property within their respective divisions, and they are hereby required from time to time to certify under their hands the true amount thereof to the then next general or quarter sessions of the peace for the same county, to the intent that at such general or quarter sessions, or at some adjournment or adjournments thereof, or at some subsequent general or quarter sessions, or adjournment or adjournments thereof, the justices there assembled may from time to time, and as often as they shall deem it necessary, make a fair and equal rate on all such rateable property, or correct any inequalities which upon appeal shall be shown to their satisfaction to exist in any rate now existing or hereafter to be made."

12. "And it shall be lawful to and for the justices of the peace of any county, or the major part of them, in general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, assembled, as often as they shall have deemed it necessary to make a rate or rates, assessment or assessments on all the rateable property within the limits of their jurisdiction, according to the fair annual value of the same, as derived from any or all of the several sources of information which are hereinbefore mentioned, and they are hereby authorized and empowered to order warrants to be from time to time issued, in the same manner as now authorized and practised by law for collecting the county rates, to the several high constables within their respective counties, ordering and requiring them to issue their warrants to the respective overseers of the poor within their respective divisions, to levy, collect, and pay to the said high constables, within a time to be named and limited in the warrant to be issued from the sessions as aforesaid, all such rate or rates, assessment or assessments, which each high constable shall and he is hereby directed and required to pay, at such time as shall be specified in such warrant, to the treasurer of the county for the time being, to be applied and disposed of in such manner and for such purposes as the county stock or rate is now applicable or may hereafter be made applicable by law: and in case any overseer or overseers of the poor, or other person appointed to act as such under the provisions of this act, in any of the several parishes, townships, or places, whether parochial or otherwise, within any county liable to pay the same, shall neglect, make default, or refuse to pay the same within the time to be specified and limited for that purpose as aforesaid, to the high constable of the division within which such overseer or overseers, or other person or persons so liable and neglecting to pay, shall reside or be appointed to act, it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace of the said county, upon complaint thereof made by any such high constable, by warrant under the hand and seal of any such justice, to levy the same by distress and sale of the offender's goods; and the overseer or overseers of the poor of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, or other person or persons appointed to act as such overseer or overseers, shall and may and is and are hereby empowered to levy and raise, by an equal rate or assessment upon all and every the several estates and property rateable to the relief of the poor, within their respective parishes, townships, or places, whether parochial or otherwise, such sum and sums of money as shall be required and necessary, in order to raise the several sums assessed upon such parishes, townships, or places respectively; or to reimburse such overseer or overseers, or other person or persons as aforesaid, such sum or sums of money as they shall respectively have paid on account of the same; such rate or assessment to be paid by the occupier or occupiers for the time being of such estates and rateable property as aforesaid." (See, on the construction of this section, Fernley v. Worthington, 1 Scott, N. R. 432).

55 Geo. 3, c. 51.

To reimburse overseers.

Rates to be paid by the occupier.

13. Reciting "it would be inconvenient and oppressive to many townships or places, that the sum of money which may be assessed on them as or for a county rate under this act, should be paid out of any rate made for the relief of the poor, where such poor rate doth not apply separately and distinctly to the parish, township, or place," enacts, "that it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace, at their general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, if they shall think convenient, to order the sum of money directed to be assessed as or for the county rate on any such parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, to be paid and levied on the churchwardens, overseers, or petty constables, of or for any such parish, township, or place, in such manner as the same is herein directed to be paid and levied in cases where no rate is made for the relief of the poor; any thing herein contained, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary notwithstanding." (See 56 Geo. III. c. 49, post, 222, and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 1, post, 226).

In places where poor rate does not separately apply, justices may order county rate to be levied as when no poor rate.

14. "If the churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, or other inhabitant or inhabitants of any parish, township, or place, whether parochial or otherwise, where there is no churchwarden or overseer, or person appointed to act as such, shall at any time have reason to think that such parish, township, or place is aggrieved by any rate now existing or hereafter to be made, either in pursuance of this act or of any act or acts now in force, whether it be on account of the proportions assessed upon the respective parishes, townships, or places being unequal, or on account of some one or more of them being without sufficient cause omitted altogether from the rate, or on account of such parish, township, or place being rated at a higher proportion of the pound sterling according to the fair annual value of the rateable property therein, or on account of some other parish or parishes, township or townships, place or places, being rated at a lower proportion of the pound sterling according to the fair annual value of the rateable property therein, than has been fixed and declared by the justices of the peace of the said county in sessions assembled, as the basis of the rate of the said county, or on account of any other just cause of complaint whatsoever; it shall be lawful for such churchwarden or churchwardens, overseer or overseers of the poor, or other inhabitant or inhabitants where there is no churchwarden or overseer, or person appointed to act as such, to appeal to the justices of the peace for the county at any general or quarter sessions, against such part of the rate only as may affect the parish or parishes, township or townships, place or places, which are unequally rated, or which shall appear to be overrated or under-rated, or omitted altogether from the rate; and the said justices are hereby empowered to hear and finally determine the same, and either to confirm such parts of the rate as have been appealed against, or to correct such inequalities, disproportions, or omissions, as shall be proved to exist therein, in such manner as to them the said justices shall appear fair, just, and equitable; any thing in this act, or any former act or acts, or any law, usage, or custom to the contrary thereof notwithstanding: provided nevertheless, that upon such appeal no such rate shall be quashed or destroyed in regard to any other parish, township, or place, unless in cases where the justices of the peace of any county, in general or quarter sessions assembled, or the major part of them, shall deem it necessary to proceed to the making of an entire new rate, and shall proceed therein according to the provisions of this act." (And see stat. 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 12, ante, 206; 57 Geo. III. c. 94, ss. 1, 2, post, 224, 225; and 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85, s. 3, post, 227, 228).

I think (said Bayley, J.) that the true construction to put on the clause giving the right of appeal is, that the parish, township, or place must be aggrieved. Here the fact stated in the notice is, that particular individuals are rated higher in the township of Shap than other individuals are in the parish of Bampton. I think that it is incumbent on a party appealing against a county rate to show that the appellant parish, township, or place is rated in a higher proportion, with reference to some other parish, than it ought to be. But no act of Parliament having required the grounds of appeal to be specified in the notice, the sessions ought either to have heard or adjourned the appeal to the next sessions. If the justices thought that the respondents were misled by the terms of the notice of appeal, they ought to have adjourned it. But they refused to hear the appeal altogether, which was improper." (Rex v. Westmoreland, 10 B. & C. 226).

From a perusal of this clause (said Denman, C. J.) it is perfectly obvious that the appeal is given to remedy total omissions of parishes from the rate, or inequalities and disproportions (in relation to each other) in their contributions thereto, and nothing else. Individual grievances, arising from unequal and disproportionate impositions in each of the parishes, townships, or places, are nowhere mentioned, or even alluded to. The grievances and complaints of the whole parish, township, or place, only are noticed, and accordingly the appeal is given exclusively to the public officer of the district or division, the churchwarden or overseer. When the word "inhabitant" is used, it is not to be understood as being applicable to any individual, but to such only as for the purpose of appeal, represents some place where the clause supposes neither churchwarden nor overseer to exist, and who must therefore be understood to be placed upon the same footing as churchwardens and overseers. (Reg. v. Recorder of Bath, 9 Ad. & Ell. 877).

A power of appeal is given by 55 Geo. 3, c. 51, s. 14, against a county rate made in fixed proportions, and invariably adopted for a series of years.

An appeal is given by this section against a county rate, though made in fixed proportions, and invariably adopted for a series of years. (R. v. Js. of York, 2 B. & Cres. 771). A rule had been obtained calling upon the defendants to shew cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding them to cause continuances to their next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden in and for the said city and county, to be entered, upon the appeal of the overseers of the poor of the parish of St. Crux in the said city, against a rate or assessment made by virtue of an order of the court of general quarter sessions of the peace held for the said city and county, on Friday the 17th day of October, 1823, whereby the inhabitants of the parish of St. Crux were assessed in the sum of 32*l.* 14*s.* 9*d.* as their proportion of the sum by the court directed to be estreated on the inhabitants of the said city and county, and at such next general quarter sessions of the peace to hear and determine the merits of the said appeal. It appeared that a rate had been made and imposed upon the respective parties within the city and county in such fixed proportions as had been for a long series of years invariably adopted. Against this rate the parish of St. Crux had appealed, on the ground of being over-rated, but the sessions refused to entertain the appeal, conceiving that they were not authorized by any existing law to vary the fixed proportions of the county rates from the form in which they had for many years existed. After argument, Abbott, C. J., said, "We are of opinion that a power of appealing is given by the 14th section of stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 51, in a case like the present; and instead of thinking such a power at variance with the object of that act, we consider it the most convenient construction that the statute can receive.

The appeal may be made at any time, though the rate was made under a particular act of Parliament, which required the appeal to be made within a certain time. (R. v. Js. of Buckinghamshire, 7 B. & Cres. 3; see "Appeal," Vol. I.)

55 Geo. 3, c. 51.

Time of appeal.

In the notice of appeal the party appealing must state that he is aggrieved, or state that from which it follows of necessity that he is so; and where a notice of appeal against a county rate stated, as the ground of appeal, that the county rate was unequal and defective, inasmuch as the appellant parish was charged and assessed in the rate at a higher proportion of the pound sterling according to the fair annual value of the rateable property than the respondent parish: and the sessions, upon the hearing of the appeal, received the evidence of surveyors as to the annual value of the rateable property of both parishes, and amended the rate by altering the assessment according to the annual value of the two parishes according to the evidence so taken, but leaving the statement of the annual value of the two to remain as before. It was held, that the sessions were not warranted by the notice of appeal in so amending the rate. (R. v. Blackawton, 13 B. & Cres. 792).

Contents of notice of.

But it is not necessary in the notice of appeal to specify the grounds of appeal, though, if the appellant states in his notice, as causes of appeal, things which are not so, the court of quarter sessions ought to adjourn the appeal if they think the respondents have been misled by the terms of the notice, or otherwise to hear it. (R. v. Js. of Westmoreland, 10 B. & Cres. 226).

Fourteen clear days' notice of appeal must be given to the parties against whose rate the appeal is to be made, the clerk of the peace of the county and the hundred constable, of the intention to try such appeal at the next general or quarter sessions of the peace. (57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 2, post, 225).

Notice of appeal.

As to certiorari to remove rates, see 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 21, ante, p. 208.

Where the rate is levied by distress on the goods of the persons liable, (as in extra-parochial and other places within the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 85) sect. 3 (post, 227, 228) gives an appeal to the next general or quarter sessions.

Sect. 15, which enacts that the expense of appeals shall be paid by parishes, or persons appealing, is repealed by the 57 Geo. III. c. 94, s. 3; and by sect. 4 the expenses shall be paid in such proportions as the justices shall award, (post, 225).

Sect. 16. "It shall and may be lawful for the justices of the peace of any county, in general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof, from time to time assembled, to order such allowances and compensations to be made to the overseers, churchwardens, constables, assessors, collectors, clerks, or other persons employed in the execution of this act, which have not hereinbefore been provided for, from, by, and out of the monies assessed, levied, and collected by any county rate made under this or any former act or acts, as to the said justices shall appear reasonable and proper."

Power to justices to compensate persons employed out of county rates.

It is questionable whether the sessions have power under this enactment to make any compensation to the clerk of the peace. (See "Clerk of the Peace," Vol. I.)

Sect. 19. "The justices of the peace of the said several counties are hereby authorized and empowered to demand and take, whenever they shall think fit, good and sufficient security, to be approved of by the said justices in general or quarter sessions assembled, from the high constables employed in the collecting and levying the rates; and that if any such high constable, upon being so called upon by the said justices, shall neglect or refuse to give such security as shall be approved by them, it shall then be lawful for the said justices of the peace in quarter sessions assembled to order and direct the churchwardens and overseers of the poor, or other persons appointed to assess, collect, and levy the rates of any parish, township, or place, to pay the quota which shall be assessed thereupon towards the county rate to the treasurer of the county, division, or place in which such parish, township, or place shall be situate; and the receipt of such treasurer shall be a sufficient discharge for the same." (See sect. 2 of 57 Geo. III. c. 94, as to Exclusive Jurisdictions, post, 225).

A chief constable appointed for one of the divisions of a riding gave a bond to the clerk of the peace, with condition that he should well and faithfully execute his office, should pay, apply, and account for all sums of money coming to his hands as chief constable of his division, and should in all other respects perform and observe all such orders and directions as should be made or given to him in respect of his said office. The justices of the riding having ordered a rate to be levied on the inhabitants according to a certain valuation, the constable collected from his division and paid over to the treasurer an undue proportion of rate. The justices in sessions resolved that the bond was forfeited, but that no proceedings should be taken upon it. Application being made to this court on behalf of some of the parties aggrieved for a mandamus to the justices or clerk of the peace to put the bond in suit, the court refused a rule to show cause. (Re Lodge, 2 Ad. & El. 123).

Semble, that the taking of a bond with the above condition is not warranted by the above 19th section. (Id.)

Sect. 4. "In all cases where any penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money may, under or by virtue of the said recited acts or this act, or any of them, by the warrant of any justice or justices of the peace, be directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any person or persons, if sufficient distress cannot be found within the limits of the jusrisdiction of the justice granting such warrant of distress, on oath thereof made by one witness before any justice of the peace of any other county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place (which oath shall be by him certified by indorsement on such warrant), such penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money, or so much thereof as may not have been before levied or paid, shall and may, by virtue of such warrant and indorsement, be raised and levied by the person or persons to whom such warrant of distress shall have been originally directed, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person or persons in such other county, riding, division, city, borough, town corporate, or place; and the money arising by such distress and sale shall be applied and disposed of for such purpose, and in like manner, as if sufficient goods and chattels of such person or persons had been found within the jurisdiction of the justice originally granting such warrant; and if no such distress can be found, such offender or offenders shall and may be forthwith proceeded against according to law."

Sect. 5. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 48.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 48, intituled "An Act to regulate the Expenditure of County Rates and Funds in aid thereof," [13th August, 1834,] reciting, "Whereas by divers statutes now in force the justices of the peace in that part of Great Britain called England, within the respective limits of their commissions assembled at their general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment or adjournments thereof, are authorized and empowered to make and assess the county rate, and also to make orders for the application or management of the county stock or rate, and of any fund or funds used or applied in aid thereof: and whereas doubts have arisen whether, under the powers and directions of the said statutes, it is requisite that the business relating to the assessment, application, or management of the said county stock or rate, and of the funds in aid thereof, should be carried on and transacted by the said justices so assembled as aforesaid publicly and in open court at such general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof; and a practice hath in some counties prevailed of transacting such business in private, which hath been found inexpedient: and for the removal of such doubts, preventing of such practice for the future," it is declared and enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act all business appertaining to the assessment, application, or management of the county stock or rate, or of any fund or funds used or applied in aid thereof or contributory thereto, or to any matter or things whereby or in respect whereof the said county stock or rate is or may be chargeable by law, which by any statute or statutes now in force the justices of the peace for that part of Great Britain called England are authorized and directed to do and transact at the general or quarter sessions, or at any adjournment thereof, shall be done and transacted publicly and in open court at such general or quarter sessions, or adjournment thereof, and not otherwise; and that no order of such justices relating to the matters aforesaid shall be binding or effectual unless the said order shall have been made and the business relating thereto shall have been done and transacted publicly and in open court as aforesaid."

4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 49.

All business relating to the assessment and application of county rate shall be transacted in open court.

2. "Public notice shall be given, in two newspapers generally circulating in the county, of the time of holding the general or quarter sessions, or any adjournment thereof, at least two weeks before the time of holding the same, and also of the day and hour at which the business relating to the assessment, application, or management of the county stock or rate will commence at such sessions."

Notice thereof to be given.

3. "This act shall extend and apply only to justices of the peace of the several counties at large in England and Wales, and of the several counties of cities and counties of towns within the same."

Act to extend to counties in England and Wales only.

This act merely changes the place where the business of allowing the accounts was to be transacted before the act, but takes no power relating to them from the justices; and no rate-payer or other person, other than a member of the court, is entitled in any way to interfere with the jurisdiction of the justices, or to take any part in the proceedings. County Treasurer.

[11 Geo. II. c. 20; 12 Geo. II. c. 29; 55 Geo. III. c. 51.]

Treasurer how chosen.

To give a bond.

By the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 6, the treasurers of counties shall be persons resident in the county or division, and shall be appointed by the justices at their general or quarter sessions; first giving sufficient security to be accountable for the money which shall be paid to them in pursuance of this act, (for levying of county rates), and to pay such sums as shall be ordered by the justices in sessions, and for the due and faithful execution of the trust reposed in them.

Appointment complete without bond.

This provision does not make the giving of the security a condition precedent to a person's becoming treasurer, or being responsible or accountable to the justices, but the appointment is complete without such security being given. (R. v. Patteson, 4 B. & Adol. 9; 1 Nev. & M. 612, S. C.)

What a breach of bond.

The condition of a bond, after reciting that the obligor had been nominated treasurer and receiver of the rates and assessments made for the county, upon his giving security to the clerk of the peace for the due and faithful execution of the trusts reposed in him according to the statute, was, that the obligor should, when he was thereto required by the justices of the peace assembled at quarter sessions, or the major part of them, or by any committee of the said magistrates duly appointed for that purpose by any order of the said court of quarter sessions now made or hereafter to be made, well and truly account for all sums of money received by him by reason or on account of his office, and also should faithfully perform all the trusts reposed in him by virtue of his said appointment; it was held, that by the condition of this bond the county treasurer was bound to account for monies received by him in discharge of duties imposed on him by acts of Parliament passed either prior or subsequently to the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, which required that the county treasurer should give sufficient security to be accountable for the money paid to him in pursuance of that act, and for the due and faithful execution of the trusts reposed in him, and that a breach of the condition was sufficiently assigned, which stated that the defendant while he was treasurer received divers sums of money, and that he was required by the justices at sessions to account, but did not do so, it being unnecessary to allege that he had been required by an order of the court of quarter sessions, the words in the condition of the bond, "by any order of the said court of quarter sessions now made or hereafter to be made," applying only to the appointment of a committee, and not to the requisition by the justices to account. (Farr v. Hollis, 9 B. & Cres. 315; 4 M. & Ry. 502, S. C.; and see the other points decided in this case, tit. "Military Law," Militia, Vol. V.)

The above case of R. v. Patteson also decided that the defendant, as long as he was an alderman and justice of the peace of the city of N., was not a person capable of being appointed county treasurer.

Cannot be a justice.

A quo warranto will not lie against a county treasurer to shew by what authority he holds the office, if he has been de facto elected by the justices in quarter sessions; nor will mandamus lie to the justices in sessions to make a new election of a county treasurer, on the ground that one of the justices who had voted at the election had not taken the qualification oath prescribed by stat. 18 Geo. II. c. 20, prior thereto, for the acts of the justice are not void, although he may be liable to penalties. (R. v. Justices of Herefordshire, 1 Chitt. Rep. 709; and see Margate Pier Co. v. Hannam, 3 B. & Ald. 266).

Quo warranto

Acts of, not void, though not duly qualified.

The 11 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 3, which requires his election to be certified into the Court of Queen's Bench, is repealed by the 53 Geo. III. c. 113, s. 1.

Election need not be certified.

By the 12 Geo. II. c. 29, s. 12, the justices at general or quarter sessions may continue the treasurer from time to time in his office, and remove him at their pleasure, and appoint another in his place; and may allow him a salary not exceeding 20*l.* a-year, to be paid out of the county rates. (See the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 17, infra, as to his salary).

Continuance in his office and salary.

By sect. 7 & 8. And the treasurer shall keep books of entries of the several sums by him received and paid; and shall deliver in a true and exact account upon oath, if required, of his receipts and disbursements, distinguishing the particular uses to which the several sums have been applied, to the justices at every general or quarter sessions, and shall lay before them the proper vouchers for the same; which accounts and vouchers, after having been passed by the said justices, shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace, to be kept amongst the records, to be inspected by any of the justices without fee.

9. "And the discharge of the justices, by their order at their general or quarter sessions, shall be a sufficient release and discharge to such treasurer."

His discharge.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 51, s. 17. "And whereas the allowance which the justices of the peace are authorized to make to the treasurer or treasurers for his or their care and pains in the execution of his or their office, stands limited by the before recited act made in the twelfth year of the reign of his Majesty King George the Second, to a sum not exceeding twenty pounds a year; and whereas such sum has been in some, and may be found in many cases inadequate to remunerate him or them for such care and pains; be it hereby further enacted, that so much of the said act as limits the said allowance to twenty pounds a year is hereby repealed; and that it shall and may be lawful for the said justices of the peace, at their respective general or quarter sessions, or the greater part of them then and there assembled, to allow to the treasurer or treasurers of their counties, and to every of them insisting on the same, such reasonable sum or sums of money for such purpose as aforesaid, as they in their discretion shall think fit, of which they are hereby empowered to direct the payment out of the monies arising by the rates of their respective counties: provided always, that no such augmentation of allowance shall be made at any such general or quarter sessions, unless application for such augmentation shall have been made by the said treasurer or treasurers, or the justices of the peace, at some previous general or quarter sessions assembled, and unless notice of the intention of taking the said augmentation into consideration shall have been advertised for three successive weeks in some newspaper usually circulating

Custos Rotulorum.

[37 Hen. VIII. c. 1; 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 1; 1 Will. III. c. 21.]

Who is, and his office.

THE custos rotulorum is he that hath the keeping of the rolls or records of the sessions (a). He is always a justice of the peace and quorum in the county where he hath his office. He is a man, for the most part, especially picked out, either for wisdom, countenance, or credit. He is the principal civil officer in the county, as the lord lieutenant is the chief in military command. (4 Bla. Com. 272). His office is quite distinct from that of the lord lieutenant. He is considered rather in the character of a minister than a judge. (Dick. Sess. 31).

How appointed.

By stat. 37 Hen. VIII. c. 1, (which was altered by stat. 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 1, but restored by stat. 1 Will. III. c. 21), no person shall be appointed to the office of custos rotulorum but such as shall have a bill signed with the King's hand for the same; which bill signed shall be a sufficient warrant to the lord chancellor to make a commission, assigning and authorizing thereby the same person to be custos rotulorum, until the King hath by another bill with his own hand appointed one other person to have the same office by himself or his sufficient deputy, learned in the laws, and meet and able to supply the said office.

Removable at pleasure.

In pursuance whereof, the last clause in the commission of the peace is generally to this effect: "Lastly, we have assigned you the aforesaid keeper of the rolls of our peace in our said county, and therefore you shall cause to be brought before you and your said fellows, at the days and places aforesaid, the writs, precepts, processes, and indictments aforesaid, that they may be inspected, and by a due course determined, as is aforesaid." (See further the late case of Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25).

Convening session.

Where the manner of holding a special session is prescribed by the statute which directs it to be holden, the precise requisitions of the statute must of course be obeyed. Where no such direction is to be found, as in the great majority of instances, the special session may be convened at the instance of the custos rotulorum of the county, of the clerk of the peace or his deputy, or of two justices. (Dick. Sess. 7; "Sessions, Special and Petty," Vol. V.)

A general session may be convened by any two justices within the jurisdiction, one being of the quorum, or by the custos rotulorum and any one justice, but not by the custos rotulorum alone. (Lamb. 375; "Sessions," Vol. V.)

Ought to attend the sessions.

The custos rotulorum, by virtue of his office, having the custody of the rolls of session, ought to attend there by himself or his deputy, who is the clerk of the peace. (Crown Circuit Comp. 34).

Appointment of clerk of peace.

He is directed by statute to appoint a sufficient person residing within the county, to execute the office of clerk of the peace by himself or sufficient deputy, such deputy being admitted by the custos rotulorum so often as the office of clerk of the peace shall be vacant. (37 Hen. VIII. c. 1, s. 3; and see the case of Harding v. Pollock, 6 Bing. 25, fully confirming the right of the custos rotulorum to appoint the clerk of the peace).

Sale of office of clerk of peace.

But he may not sell the said place directly or indirectly, under the penalty of losing his own office of custos rotulorum, and forfeiting double the value of what he shall have received, to be recovered by any common informer in the superior courts. (1 W. & M. st. 1, c. 21, s. 8.)

(a) Yet so far they remain by reputation of law in custody of all the justices, that a certiorari to remove proceedings is directed to all. (Com. Dig. Justices (D. 4).)

Cutlers.

[59 Geo. III. c. 7.]

59 Geo. 3, c. 7.

THE stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 7, after reciting that "whereas knives, forks, razors, scissors, shears, and other cutlery wares, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, forged and formed of wrought steel, and iron and steel, have for many years been a great branch of trade in England; and such articles being esteemed in foreign countries for their superior quality, great quantities thereof have been sent to foreign markets: and whereas a practice prevails of casting or forming in a mould from cast iron, knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, and some of such articles are, by a chemical process, previous to the finishing and polishing thereof, made to resemble so nearly the like sort of articles wrought of steel, and iron and steel, as scarcely to be distinguishable from wrought steel, and iron and steel, even by persons skilled in the manufactory of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware;" enacts, sect. 1, "that from and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for all and every person and persons who shall make, forge, form, or manufacture, or cause, direct, or procure to be made, forged, formed, or manufactured, by means of the hammer, any knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, of wrought steel, or of iron and steel, to mark, strike, stamp, grave, or impress, or cause, direct, or procure to be marked, struck, stamped, graved, or impressed, in or upon any part of every such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, so forged and formed by means of the hammer, of wrought steel, and of iron and steel, the figure or form of a hammer, at any time, and not at any other time except as hereinafter provided, after the forging, and previous to the same respectively being ground or polished, so as to denote that such knives, knife blades, forks, razors, razor blades, scissors, shears, and other articles of cutlery, edge tools, and hardware requiring a cutting edge, are so formed by means of the hammer, of wrought steel, and iron and steel, and so as to distinguish the same articles from such articles cast or formed in a mould, or otherwise than by means of the hammer."

Where articles are formed by the hammer, manufacturers to have the privilege of marking them with the figure of a hammer.

Demurrer.

A DEMURRER (from demorari) signifies an abiding in point of law, upon which the defendant joins issue, allowing the facts to be true as laid in the indictment. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 5).

In criminal cases, not capital, if the defendant demur to an indictment, &c., whether in abatement or otherwise, the court will not give judgment against him to answer over, but final judgment; (2 Hawk. c. 31, s. 7; R. v. Gibson, 8 East, 112); but in capital cases this seems otherwise. (See 2 Hawk. by Curwood, c. 31, s. 5).

Demurrers, however, to indictments are seldom used; since the same advantages may be taken from a plea of not guilty; or oftentimes afterwards in arrest of judgment, when the verdict has established the fact. (4 Bla. Com. 334). See the stat. of 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 20, as to what defects are cured after verdict, and must be demurred to, if defendant intends taking advantage of them, "Indictment," Vol. III.

As to amendments, see "Amendment," Vol. I.

As to demurrers to evidence, post, "Evidence."

(1). Demurrer to an indictment or information.

And the said C. D., in his own proper person, cometh into court here, and having heard the said indictment [or "information"] read, saith that the said indictment [or "information"] and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are not sufficient in law, and that he the said C. D. is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same: and this he is ready to verify. Wherefore, for want of a sufficient indictment [or "information"] in this behalf, the said C. D. prays judgment and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment [or "information"] specified.

(2). Joinder.

AND A. B., who prosecutes for our said Lady the Queen in this behalf, saith, that the said indictment, and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above stated and set forth, are sufficient in law to compel the said C. D. to answer the same; and the said A. B., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify and prove the same, as the court here shall direct and award. Wherefore, inasmuch as the said C. D. hath not answered to the said indictment, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said A. B., for our said Lady the Queen, prays judgment, and that the said C. D. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified.

The like form, mutatis mutandis, may be adopted in the case of informations, and of indictments in the Court of Queen's Bench.

(3). Demurrer to a plea in bar.

AND A. B., who prosecutes for our said Lady the Queen in this behalf, as to the said plea of the said C. D. by him above pleaded, saith, that the same and the matters therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are not sufficient in law to bar or preclude our said Lady the Queen from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said C. D.; and that our said Lady the Queen is not bound by the law of the land to answer the same: and this he the said A. B., who prosecutes as aforesaid, is ready to verify. Wherefore, for want of a sufficient plea in this behalf, the said A. B., for our said Lady the Queen, prays judgment, and that the said C. D. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment specified.

The like forms, mutatis mutandis, may be adopted in the case of informations and of indictments in the Court of Queen's Bench. A demurrer to a plea in abatement is in the same form, except that it concludes with praying judgment, and that the said indictment may be adjudged good, and that the said C. D. may further answer thereto, &c.

(4). Joinder.

AND the said C. D. saith, that his said plea by him above pleaded, and the matter therein contained, in manner and form as the same are above pleaded and set forth, are sufficient in law to bar and preclude our said Lady the Queen from prosecuting the said indictment against him the said C. D.; and the said C. D. is ready to verify and prove the same, as the said court here shall direct and award. Wherefore, inasmuch as the said A. B. for our said Lady the Queen hath not answered the said plea, nor hitherto in any manner denied the same, the said C. D. prays judgment, and that by the court here he may be dismissed and discharged from the said premises in the said indictment specified.

The joinder is the same, if the demurrer be to a plea in abatement, except that it concludes with praying judgment, and that the said indictment may be quashed, &c.

Deodand.

What it is.

DEODAND is, when any moveable thing inanimate, or beast animate, doth move to or cause the untimely death of any reasonable creature, by mischance, without the will or fault of himself, or any person. (3 Inst. 57). Therefore, a finding of a deodand in an inquisition for manslaughter is bad. (Reg. v. Polward, 1 G. & D. 211).

By deodand is meant whatever personal chattel is the immediate occasion of the death of any reasonable creature, which is forfeited to the King, to be applied to pious uses, and distributed in alms by his high almoner, though formerly destined to a more superstitious purpose. It seems to have been originally designed, in the blind days of popery, as an expiation for the souls of such as were snatched away by sudden death, and for that purpose ought properly to have been given to Holy Church, in the same manner as the apparel of a stranger, who was found dead, was applied to purchase masses for the good of his soul. And this may account for that rule of law, that no deodand is due, where an infant under the age of discretion is killed by a fall from a cart, or horse, or the like, not being in motion; whereas if an adult person falls from thence and is killed, the thing is certainly forfeited. (1 Bla. Com. 300).

This forfeiture is still part of the casual revenue of the crown, unless where lords of franchises are entitled to it by grant; for no man can prescribe to it, or to the goods of self-murderers or other felons, or of outlaws, happening within his royalty. (Fost. 265).

Infant killed.

It seems clearly settled, contrary to the former opinions, that a horse, or the like, killing an infant within the age of discretion, is as much forfeited as if he were of age. (1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 4).

Things fixed to the freehold.

Also it was anciently holden, that things fixed to a freehold, as the wheel of a mill, or a bell hanging in the steeple, may be deodands; but by the later resolutions they cannot, unless they were severed before the accident happened. (1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 5).

Deodand.

Falling from the shafts of a waggon.

If a man riding on the shafts of a waggon fall to the ground and break his neck, the horses and waggon only are forfeited, and not the loading, because it no way contributed to his death; for which reason, where a thing not in motion causes a man's death, that part thereof only which is the immediate cause is forfeited. As where one climbing upon the wheel of a cart while it stands still, falls from it, and dies of the fall, the wheel only is forfeited. But if he had been killed by a bruise from one of the wheels being in motion, the loading also would have been forfeited, because the weight thereof made the hurt thereof the greater. And it is a general rule, that wherever the thing which is the occasion of a man's death is in motion at the time, not only that part thereof which immediately wounds him, but all things which move together with it, and help to make the wound more dangerous, are forfeited also. (Id. s. 6). Thus, a cart met a loaded waggon upon the road, and the cart endeavouring to pass by the waggon was driven up a high bank and overturned, and threw a person that was in the cart just before the wheels of the waggon, and the waggon ran over him and killed him; it was resolved in this case that the cart, waggon, loading, and all the horses were deodands, because they all moved to the death. (Lord of the Manor of Hampstead's case, 1 Salk. 220). And see Reg. v. Brownlow, 11 Ad. & Ell. 119, and the cases there cited).

Accidents out of common law jurisdiction

No deodands are due for accidents which happen out of the jurisdiction of the common law, as where a man falls from a ship in salt water and is drowned; (1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 6); but if a man fall from a ship or boat in fresh water and be drowned, the vessel is forfeited. (Id.; 1 Com. 302).

Year and day.

If the party wounded die not of his wound within a year and day after he received it, there shall be nothing forfeited; for the law doth not look on such a wound as the cause of a man's death, after which he lives so long. But if the party die within that time, the forfeiture shall have relation to the wound given, and cannot be saved by any alienation or other act whatsoever in the mean time. (1 Hawk. c. 26, s. 7).

Must be first found by the coroner's inquest.

However, nothing can be forfeited as a deodand, nor seized as such, till it be found by the coroner's inquest to have caused a man's death. But after such inquisition, the sheriff is answerable for the value of it, and may levy the same on the town where it fell, and therefore the inquest ought to find the value of it. (Id. s. 8).

And if the coroner omits his duty in this case, the inquisition may be made by the commissioners of the gaol delivery, over and terminer, or of the peace. (1 Hale, 419).

Mitigation of forfeitures.

After all, as this forfeiture seemeth to have been originally founded rather in the superstition of an age of ignorance than in the principles of sound reason and policy, it has not of late years met with great countenance in Westminster-hall; and when juries have taken upon them to use a judgment of discretion, not strictly within their province, for reducing the quantum of the forfeiture, the Court of King's Bench have refused to interpose in favour of the crown or lord of the franchise. In the case of R. v. Rolfe, coroner of Kent, H. 5 Geo. II., the coroner's inquest found that a man sitting on his waggon accidentally fell to the ground, and that the horses drawing the waggon forward one of the fore-wheels crushed his head, of which he instantly died, and then concluded that only the wheel, on which they set a small value, moved to his death. A motion was made, in behalf of Mr. Monpesson, lord of the franchise, for quashing this inquisition, upon affidavits tending to shew that the cart and horses were equally instrumental, which indeed the finding of the jury did sufficiently imply. But the court was very clear that neither this court nor the coroner can oblige the jury to conclude otherwise than they have done, and would not suffer the affidavits for quashing the inquisition to be read. A like cause came on, M. 29 Geo. II., R. v. Drew, coroner of Middlesex. The coroner's jury, upon view of the body of a person killed by the like accident, found that only one wheel of the waggon moved to the death. The court, on motion, in behalf of the lord of the franchise, granted a rule for shewing cause why the inquisition should not be quashed for this misbehaviour of the jury. On the day for shewing cause, the counsel for the lord of the franchise informed the court that upon looking into precedents he was satisfied he could not support the rule; and thereupon it was discharged. The case of R. v. Rolfe was mentioned on this occasion, and greatly relied on. (2 Bac. Abr. 294; Fost. 266).

These forfeitures are now generally mitigated to something very trifling.

By the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 99, s. 29 (ante, 41), coroners are to make out an account of deodands and transmit the same to the treasury and to the commissioners of audit, and the same are to be certified and estreated into the exchequer.

In London and Westminster or within twenty miles thereof

Sect. 2, reciting, "the multitude of places of entertainment for the lower sort of people is another great cause of thefts and robberies, as they are thereby tempted to spend their small substance in riotous pleasures, and in consequence are put on unlawful methods of supplying their wants, and renewing their pleasures: in order therefore to prevent the said temptation to thefts and robberies, and to correct as far as may be the habit of idleness, which is become too general over the whole kingdom, and is productive of much mischief and inconvenience;" it is enacted, "that from and after the 1st day of December, 1752, any house, room, garden or other place kept for public dancing, music or other public entertainment of the like kind, in the cities of London and Westminster, or within twenty miles thereof, without a license had for that purpose from the last preceding Michaelmas quarter sessions of the peace, to be holden for the county, city, riding, liberty, or division in which such house, room, garden or other place is situate, (who are hereby authorized and empowered to grant such licenses as they in their discretion shall think proper), signified under the hands and seals of four or more of the justices there assembled, shall be deemed a disorderly house or place: and every such license shall be signed and sealed by the said justices in open court, and afterwards be publicly read by the clerk of the peace, together with the names of the justices subscribing the same; and no such license shall be granted at any adjourned sessions; nor shall any fee or reward be taken for any such license: and it shall and may be lawful to and for any constable, or other person, being thereunto authorized, by warrant under the hand and seal of one or more of his Majesty's justices of the peace of the county, city, riding, division or liberty where such house or place shall be situate, to enter such house or place, and to seize every person who shall be found therein, in order that they may be dealt with according to law; and every person keeping such house, room, garden or other place, without such license as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* to such person as will sue for the same; and be otherwise punishable as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses." Who deemed keeper of bawdy-house, &c.

Sect. 8, reciting, that "by reason of the many subtle and crafty contrivances of persons keeping bawdy-houses, gaming-houses or other disorderly houses, it is difficult to prove who is the real owner or keeper thereof, by which means many notorious offenders have escaped punishment," enacts, "that any person who shall at any time hereafter appear, act, or behave him or herself as master or mistress, or as the person having the care, government or management of any bawdy-house, gaming-house or other disorderly house, shall be deemed and taken to be the keeper thereof, and shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished as such, notwithstanding he or she shall not in fact be the real owner or keeper thereof."

Sect. 11 relates to the costs of prosecuting for felony, but is repealed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ante, 172.

Continuance of act

By stat. 21 Geo. III. c. 49, intituled "An Act for preventing certain Abuses and Profanations on the Lord's Day (a) called Sunday," reciting, "Whereas certain houses, rooms, or places, within the cities of London or Westminster, or in the neighbourhood thereof, have of late frequently been opened for public entertainment or amusement upon the evening of the Lord's day, commonly called Sunday; and at other houses, rooms, or places, within the said cities, or in the neighbourhood thereof, under pretence of inquiring into religious doctrines, and explaining texts of Holy Scripture, debates have frequently been held on the evening of the Lord's day concerning divers texts of Holy Scripture, by persons unlearned and incompetent to explain the same, to the corruption of good morals, and to the great encouragement of irreligion and profaneness;" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this present act, any house, room, or other place, which shall be opened or used for public entertainment or amusement, or for publicly debating on any subject whatsoever, upon any part of the Lord's day called Sunday, and to which persons shall be admitted by the payment of money, or by tickets sold for money, shall be deemed a disorderly house or place: and the keeper of such house, room, or place, shall forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds for every day that such house, room, or place, shall be opened or used as aforesaid on the Lord's day, to such person as will sue for the same, and be otherwise punishable as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses; and the person managing or conducting such entertainment or amusement on the Lord's day, or acting as master of the ceremonies there, or as moderator, president, or chairman of any such meeting for public debate on the Lord's day, shall likewise, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds to such person as will sue for the same; and every door-keeper, servant, or other person, who shall collect or receive money or tickets from persons assembling at such house, room, or place, on the Lord's day, or who shall deliver out tickets for admitting persons to such house, room, or place, on the Lord's day, shall also forfeit the sum of fifty pounds to such person as will sue for the same."

21 Geo. 3, c. 49.

From the passing of this act, any house &c. opened for public amusement or debate on a Sunday, to which persons shall be admitted by payment of money, &c. shall be deemed a disorderly house; and the keeper thereof shall forfeit 200*l.* for every Sunday the same shall be used as aforesaid.

Penalty on the president, &c.

Penalty on advertising any such public amusement for Sunday, and on printing such advertisement.

3. "And for the better preventing persons assembling on the Lord's day for such irreligious purposes as aforesaid, be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that any person advertising, or causing to be advertised, any public entertainment or amusement, or any public meeting for debating on any subject whatsoever, on the Lord's day, to which persons are to be admitted by the payment of money, or by tickets sold for money, and any person printing or publishing any such advertisement shall respectively forfeit the sum of fifty pounds for every such offence, to any person who will sue for the same."

nor the Toleration Act of 1 W & M.

8. "Provided also, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to take away, alter, or abridge, any of the liberties or immunities to which the Protestant subjects of this kingdom are entitled, by an act made in the first year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intituled, 'An Act for exempting their Majesties' Protestant Subjects, dissenting from the Church of England, from the penalties of certain Laws.'"

What an offence within 25 Geo II. c. 36.

To constitute an offence within sect. 2 of 25 Geo. II. c. 36, in the first place, the house or room must be kept with the defendant's knowledge; secondly, it must be kept for the purpose prohibited by the statute,—there must be something like an habitual keeping of it, which, however, need not be at stated intervals; thirdly, it must be public, to which all persons have a right to go, whether gratuitously or on payment of money,—no matter whether paid to the defendant or not, if he knows of the payment. All these are questions to be left to the jury. There would be a difficulty in making the owner of a private house liable, because that is kept for the purpose of occupation, whereas a public-house is kept for entertainment; and a much less number of instances may be sufficient to render the owner liable for keeping it for the purposes mentioned in the statute. (Per Parke, B., in Marks v. Benjamin, 5 M. & W. 565): and, therefore, in an action of debt, to recover the penalty of 100*l.*, given by the act, it appeared that music, dancing, &c., had occasionally taken place at the defendant's house, (a public-house), that no money was taken by him for admission, but the rooms were let to persons who sold tickets and received money for admission at the door; but there was no direct evidence that the defendant knew of this practice:—Held, that, upon these facts, there was evidence to go to the jury of a keeping of the house by the defendant for the purposes mentioned in the statute, and that the judge was wrong in directing a nonsuit. (Marks v. Benjamin, 5 M. & W. 565). 21 Geo. 3, c. 49.

A room kept by a dancing-master, where persons met for the purpose of dancing, but to which no persons were admitted but subscribers or persons introduced by them, or by the defendant as their and his friends, and to which persons were not indiscriminately admitted, was held not within the act. (Bellis v. Burghall, 2 Esp. 722).

Nor will the mere temporary use of a room in a public-house or other house for the purpose of dancing or music, on a particular festival or occasion, be within the act. (Shutt v. Lewis, 5 Esp. 128; Gregory v. Tuffs, 6 C. & P. 271).

But a room in which musical performances are regularly exhibited, though not kept or used solely for that purpose, is within it. (Bellis v. Beal, 2 Esp. 592).

So, if a room be continually used for the purpose of music and dancing, it will be for the jury to say whether it is not kept for those purposes; and a room kept for drinking, music, and dancing, is within the act. (Gregory v. Tavernor, 6 Car. & P. 280).

So is a room within the act, though it is not exclusively used for dancing or music. (Gregory v. Tuffs, 6 C. & P. 271).

The act extends to licensed taverns and hotels, and it was no defence that the company frequenting the performances were respectable, or that the admission was not received for the immediate benefit of the house. (Green v. Botheroyd, 3 Car. & P. 471).

So, to make a party liable to a penalty under the act, it is not essential that he should take money for admission; and it is sufficient to shew that dancing was publicly carried on in a house belonging to defendant, without its being duly licensed; and Lord Ellenborough said, "that the taking of money for admission would be evidence of ownership." (Archer v. Wellengrice, 4 Esp. Rep. 186; Gregory v. Tuffs, 6 C. & P. 271).

A house kept for the purpose of private dancing may be within the act. (Clarke v. Searle, 1 Esp. Rep. 25).

Proof that there is nothing painted on the house denoting that it is licensed under the statute 25 Geo. II. c. 36, is sufficient primâ facie evidence in an action for penalties that it is unlicensed. (Gregory v. Tuffs, 6 Car. & P. 271).

Common gaming-house

Common gaming-houses are in general deemed nuisances. In an indictment for keeping one it seems to be sufficient to allege that the defendant kept a common gaming-house. (R. v. Rogier, 1 B. & C. 275; 2 D. & R. 431, S. C.) In that case it was held, that the keeping a common gaming-house, and for lucre and gain unlawfully causing and procuring divers idle and evil-disposed persons to frequent and come to play together, at a game called rouge et noir, and permitting the said idle and evil-disposed persons to remain playing at the same game for divers large and excessive sums of money, is an indictable offence at common law. (See further, "Gaming," Vol. III.)

Keeping disorderly houses are nuisances at common law.

The keeping of any disorderly house and place of resort of an improper kind, is a nuisance at common law. (R. v. Higginson, 2 Burr. 1232).

Indictment for.

And all disorderly inns or ale-houses, bawdy-houses, play-houses unlicensed or improperly conducted, booths and stages for rope-dancers, mountebanks, and the like, are public nuisances, and may therefore be indicted, not only because they are great temptations to idleness, but also because they are apt to draw together great numbers of disorderly persons, which cannot but be very inconvenient to the neighbourhood. (1 Hawk. c. 75, s. 6, 7*th ed.*; 4 Bla. Com. 167; 1 Russ. 298).

Wife liable.

It seems that the offence of keeping a disorderly house is one for which a feme covert may be indicted. (1 Russ. 299; R. v. Williams, Salk. 384).

Several offenders.

Any number of persons may it seems be included in the same indictment, for keeping different disorderly houses, stating that they "severally" kept, &c. such houses (2 Hale, 173); but it is the practice to indict the offenders severally, and that is the best course.

Statement in indictment of situation of house, &c.

It seems that it is necessary to state where the house is situate, and the time, so as to make a particular statement of the offence, which is the keeping of the house. But particular facts need not be stated; and though the charge is thus general, yet at the trial evidence may be given of particular facts, and of the particlur time of doing them.

An indictment charged, that the defendant kept a disorderly house, and in the said house, for his own lucre, caused to be brought together divers idle, dissolute, depraved, and bad persons, to be and remain in his house, dancing, drinking, tippling, making great noises and disturbances, and behaving themselves ad commune nocumentum. Held, after verdict, to be a good indictment. (Rex v. Warwick, 6 Law Journ. Rep. (N. S.) M. C. 96).

Any one may take up the prosecution, though against prosecutor's consent.

After an indictment has been preferred by a private prosecutor, the court will allow any other person to go on with it, even against the consent of the prosecutor. (R. v. Wood, 3 B. & Adol. 657).

Evidence of persons frequenting the house.

It is not necessary to prove who frequents the house, for that may be impossible; but if any unknown persons are proved to be there, behaving disorderly, it is sufficient to support the indictment. (1 Russ. 302; and see J'Anson v. Stuart, 1 T. R. 754. See Collyer's Statutes, 416).

I. Of Protestant Dissenters in general.

By the 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 14, every person not having reasonable excuse shall resort to his parish church or chapel, or upon reasonable let thereof, to some usual place where common prayer shall be used, on every Sunday and holiday; on pain of punishment by the censures of the church, or of forfeiting for every offence 12*d*. And whether he shall abjure or not, he shall forfeit his goods, and shall forfeit his lands during life. (35 Eliz. c. 1).

35 Eliz. c. 1.

But several statutes relating to this subject were repealed at the time of the Revolution, and the 1 Will. III. c. 18, s. 1, was passed, (commonly called The Act of Toleration, declared by stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44, to be a public act), and which enacts that neither the statutes aforesaid nor any other made against papists and popish recusants, (except stat. 25 Car. II. c. 2 (b), concerning the qualifying for offices, and 32 Car. II. st. 2, c. 1, containing the declaration against popery (c)), shall extend to any person dissenting from the Church of England, who shall, at the general sessions of the peace to be held for the county or place where such person shall live, take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and make and subscribe the said declaration against popery, of which the court shall keep a register, and no officer shall take any fee above 6*d*. for registering the same, nor that more than once, and 6*d*. for a certificate thereof signed by such officer.

The stat. 52 Geo. (a) R. v. Hall, (1 T. R. 320), which was a conviction on stat. 22 Car. II. c. I, repealed by stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 1. The following is the form of such conviction:—

"Parts of Kesteven, in the county of Lincoln. } BE it remembered, that on the 2nd day of March, in the twenty-sixth year, &c. at New Sleaford, in the parts of K. aforesaid, &c., Robert Benson, Clerk, came before me Richard Brown, Esquire, one of the justices, &c., and gave me the said justice to understand and be informed that one Samuel Hall, carpenter, being the occupier of a certain dwelling-house, situate in the parish of Heckington, in the parts and county aforesaid, did, on the 26th of February now last past, at the parish of Heckington aforesaid, wittingly and willingly suffer a meeting and unlawful assembly of divers persons to be held in his said dwelling-house, for the exercise of religious worship, in other manner than according to the liturgy and practice of the Church of England, between the hours of one and eight o'clock in the afternoon of the same day; at which meeting and unlawful assembly, five persons and more were assembled together over and above those of the said S. Hall before me the said justice, in pursuance of my summons, &c., when the said information, together

1 W. & M. c. 18. Disturbing the congregation.

By the 1 W. & M. c. 18, s. 18, any person who shall willingly, and of purpose maliciously or contemptuously, come into any cathedral, or parish church, chapel, or other congregation permitted by this act, and disquiet or disturb the same, or misuse any preacher or teacher, shall, on proof thereof before any justice by two witnesses, find two sureties in 50*l.*; and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison till the next sessions; and upon conviction at such sessions shall forfeit 20*l.* to the King.

On an indictment on this act, it is no defence that the violence was with the examinations in writing of Joseph Wilkinson and Joseph Chamberlain, both of H. aforesaid, two credible witnesses, taken upon their respective corporal oaths before me the said justice, being openly read, which said examination set forth, that, on the said 26th day of February, the said J. Wilkinson and J. Chamberlain went to the dwelling-house of the said S. Hall, at H. aforesaid, and found a great number of people assembled at the dwelling-house of the said S. Hall, and that one Joseph Meryweathers was preaching to the said assembly, that the said dwelling-house at which the said meeting and assembly was holden, was not certified or registered as by law required, and that they also saw there Peter Jarvis, John Taylor, William Taylor, and Robert Bowles, all of the said parish of H., attending the said meeting. And the said S. Hall being now here required by me to answer the premises, he the said S. Hall pleadeth and confesseth the offence charged upon him in and by the said information. Wherefore, &c., he hath forfeited 20l."

Several objections were taken to this conviction: 1st, The information is not in the present tense. It is stated that the informer came before the justice and gave him to understand, &c. 2ndly, That the evidence was not given in the presence of the defendant, which it ought to have been; the defendant should have been called on to plead before the evidence was received; but the justice read over improper evidence, which should not have been given, and then called on the defendant to answer the premises, by which means he was confounded and induced to plead guilty. 3rdly, Though this is charged as an offence against stat. 22 Car. II. only, yet it concludes contrary to the statutes, which is fatal. 4thly, The information does not contain a charge within the stat. 22 Car. II. c. 1, upon which the justice professes to convict; and though it profess to set out an offence against that statute, yet it is not confined to that statute only, but negatives several exceptions in 1 Will. & M. c. 18. Therefore, though it was not necessary to negative any of the exceptions under the latter act, yet having undertaken so to do, the omission of any one is fatal, and it is not stated that he did not take the oaths, &c., which is required by the third section of that statute. The court said, that however inclined they were to listen to trivial objections to such prosecutions, yet none of the present were sufficient in point of law. As to the first, the words objected to were better in the past than present tense, because they referred to a time past, (viz.) the time of making the information. The second is cured by the defendant pleading guilty. As to the third and fourth, this is a conviction on 22 Car. II.; therefore the exceptions in 1 Will. & M. c. 18, need not have been negatived, and may be rejected as surplusage; for if a subsequent statute make any exception to a former one, it is incumbent on the defendant to shew by way of defence that he comes within such exception. And, besides, the 13th section of 22 Car. II. directs that that act shall be construed most largely and beneficially for the suppressing of conventicles, &c., and that no proceedings thereupon shall be impeached for want of form. Conviction affirmed.

committed in the defendant's asserting his right to the clerk's reading-desk. (R. v. Hube, Peake, 132; 5 T. R. 542).

It need not be proved that the minister has taken the toleration oaths. (Ib.)

R. v. Hube and others (5 T. R. 542), the defendants were indicted on stat. 1 W. & M. c. 18, and the indictment was by certiorari removed by the prosecutor into the King' Bench before verdict. And it was moved, that as the penalty of 20*l.* was to be paid upon conviction of the said offence at the said general or quarter sessions, the statute intended to confine the cognizance of the offence to the sessions, and that the power to remove by certiorari was therefore taken away by necessary implication. But the court held that the certiorari was not taken away by this statute, and that the indictment was therefore well removed.

52 Geo. 3, c. 155. Penalty on disturbing religious assemblies.

By stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 12, "if any person or persons, at any time after the passing of this act, do and shall wilfully and maliciously or contemptuously disquiet or disturb any meeting, assembly, or congregation of persons assembled for religious worship, permitted or authorized by this act, or any former act or acts of Parliament, or shall in any way disturb, molest, or misuse any preacher, teacher, or person officiating at such meeting, assembly, or congregation, or any person or persons there assembled, such person or persons so offending, upon proof thereof before any justice of the peace, by two or more credible witnesses, shall find two sureties to be bound by recognizances in the penal sum of £50 to answer for such offence, and in default of such sureties shall be committed to prison, there to remain till the next general or quarter sessions; and upon conviction of the said offence, at the said general or quarter sessions, shall suffer the pain and penalty of £40."

Certiorari.

In the case of R. v. Wadley (4 M. & Sel. 508) it was held, that an indictment upon stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 12, may be removed into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari before trial.

8 W. & M c 18. Dissenter being appointed to offices may appoint a deputy.

By stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 11, s. 7, "if any person dissenting from the Church of England as aforesaid shall be appointed to the office of high constable, petty constable, churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or any other parochial or ward office, and shall scruple to take upon him the office, in regard of the oaths or otherwise, he may execute the same by a sufficient deputy, that shall comply with the laws on this behalf: provided that the deputy be allowed and approved by such person, and in such manner as such officer should by law have been allowed and approved."

But no congregation shall be permitted by this act until the place of the meeting shall be certified to the bishop or the archdeacon, or the justices at the sessions for the place in which, &c., and registered in the bishop's or archdeacon's court, or recorded at the sessions. (Sect 19).

53 Geo. 3, c. 160.

The provisions contained in the act of Will. & Mary, and in the 9 & 10 Will. III., respecting the denial of the Trinity, are repealed by the stat. 53 Geo. III. c. 160.

Common law not altered.

It seems that the 53 Geo. III. does not alter the common law with respect to impugning the doctrine of the Trinity, but only removes the penalties imposed on persons denying such doctrines by 9 & 10 Will. III. c. 32, and extends to such persons the benefits conferred on all other Protestant dissenters by 1 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 18. (R. v. Waddington, 1 B. & Cres. 26).

Exemptions from tolls.

In the case of Lewis v. Hammond (2 B. & Ald. 206), where a turnpike act exempted persons from toll "in going to and returning from their proper parochial church, chapel, or other place of religious worship on Sundays," it was held that the word "parochial" extended over the whole clause; and therefore that a dissenter was not within the exemption in going to and returning from his proper place of religious worship, situate out of the parish in which he resided. (And see "Highways, Turnpike," Vol. III.)

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 17, repeals in part the Test and Corporation Acts, and substitutes a declaration in lieu of the sacramental test. (See "Office," Vol. III.)

2. Dissenting Ministers.

Repeal of Test and Corporation Acts.

II. Dissenting Ministers.

The three statutes, viz. 17 Car. II. c. 2, 22 Car. II. c. 1, and 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 1, relating to the disabilities of dissenting ministers before the Revolution, are repealed by stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 155, s. 1.

Repeal of acts.

By stat. 19 Geo. III. c. 44, s. 1, every person dissenting from the Church of England, in holy orders, or pretended holy orders, or pretending to holy orders, being a preacher or teacher of any congregation of dissenting Protestants, who shall take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration against popery required by the 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, to be taken, made, and subscribed by Protestant dissenting ministers, and shall also make and subscribe the declaration in the words following, viz. I, A. B., do solemnly declare, in the presence of Almighty God, that I am a Christian and a Protestant, and as such that I believe that the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament, as commonly received among Protestant Churches, do contain the revealed will of God; and that I do receive the same as the rule of my doctrine and practice; shall be entitled to all the benefits of the said act of 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, and 10 Ann. c. 2. And the justices at the sessions where any Protestant dissenting minister shall live, are required to tender and administer the said last-mentioned declaration to such minister, upon his offering himself to make and subscribe the same, and thereof to keep a register; for the registering of which he shall pay 6*d.* to the officer of the court, and no more; and 6*d.* for a certificate thereof signed by such officer.

19 Geo. 3, c. 44. Protestant dissenting ministers who shall take the oaths, &c. required by the Toleration Act, &c. shall be entitled to all the benefit of that statute, and 10 Ann. c. 2.

10 Ann. c. 2. Being qualified may officiate in any county.

And every such teacher and preacher, that is a minister, preacher, or teacher of a congregation, having taken the oaths and subscribed as aforesaid, shall from thenceforth be exempted from serving on any jury, or from being chosen or appointed to bear the office of churchwarden, overseer of the poor, or any other parochial or ward office, or other offices, in any hundred of any shire, city, town, parish, division, or wapentake, by stats. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 11, and 19 Geo. R. v. Justices of Denbighshire.

R. v. The Justices of Denbighshire, (14 East, 285; and see 15 East, 576, 589). A motion was made upon stat. 1 Will. & Mary, c. 18, s. 8, (the Toleration Act), for a mandamus to the justices of Denbigh, at their next sessions, to admit David Lewis to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration required under that statute. The motion was made upon an affidavit of David Lewis, in which he described himself as "a Protestant dissenter," who "preaches to several congregations of Protestant dissenters;" stating the circumstances of his application to the justices at their last sessions, and of his tendering himself to take the oaths and make and subscribe the declaration mentioned in the statute; that the chairman of the court required of him a certificate of his having a separate congregation, and that upon his saying he had no separate congregation, the sessions refused to adminster the oath to him, &c. After the words of the Toleration Act had been stated, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., inquired whether the person applying now swore to the fact of his being the teacher or preacher of any separate congregation of Protestant dissenters? and being answered in the negative, Bayley, J., asked if he were not the teacher or preacher of any certain congregation, under what description in the 8th clause he brought himself? To which it was answered, as a teacher or preacher of several congregations of Protestant dissenters, though not attached to any particular separate congregation of his own. Lord Ellenborough, C. J.—"The chairman of the sessions might have been wrong in asking this person for a certificate of his having a separate congregation; but still, to entitle himself to succeed in his application, he ought to show himself to be the acknowledged teacher or preacher of some particular congregation, or to bring himself within some other qualifying description in the act, in order to be entitled to the exemption which he seeks." Grose, J., agreed. Le Blanc, J.—"If the party be in holy orders, or pretend to holy orders, though he have no particular congregation of his own, he would come within the 8th section; but if he applied merely as a teacher or preachor, not pretending to holy orders, he must state himself to be the teacher or preacher of some particular congregation of Protestant dissenters by whom he is recognized in that character." Bayley, J.—"This clause of the Toleration Act meant to relieve persons who had Protestant dissenting congregations severally attached to them, at the time they made the application to the sessions, from the penalties imposed by former acts, for officiating as preachers to such congregations." Rule refused.

This decision occasioned the passing of the following act.

52 Geo. 3, c 155. Penalty on persons preaching without consent of occupiers.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 155, intituled "An Act to repeal certain Acts and amend other Acts relating to Religious Worship and Assemblies, and Persons Teaching or Preaching therein," s. 3, "every person who shall teach or preach in any congregation or assembly as in this act aforesaid (ante, 258), in any place, without the consent of the occupier thereof, shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding 30*l.* nor less than 40*s.*, at the discretion of the justices who shall convict for such offence."

Exemptions in favour of preachers and persons resorting to religious assemblies duly certified, &c.

Sect. 4. "That from and after the passing of this act, every person who shall teach or preach at, or officiate in, or shall resort to any congregation or congregations, assembly or assemblies, for religious worship of Protestants, whose place of meeting shall be duly certified according to the provisions of this act, or any other act or acts of Parliament relating to the certifying and registering of places of religious worship, shall be exempt from all such pains and penalties under any act or acts of Parliament relating to religious worship, as any person who shall have taken the oaths and made the declaration prescribed by or mentioned in an act made in the first year of the reign of King William and Queen Mary, intituled 'An Act for exempting their Majesties' Protestant subjects dissenting from the Church of England, from the penalties of certain laws,' or any act amending the said act, (see tit. 'Oaths,' Vol. V.), is by law exempt, as fully and effectually as if all such pains and penalties, and the several acts enforcing the same, were recited in this act, and such exemptions as aforesaid were severally and separately enacted in relation thereto."

Treble costs (a).

(a) The 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, repeals this and similar clauses in all public acts; and enacts, that instead of such treble costs the parties "shall receive such full and reasonable indemnity as to all costs, charges, and expenses incurred in and about any action, suit, or other legal proceeding as shall be taxed by the proper officer in that behalf, subject to be reviewed in like manner and by the same authority as any other taxation of costs by such officer."

Describing property in larceny.

The goods in a dissenting chapel, vested in trustees, cannot be laid as the property of a servant who had the custody of the chapel, and of the things in it, to clean and keep in order, although he has the key of the chapel, and no one but the minister has another key. (R. v. Hutchinson, Ry. & M. C. C. R. 412).

The management of the affairs of a dissenting chapel was vested in the communicants. The congregation being dissatisfied with their minister held a meeting, at which they resolved that he should be recommended to resign. Neither the minister nor a majority of the communicants was present at the meeting, but the resolution was afterwards signed by a majority of them, and communicated to the minister :—Held, that the resolution was tantamount to a dismissal, although not come to at a meeting at which a majority of the communicants was present. By the 23 Eliz. c. 1, if any person shall keep a schoolmaster, who shall not repair to church, or be allowed by the bishop, he shall forfeit 10*l.* a month, and the schoolmaster shall be imprisoned for a year.

13 & 14 Car. 2, c. 4.

Schoolmasters to conform to the liturgy of the Church of England.

By the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 4, every schoolmaster keeping any public or private school, and every person instructing or teaching any youth in any house or private family as a tutor or schoolmaster, shall, before his admission, subscribe before the ordinary the declaration of conformity to the liturgy of the Church of England, on pain of being disabled to hold the said school, and ipso facto deprived of the same. And every such school shall be void, as if such person so failing were naturally dead. And if any schoolmaster or other person instructing or teaching youth in any private house or family as tutor or schoolmaster shall teach any youth as tutor or schoolmaster before license obtained from the bishop or ordinary of the diocese, and before such subscription as aforesaid, he shall for the first offence be imprisoned three months, and for the second and every other offence be imprisoned three months, and forfeit 5*l.* (Sects. 8, 9, 11).

Not to hold the mastership of any college or school of royal foundation.

Sect. 3. Provided, that this shall not extend to the enabling of any person dissenting from the Church of England to hold the mastership of any college or school of royal foundation, or of any other endowed college or school for the education of youth, unless the same shall have been founded since the first year of King William and Queen Mary, for the immediate use and benefit of Protestant dissenters.

Distress for Rent.

satisfaction for the wrong committed, and is of two kinds, either for cattle trespassing and doing damage (a), or for non-payment of rent or other duties.

Origin of distress for rent.

The remedy for recovering rent by way of distress seems first to have come over to us from the civil law: for anciently, in the feudal law, not paying attendance at the Lord's courts, or not doing the feudal service, was a forfeiture of the estate. But these feudal forfeitures were afterwards turned into distresses, according to the pignorary method of the civil law; that is, the land that is let out to the tenant is hypothecated, as a pledge in his hands, to answer the rent agreed to be paid to the landlord, and the whole profits arising from the land are liable to the lord's seizure for the payment and satisfaction thereof. (Gilb. 2). The distress, being a pledge, could not be sold till the 2 Will. & Mary, c. 5, post, 301.

Formerly only a pledge without power of sale.

The subject of the present title will be treated of in the following order:—

I. When in general allowed, and who may Distrain, 269.

[2 Will. sess. 1, c. 5; 4 Geo. II. c. 28; 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 23; 6 Geo. IV. c. 74; 7 Geo. IV. c. 57.]

II. What may be Distrained, 276.

[2 Will. sess. 1, c. 5; 11 Geo. II. c. 19; 56 Geo. III. c. 50.]

(a) A man may distrain beasts damage feasant, that is, doing damage or trespassing upon his land; for all chattels whatever are distrainable damage feasant, it being but natural justice that whatever doth the injury should be a pledge to make compensation for it. (Gilb. Dist. 24, 38; 3 Bla. Com. 6). If a man take cattle, and put them into the land of another man, the tenant of the land may take these cattle damage feasant, though the owner was not privy to the cattle being damage feasant, and he may keep them against the true owner, till satisfaction of the damages. (1 Roll. Abr. 655; Roll. Rep. 449). If a man come to distrain, and see the beasts in his ground, and the owner chase them out on purpose before the distress taken, yet the owner of the soil cannot distrain them. (Co. Lit. 161; 2 Bac. Abr. 354). For distress damage feasant is the strictest distress that is, and the thing distrained must be taken in the very act; for if the goods are once off, though on fresh pursuit, the owner of the ground cannot take them. (Vaspor v. Edwards, 12 Mod. 661). If ten head of cattle were doing damage, a man cannot take one of them and keep it till he be satisfied for the whole damage, but for its own damage only; but he may bring an action of trespass for the rest. (Vaspor v. Edwards, 12 Mod. 660). If a man hath common for ten cattle, and he puts in more, the surplusage above ten may be taken damage feasant. (1 Roll. Abr. 665). But this must be where the number is absolutely certain, as for ten, twenty, or thirty cattle, without any relation to the quantity of land, and not where he claims for so many cattle for such a number of acres; for in the former case the overcharge is clear and self-evident, but in the latter it depends upon the number of acres, and requires a medium to determine the number of cattle; that is, an admeasurement of the land. For where the question depends upon a collateral fact, or upon a matter of judgment, the party interested can never be a competent judge in his own cause, And the court said the right of distraining seemed to turn upon this, that wherever there is a colour of right for putting in the cattle a commoner cannot distrain, because it would be judging for himself in a question that depends upon a more competent inquiry: but where cattle are put upon the common without any colour or pretence of right, the commoner may distrain them; and therefore he may distrain the cattle of a stranger. (Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2426; 1 Blac. Rep. 673, S. C.) Where cattle have trespassed on a party's land, it is not advisable to distrain where his title to the locus in quo is doubtful; the best course is to proceed by action. (1 Saund. 346 e, n.)

I. When a Distress for Rent allowed, and who may Distrain.

Nature of Rents.

It may now be laid down as an universal principle, that a distress may be taken for any kind of rent in arrear, the detention whereof beyond the day of payment is an injury to him that is entitled to receive it. (Woodf. 356; 3 Bla. Com. 6).

4 Geo. 2, c. 28.

By the common law a distress could not lie for rent-seck. However, by stat. 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 5, the like remedy may be had by distress, impounding, and sale, in cases of rent-seck, rents of assize, and chief rents, as in case of rents reserved upon lease.

1. When allowed.

Out of personalty.

No distress can be taken for a rent reserved on a letting of mere personal property; (5 Co. 17; Bally v. Wells, 3 Wils. 27); and where land itself is not demised, but the mere use of it, a distress for rent thereon cannot be made under such a demise; (Buzzard v. Capel, 8 B. & Cres. 141; 2 M. & R. 197); for a rent cannot issue out of a privilege or easement. (Ib.) A distress may be made for rent of a ready-furnished house or lodging, because it is then considered that the rent issues out of the principal, the real property demised. (Newman v. Anderton, 2 New Rep. 224; and see Farewell v. Dickenson, 6 B. & Cres. 251; Philpott v. Dobbinson, 6 Bing. 105; 3 M. & P. 320).

Out of incorporeal hereditaments.

Rent cannot properly be reserved out of incorporeal hereditaments, as commons, tithes, or tolls. (Co. Lit. 47 a; and see Bird v. Higgenson, 2 Ad. & Ell. 696; S. C. in error, 6 Ad. & Ell. 824).

Out of lands and incorporeal hereditaments.

Where a valid demise is made of lands and incorporeal hereditaments together at an entire rent, the rent issues solely out of the land in point of remedy, but out of both in point of render. And in such a case, it would seem, a distress might be made upon the land for the entire rent. (19 Vin. Ab. 122, Reservation, (O); Doubitofte v. Curteene, Cro. Jac. 452). But where lands and tithes were demised by parol at an entire rent, it was held, that the demise being void as to the tithes, the lessor could not distrain for the whole rent, or any part of it, on the land only. (Gardiner v. Williamson, 2 B. & Ad. 336; Bird v. Higgenson, 6 Ad. & Ell. 824).

Out of land in possession and reversion.

If a lease be made of land in possession, and other land in reversion, rendering rent, the rent issues out of both; and, before the reversion falls in, a distress may be taken for the whole rent on the land in possession. (18 Vin. Ab. 480, Rent, (H 1).

Rent must be in arrear.

The distress for rent must be for rent in arrear; therefore it may not be made on the same day on which the rent becomes due; for if the rent be paid in any part of that day, whilst a man can see to count money, the payment is good. (See 1 Saund. 287, n. 17; 2 Saund. 284, n. 2).

Distress after tender of rent is invalid.

It must not be after tender or payment of the entire rent due; for if the landlord come to distrain the goods of his tenant for rent behind, before the distress, the tenant may upon the land tender the arrearages, and if after that a distress be taken it is wrongful; and if the landlord have distrained, if the tenant, before the impounding thereof, tender the arrearages and expenses, the landlord ought to deliver the distress, and if he do not, the detainer is unlawful. Even so it is, in case of a distress by damage feasant (or damage done by cattle trespassing); the tender of amends before the distress maketh the distress unlawful; and after the distress, and before the impounding, the detainer unlawful. (2 Inst. 107; 3 Stark. 171; Vertue v. Beasley, 2 M. & M. 21). But in this case, although the owner tender sufficient amends, after the impounding, yet he cannot take his beasts out of the pound, if the amends be refused; but he must replevy; and if it be found at the trial that the amends were not sufficient, the person on whom they trespassed shall have damages; if the amends tendered were sufficient, then the owner of the beasts shall have damages. (D. & St. 112; 17th ed. 193, 194; Vin. Ab. Repl. 22). If a distress be made after a sufficient tender and no subsequent demand, an action of trespass or on the case may be maintained. Branscombe v. Bridges, 1 B. & C. 145; Vertue v. Beasley, 2 M. & M. 21). A tenant distrained upon for arrears of rent, tendering the amount of the rent and the expenses of the distress before the goods are impounded, though after the distress, may maintain trespass for removing the goods, or continuing in possession, and tender to the bailiff authorized to distrain is sufficient. (Ladd v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & Ell. 117). Replevin also lies for the detention of the goods after tender of rent and before impounding, such detention being equivalent to a new taking, and the tenant may plead the tender in bar. (20 Vin. Ab. Tender, (S.), pl. 1; Gilbert, 85; Evans v. Elliott, 5 Ad. & Ell. 142).

Detainer is unlawful, if tender made before impounding.

1. When allowed.

Tender after the impounding makes neither the distress nor the detention unlawful, for then it comes too late, because then the cause is put to the trial of the law, there to be determined. (Pilkington's case, 5 Co. 76; Anscombe v. Shore, 2 Camp. 285; 1 Taunt, 261, S. C.; Sheriff v. James, 1 Bing. 341; 8 Moore, 334, S. C.; Ladd v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & Ell. 117; Thomas v. Harris, 1 Scott, N. R. 524; Ellis v. Taylor, 8 M. & W. 415). And no action lies for selling the distress, notwithstanding such tender. If, therefore, such a tender be refused, the owner should replevy, and after the law has determined it, and the avowant has a return irreplevisable, yet if the plaintiff makes him a sufficient tender, he may have an action of detinue for the detainer after, or he may, upon satisfaction made in court, have a writ for the re-delivery of his goods. (8 Co. 147 a).

Tender after impounding is too late.

If the landlord distrain for two rent-days' arrear, and the tenant offer the one, the lord is bound to receive it; and if he distrain, he does a tort. (20 Vin. Ab. 182, Tender, (E.), pl. 2).

By special agreement, or local custom, a distress may be made before the rent falls due. (Gilb. 56; Harg. Co. Lit. 47 b., n. 6).

Special agreement or custom to distrain before rent due.

Where a landlord takes a less rent than that agreed on for a length of time, he cannot in general distrain for that not actually paid. Where a landlord's receiver allowed the tenant to make a deduction in respect of a payment for land-tax every year for seventeen years greater than the landlord was liable to pay, the landlord knowing, or having the means of knowing, all the facts, it was held that he could not distrain for the amount erroneously allowed, though the receipt given every year shewed the amount paid and the amount deducted. (Bramston v. Robins, 4 Bing. 11; 12 Moore, 68).

Taking less for long time.

Where A. took a lease in writing, in his own name, of certain premises, and subsequently occupied part only, and paid rent for so much as he occupied to B., from whose agent he took the lease:—Held, that B. might distrain for the part so occupied, and that A. was precluded in replevin from disputing his title. (Clarke v. Waterton, 8 Car. & P. 365).

Where a landlord reserved rent, payable quarterly, or half-quarterly, if required. Having received the rent quarterly for a twelvemonth; held, that he could not, without notice, distrain for a half-quarter's rent. (Mallam v. Arden, 10 Bing. 299; 3 M. & Scott, 793).

Rent reserved quarterly or half-quarterly if required.

The taking even of a bond (3 Price, 572), or a bill of exchange or note, and giving a receipt (B. N. P. 82), for the rent, does not, until payment, preclude the landlord from distraining. But under circumstances the taking of a bill might suspend the right of distress. (See Davis v. Gyde, 2 Ad. & Ell. 623). A judgment for the rent or security given for it would preclude him. (B. N. P. 82). An agreement to take interest on rent in arrear does not so preclude him. (Skerry v. Preston, 2 Chit. Rep. 245).

Taking security for rent.

A tenant gave a bill of sale to a creditor, under which his goods (including certain eatage) were about to be sold, and the landlord, before the sale took place, put in a distress; whereupon it was agreed that the sale by the creditor should proceed, and that the landlord should be paid his arrears out of the proceeds of the goods and eatage. The plaintiff having purchased the eatage at the sale, put in his cattle to depasture it, and the amount of the sale not being sufficient to cover the arrears of rent, the landlord distrained again and took those cattle as a distress: Held, (Parke, B., diss.), that a contract was to be implied on the part of the landlord not to distrain the cattle of the purchaser of the eatage. (Horsford v. Webster, 1 C., M. & R. 696).

Agreement not to distrain.

A landlord has no right to distrain unless there be an actual demise to

There must be an actual demise.

1. When allowed.

the tenant at a fixed rent. And therefore where a tenant was in possession under a memorandum of an agreement to let on lease, with a purchasing clause for twenty-one years, at the clear net rent of 63*l.*, the tenant to enter at any time on or before a particular day, it was held, that this only amounted to an agreement for a future lease, and that no lease having been executed, and no rent subsequently paid, the landlord was not entitled to distrain. (Dunk v. Hunter, 5 B. & Ald. 322). And so where a party is in possession under an agreement for a lease, and no implied tenancy can be raised from other circumstances, the owner cannot during the first year distrain for non-payment of rent. (Hegan v. Johnson, 2 Taunt, 148; and see Regnant v. Porter, 7 Bingh. 451; 5 M. & P. 370; Gardiner v. Williamson, 2 B. & Ad. 336). But per Bayley, J., in the case of Dunk v. Hunter, the owner's remedy is by action for use and occupation.

Where demise void in part.

If a demise be made of lands, or of lands and incorporeal hereditaments, and rent is reserved out of the whole, in case the demise be void as to part of the principal subject-matter demised, no distress can be made for the whole rent or any part of it. (Gardiner v. Williamson, 2 B. & Ad. 336; Neale v. Mackenzie, 1 M. & W. 747; and see Bird v. Higginson, 6 Ad. & Ell. 824).

Rent must be fixed and certain.

So as Lord Coke says (Co. Lit. 96 a), it is a maxim in law, that no distress can be taken for any services that are not put into certainty, nor can be reduced to any certainty, for id certum est quod certum reddi potest; but yet, in many cases, there may be certainty in uncertainty. Therefore if a man hold land, paying so much per acre, although in the terms of the demise the number of acres be not fixed, the lord may distrain. (Vin. Ab. Distress, (E.)

Where plaintiff entered a farm under an oral agreement for a lease of ten years, though the time of paying the rent was settled, but it did not appear what was the amount to be paid, and the lease was never granted, but plaintiff occupied according to the terms of the proposed lease, and paid a certain rent for two years, it was held the lessor might distrain. (Knight v. Bennett, 3 Bingh. 361; 11 Moore, 277, S. C.)

Where the plaintiff, who had entered on premises under an agreement for a lease, admitted a charge of half a year's rent in an account between him and his landlord, it was held that this went to make him a tenant from year to year and liable to distress. (Cox v. Bent, 5 Bingh. 185; 2 M. & P. 281; and see Mann v. Lovejoy, 1 Ry. & M. 355).

But where a tenant entered under an agreement containing stipulations for a lease at 25*l.* a year, and an engagement by the landlord to complete certain erections. The erections were never completed, and the tenant never paid any rent; but being called on after some years' occupation, said he was ready to pay what was due, provided the erections were completed, and an allowance made him for the expense of some repairs; held, that a demise at a rent certain could not be implied, so as to entitle the landlord to distrain. (Regnart v. Porter, 7 Bingh. 451; 5 M. & P. 370, S. C.)

A tenant agreed verbally to take a house furnished, the rent payable quarterly and in advance. The house was furnished only in part, but the landlord promised that it should be completely furnished, not specifying any time, and the tenant was let into possession within a month after the treaty. After the expiration of a quarter, the landlord distrained for rent. The furniture not having been sent in as proposed, the tenant brought trespass:—Held, that it was a question for the jury, whether the agreement was absolute, or on condition only of the furniture being sent in; that there was evidence for the jury to find that it was conditional, and therefore that the distress was not justifiable. (Mechelan v. Wallace, 7 Ad. & E. 54, (n).)

Where an estate has been let without in any way fixing the amount of rent, the only remedy for such rent is by action.

1. When allowed.

One who becomes entitled to a part of the reversion may distrain, though his proportion of the rent has not been fixed.

But it seems that, after a tenancy has been created and the rent fixed, the assignee of the reversion of part of the demised premises might distrain for his proportion of the rent, though the amount of such proportion may not have been fixed previously. And, in replevin, such assignee may avow at common law, stating the facts specially, and leaving the apportionment of the rent to be made by the jury; or he may avow in the general form given by the statute 11 Geo. II. c. 19, as upon a holding at a certain rent; and if he avow under the statute for more than his proportion of the rent, the judge may direct the avowry to be amended. (Roberts v. Snell, 1 Man. & G. 577). One of two tenants in common, to whom the reversion has been devised, may also distrain for his portion of the rent. (Harrison v. Barnby, 5 T. R 246).

Double rent or value.

There cannot be a distress for double value under the 4 Geo. II. c. 28, but there may be for double rent under the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 18. (See Timmins v. Rowlinson, 3 Burr. 1603, 1608; Bla. Rep. 533, S. C.; Jenner v. Clegg, 1 Mood. & Rob. 213).

Landlord must be entitled to reversion.

The landlord must at the time of the distress be entitled to the legal reversion in the premises in respect of which the rent is due. The common law only allowed distresses when the relation of landlord and tenant subsisted, and when consequently feudal service could be performed. If therefore the landlord, before or after the rent become due, and before payment, either by his own conveyance to another or otherwise, has no longer the legal estate in the premises, he cannot distrain. (Gilb. Act. Debt, 411; Bro. Debt, pl. 93; Vaughan, 40; Bac. Ab. Distress, (A)). And where a landlord demises his whole interest to another he cannot distrain. Therefore, where an avowant, who had a term which expired on the 11th November, 1826, let the premises orally from the 11th September to the 11th November in that year for 270*l.*, payable immediately, it was held that this was a lease of which parol evidence might be given, and not an assignment requiring a writing, but that being a demise of the whole of the avowant's interest, he had no right to distrain. (Preece v. Corrie, 5 Bingh. 24; 2 M. & P. 57, S C.) When a lessor has not the legal estate or reversion, he should reserve a power to distrain, which will entitle him to do so. (Co. Lit. 47 a; 5 Co. 3; and see Brawley v. Wade, 1 M'Clel. 664; Pluck v. Digges, 2 Dow. & Clarke, 180). It was considered in Curtis v. Wheeler, (1 M. & M. 493), that a tenant from year to year, under a letting for a year, or from year to year, has a reversion which entitles him to distrain. Where A., being seised in fee, leased premises to B. for sixty-one years, and afterwards granted a lease to C. of the same premise, to commence at the expiration of the sixty-one years:—Held, that by the lease to C., A. did not part with his reversion, so as to disentitle him to distrain for rent due from B. under his lease. (Smith v. Day, 2 M. & W. 684).

And see further as to who are considered reversioners so as to entitle them to distrain. Isherwood v. Oldknow, 3 M. & Sel. 382; Rogers v. Humphreys, 4 Ad. & Ell. 299; Bringloe v. Goodson, 6 Scott, 502; 4 Bing. N. C. 726, S. C.

Reversion may be severed.

The reversion may be severed and devised or granted away so as to subject the lessee to separate distresses by different grantees or devisees. (Co. Litt. 148 a; 2 Inst. 504; Bliss v. Collins, 5 B. & Ald. 876; Roberts v. Snell, 1 M. & G. 577; Rivis v. Watson, 5 M. & W. 255).

A tenancy must subsist.

When a lease or tenancy has expired, so that the party holding possession is no longer a tenant, the landlord cannot in general distrain, because of the want of a subsisting tenancy. It is prudent and not unusual therefore to provide that the last quarter's rent shall be paid at a day prior to the determination of the lease, so as to enable the landlord to distrain before the tenant's removal. (Co. Lit. 47 b.) This, however, is in many cases rendered superfluous by the 8 Anne, c. 14, (which we shall hereafter notice), which provides that if a person retain possession of the estate after the expiration of his tenancy, the landlord, if his interest continue, may distrain within six months. (See post, 313). And besides this, the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 18, (which we shall also hereafter notice), enables a landlord to distrain for double rent if a tenant do not deliver up possession after the expiration of his own notice to quit.

1. When allowed.

If also by agreement or custom the tenant has an away-going crop, and right to hold over to clear the same, the landlord may, during such excrescence of the term distrain at common law. (Bevan v. Delahay, 1 Hen. Bla.; Wigglesworth v. Dallison, 1 Dougl. 201; Knight v. Bennett, 3 Bingh. 364; 11 Moore, 277, S. C.)

Distress after ejectment.

A landlord, who has obtained judgment in ejectment against the occupier of his land, cannot afterwards distrain on him for the rent. (Bridges v. Smith, 5 Bingh. 410; 2 M. & P. 470). But where there has been no judgment or actual eviction of the tenant, it seems a distress might be made. (Rogers v. Humphreys, 4 Ad. & Ell. 299).

Inclosure acts.

By stat. 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 23, landlords, or persons acting under their orders, may enter upon land allotted to them under any inclosure act, and seize and distrain for rent, notwithstanding the commissioners' award shall not have been executed. (See further, "Inclosure," Vol. III.)

Devisee.

A devisee may distrain for rent devised to him out of lands if the land is charged with a distress, and not otherwise. (Shep. Touch. 439).

Executors.

As to executors distraining, see post, 310.

Mortgagee.

A mortgagee, after notice given of the mortgage to the tenant in possession under a lease prior to the mortgage, may distrain for the rent in arrear at the time of the mortgage, (although he was not in actual seisin of the premises, or in receipt of the rents and profits, at the time it became due), as well as for rent which may accrue after such notice, the legal title to the rent being in the mortgagee. (Moss v. Gallimore, Dougl. 278). But where the tenant came into possession under the mortgagor after the mortgage, the mortgagee cannot distrain unless the relation of landlord and tenant has been created between the parties by mutual consent, and a notice from the mortgagee to pay the rent to him will not without the assent of the tenant produce such a relation. (Rogers v. Humphreys, 4 Ad. & Ell. 299; Evans v. Elliot, 9 Ad. & Ell. 342; Brown v. Storey, 1 Scott, N. R. 9).

Grantee of rent-charge.

A rent-charge granted for life by a tenant for years is not void, but is good as a chattel interest. And the goods of a stranger not shown to hold the premises by title paramount to the rent-charge (as by a prior demise) may be distrained for the arrears. (Saffery v. Elgood, 1 Ad. & E. 191; Johnson v. Faulkner, 2 Gale & D. 184). A rent-charge may be divided by will, or by deed operating under the statute of uses, or, since the stat. 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9, by a conveyance of any kind, so as to make the tenant liable, without attornment, to several distresses by the devisees or cestuis que use. (Rivis v. Watson, 5 Mee. & W. 255).

Joint tenants.

One joint tenant may distrain alone, but then he must avow in his own right and as bailiff to the other. (Pullen v. Palmer, 5 Mod. 73).

Tenants in common.

One joint tenant may, without the assent of his fellows, appoint a bailiff to distrain for rent due to all the joint tenants. (Robinson v. Hofman, 4 Bingh. 562; 1 M. & P. 474; 3 C. & P. 234. See 3 Chit. Pl. 6th ed. 959). One tenant in common may distrain for his share of the rent upon the terre-tenant holding under him and another tenant in common, and he may do so where such tenant has paid the whole rent to the other tenant in common after notice not to pay it. (Harrison v. Barnby, 5 T. R. 246).

Co-heirs in gavel kind.

One of several co-heirs in gavelkind may distrain for rent due to him and his companions without their actual authority. (Leigh v. Shepherd, 2 Brod. & B. 465; 5 Moore, 297, S. C.)

Bankruptcy or insolvency.

As to distresses in case of bankruptcy or insolvency, see post, 308.

Receiver.

A receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery may distrain for rent where he sees it necessary, and need not apply first to that court for a particular order for the purpose. He should distrain in the name of the person who had the right. (Pitt v. Snowden, 1 Atk. 750; Bennett v. Robins, 5 C. & P. 379).

1. When allowed.

With respect to a private receiver or collector, it has been held that an authority to tenants "to pay rent to J. S., whose receipt shall be their discharge," does not entitle him to distrain, although he is to receive the rent for his own benefit. (Ward v. Shaw, 9 Bingh. 608; 2 M. & Sc. 756). But it is apprehended that under an authority to collect, the collector might distrain.

Power to distrain under an award.

Avowry for rent in arrear under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, that the plaintiffs held the premises in which &c. as tenants to A. Plea in bar, that A. demised the premises in which &c. to the plaintiffs for all the residue of his interest in the same, and that A. had not any reversionary interest in the same. The defendant replied—a power of distress given to A. by the award of an arbitrator to whom certain disputes, and all matters in difference between him and the plaintiffs, had been referred. The plaintiffs rejoined, that it was not referred to the arbitrator, whether the defendant A. should have a power of distress; to which the defendant demurred specially:—Held, that the plea in bar was good, and that the replication was bad, in not averring that the arbitrator had authority to confer a power of distress, or that the right to distrain was one of the matters in difference. (Pascoe v. Pascoe, 3 Bing. N. C. 898; 5 Scott, 117).

Bailiffs.

The lessor or landlord himself may make the distress; in general, however, he employs some third person, called a "bailiff." The authority given on this employment may be by parol, but in general it is in writing (usually called a "warrant of distress"), and it is best it should be so.

Their authority.

The authority should be given by all the parties entitled to distrain. 1 Leon. 50).

A man, indeed, may distrain for another person without any express authority; if he afterwards obtain the assent of such person, such assent will have relation to the time of the distress taken. (Gilb. Distress, 32).

A warrant to distrain upon goods was originally addressed by the defendant to the plaintiffs or their agent, and the plaintiffs' clerk struck out the plaintiffs' name, and inserted that of one W., and the distress having been made by W., the defendant had notice of that fact, and had several communications with W. as to the disposing of the goods:—It was considered that the employment of W. was sufficiently authorized by the defendant, and that the alteration did not render the warrant void. (Toplis v. Grane, 7 Scott, 620; 5 Bing. N. C. 636).

A warrant of distress was produced by the plaintiff, purporting to be issued by the solicitors of the landlords of certain property, the writing being in the hand of a junior partner of the firm. The solicitors had, on previous occasions, issued distress warrants in respect of other property of the landlords; this was held not to be sufficient evidence of an authority by the landlords to distrain. (Jones v. Buckley, 2 Jur. N. P. C. 204).

To trespass for taking the plaintiff's horse, the defendant pleaded, 1st, not guilty; and, 2ndly, that the horse was damage feasant on his land. The horse was proved to have been wrongfully distrained by the servant of the defendant on the highway, and not on his land. No primâ facie case was considered to have been made out, that the defendant had authorized the distress in question, by proof of his having on other occasions authorized his servant to distrain cattle damage feasant on his land; and that he had not adopted the act of his servant, by pleading a justification of it. (Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & Ell. 513).

13 Edw. I, c. 37.

The statute 13 Edw. I. c. 37, section 2, which enacts, that no distress shall be taken, except by bailiffs "sworn and known," does not apply to distresses taken for rent in arrear. (Begbie v. Hayne, 2 Scott, 193).

2 What may be distrained.

Distraining where no rent is due.

By stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5, if any distress and sale shall be made for rent in arrear and due when none is in truth due, the owner shall recover double value with full costs. The owner may sue either in trespass or case.

Rescue.

And if the distress be taken of goods without cause, the owner may make rescous: but if they be distrained without cause and impounded, the owner cannot break the pound and take them out, because they are in the custody of the law. (1 Inst. 47; post, 312).

II. What may be Distrained.

All goods on premises.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that all chattels personal the landlord finds on the premises, whether they in fact belong to the tenant, a lodger, or other stranger, are liable to be distrained, unless particularly protected or exempted. (See 3 Bla. Com. 7).

Valuable property.

But a distress for rent must be of a thing whereof a valuable property is in somebody; and therefore deer, bucks, does, conies, and the like, that are feræ naturæ, cannot be distrained. (1 Inst. 47). But deer in an inclosed ground (not an ancient park) may be distrained for rent. (Davies v. Powell, Willes, 46). So at the present day may dogs: a man may have a valuable property in a dog. (Id. 48; 1 Saund. 84. See post, tit. "Dogs").

Things in use.

Whatever is in a man's present use or occupation, is during that time privileged from distress; as a horse on which he is riding, or an axe with which he is cutting wood. (Co. Litt. 47 a). This rule extends even to the case of a distress damage feasant, and although the thing distrained upon be used for the purpose of doing damage; for though it is said to have been formerly held, that horses might be severed from the plough, or a horse taken damage feasant and impounded, although a rider were upon him; such distress is now determined to be unlawful, as it would be liable to lead to a breach of the peace. (Vide Hargrave's note (12) on Co. Litt. 47 a, and 6 T. R. 139; Field v. Adams, 12 Ad. & Ell. 649). So nets or ferrets cannot be taken damage feasant in a warren, if they are in the hands of a person using them. And although it was formerly considered that a cart and horses, when carrying corn or hay, might be distrained for rent-service, it seems now to be held that such a distress would be illegal, as being made on things in immediate use. On the same ground it has been determined that a loom cannot be distrained when in the hands of the weaver; nor wearing apparel, if in actual use; but if put off, though only for the purpose of repose, it is liable to be taken as a distress for rent. (Baynes v. Smith, 1 Esp. 206; Bradby, 207, 208). The nature of the user must be shown in pleading this exemption; for in trespass for taking a dog, where plaintiff, to a plea of distress damage feasant, replied that the dog was, at the time of distraining, in the actual possession and in the personal care of the plaintiff, and being actually used by him, it was held that the plea did not aver sufficient to privilege the dog from distress. (Bunch v. Kennington, 4 Per. & D. 509).

Goods of others in way of trade.

Valuable things in the way of trade are not liable to distress. As a horse standing in a smith's shop to be shod, or in a common inn; or cloth at a tailor's house, or corn sent to a mill or market. For all these are protected and privileged for the benefit of trade. (Bradby, 207, 208). So goods of a principal in the hands of a factor for sale, are privileged from distress for rent due from such factor to his landlord, on the ground that the rule of public convenience, out of which the privilege arises, is within the exemption of a landlord's general right to distrain, and therefore that such goods are protected for the benefit of trade. (Gilman v. Elton, 6 Moore, 243; 3 B. & B. 75, S. C.) So goods landed at a wharf and consigned to a broker, as agent of the consignor, for sale, and placed by the broker in the wharfinger's warehouse for safe custody until an opportunity of selling them should occur, are not distrainable for rent due in respect of the wharf and warehouse, as they were brought to the wharf in the course of trade. (Thompson v. Mashiter, 1 Bing. 283; 8 Moore, 254, S. C.). Nor is a horse that has carried corn to a mill to be ground, and during the grinding is tied to the mill door, distrainable. (Read v. Burley, Cro. Eliz. 549, 596). Nor are goods sent to an auctioneer to be sold on premises occupied by him. (Adams v. Grane, 1 C. & M. 380). Nor is the carcase of a beast sent to a butcher to be slaughtered. (Brown v. Shevill, 2 Ad. & El. 138). Goods in possession of an innkeeper or carrier, though the carrier be not a public one, are exempt. (Gilbourn v. Hurst, 1 Salk. 249). 2. What may be distrained.

Cattle driven to a distant market, and put into land to rest for one night, cannot be distrained for rent. (Fowkes v. Joyce, 3 Lev. 260; 2 Vern. 130; 2 Saund. 290, n. 7; 3 Bla. Com. 8, Christian's note. And see Horsford v. Webster, 1 C., M. & R. 702).

But these general rules must be understood with some limitations. For although the goods of a guest at a public inn are privileged from distress, because such a place is publici juris, and all men have a right to use it without molestation; yet this exemption was held not to extend to the case of a chariot standing in the coach-house of a livery-stable keeper, for that is not a common inn, and the hire of its standing may be considered as part of the profits of the premises. (Francis v. Wyatt, 3 Burr. 1498; 1 Bl. Rep. 483, S. C.) The goods to be exempted from distress must also be within the very precincts of the inn, and not on other premises at a distance belonging to it. And even within the inn itself the exemption does not extend to the goods of a person dwelling therein as a tenant rather than a guest. (Bradby, 208, 209).

Moreover, although materials delivered by a manufacturer to a weaver to be by him manufactured at his own house, are privileged from distress for rent due from the weaver to his landlord; yet a frame or other machinery delivered by the manufacturer to the weaver, together with the materials, for the purpose of being used in the weaver's house in the manufacture of such materials, is not privileged unless there be other goods upon the premises sufficient to satisfy the rent due. (Wood v. Clark, 1 C. & J. 484; and see Fenton v. Logan, 9 Bingh. 676; 3 M. & Scott, 82).

Salt was manufactured and publicly sold at certain salt works, and carried away in boats of the purchasers, which came for the purpose of being loaded with it, into a cut or canal on the premises communicating with a public navigation. The boat of the plaintiff, an alkali manufacturer, was lying in this cut or canal for the purpose of receiving and carrying away salt bought by him for the purposes of his manufacture:—Held, (Parke, B. dissentiente), that the boat was not privileged from distress for arrears of an annuity issuing out of the land on which the salt works were erected, and granted by the manufacturer and seller of the salt. (Muspratt v. Gregory, 1 M. & W. 633, affirmed in error, 3 M. & W. 677).

Brewers' casks sent to a public-house with beer, and left there until the beer is consumed, are liable to be distrained for the rent of the house. (Joule v. Jackson, 7 M. & W. 450).

Deeds and papers of a client in possession of his attorney, in the way of his business, cannot be seized under a distress against the attorney. (MS. Sussex Lent Assizes, 1832). Indeed, it would seem that such chattels could not be distrained in any case. Deeds &c. in hands of attorney.

By the common law no man shall be distrained by the utensils or instruments of his trade or profession, as the axe of the carpenter, or the book of a scholar, a stocking-frame or a loom, implements of husbandry, beasts of the plough and sheep, which are all privileged from distress while in actual use, or whilst any other sufficient distress can be found on the premises. (Co. Litt. 47 a; Simpson v. Hartopp, Willes, 512; Gorton v. Falkner, 4 T. R. 565; and vide 1 Selw. N. P.) It Tools of trade. Beasts of plough.

should seem that if there be a reasonable ground for presuming there are not sufficient other goods, the landlord may distrain implements of trade, &c., and is not bound to sell the other goods first. (Jenner v. Yolland, 2 Chit. Rep. 167; 6 Price, 3). And the landlord may distrain beasts of the plough, &c. though there may be growing crops sufficient to satisfy the distress. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 441). But this rule holds only in distresses for rent arrear, amerciaments, and the like; and doth not extend to cases where a distress is given in the nature of an execution by any particular statute, as for poor rates, and the like. Anon. 3 Salk. 136). In Hutchins v. Chambers, on a special verdict, several geldings were distrained for the poor rate, which were stated to be beasts of the plough and cart, when there were other goods more than sufficient to answer the value of the demand. It was objected that by stat. 51 Hen. III. s. 4, (which was in affirmance of the common law), none shall be distrained by his beasts that gaigne his land. The court were unanimously of opinion that beasts of the plough are distrainable under stat. 43 Eliz. c. 2, and such like acts of Parliament. (1 Burr. 579).

Things fixed to the freehold.

Furnaces, cauldrons, or other things fixed to the freehold, or the door, or windows of a house, or the like, cannot be distrained. (Co. Lit. 47 b; Pitt v. Shaw, 4 B. & Ald. 207). And this rule extends to such things as are essentially parts of the freehold, although for a time removed; therefore a mill-stone is not distrainable, though it be removed out of its proper place in order to be picked; because such removal is out of necessity, and the stone still continues part of the mill: so it is of a smith's anvil on which he works, for this is accounted part of the forge, though it be not actually fixed by nails to the shop. (Bro. Abr. Distress, pl. 23; Gorton v. Falkner, 4 T. R. 567). It is questionable whether machinery fixed by bolts to the floor of a factory can be distrained. (Duck v. Braddyll, M'Clel. 217; 13 Price, 459, S. C.)

Tenant's fixtures.

Indeed, any thing affixed, such as grates, stoves, &c., though removable by the tenant, cannot be distrained for rent. (Danby v. Harris, 1 G. & D. 234).

11 Geo. 2, c 19.

Cattle feeding on commons.

Growing crops, &c.

And by stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord or his steward, or other person empowered by him, may take and seize any cattle or stock feeding on any common appendant or appurtenant, or belonging to the premises, corn, grass, hops, roots, fruits, pulse, or other product growing on the estate, as a distress for rent; and the same may cut, gather, make, cure, carry, and lay up when ripe in the barns or other proper place on the premises; and if there shall be no barn or proper place on the premises demised, then in any other barn or proper place which he shall procure as near as may be to the premises; the appraisement whereof shall be taken when cut, gathered, cured, and made, and not before.

Trees, &c.

The word "product" in the statute does not extend to trees and shrubs growing in a nurseryman's ground, but it is confined to products of a similar nature with those specified in that section, to all of which the process of becoming ripe, and of being cut, gathered, made, and laid up when ripe, was incidental. (Clark v. Gaskarth, 8 Taunt. 431; 2 Moore, 491, S. C.); see also Clark v. Calvert, 3 Moore, 96; 8 Taunt. 743, S. C.)

Crops, &c. seized under fi. fa.

Growing crops taken under a fi. fa. in the hands of the sheriff's vendee, are protected from the landlord's distress for rent subsequently accruing, unless perhaps allowed to remain uncut for an unreasonable time. (Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.; Com. Rep. 203). And this though the provisions of the 56 Geo. III. c. 50, (post, 279), were not complied with. (Wright v. Dewes, 1 Ad. & Ell. 641).

To what persons the 11 Geo 2, c. 19, s. 8, extends.

The powers conferred by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, are, it seems, limited to lessors or landlords, and do not extend to the grantees of rent-charges; and, therefore, where an annuity was granted charged upon certain premises, with a power, in case the annuity should be in arrear, to enter upon the premises and distrain for the annuity and the distress, then and there to detain, manage, sell, and dispose of in the same manner and in all respects as distresses for rents reserved upon leases for years might be detained, managed, sold, and disposed of, and as if the annuity were a rent reserved upon a lease; it was decided that growing crops could not be distrained under this power. (Miller v. Green, 2 C. & J. 142). As to whether persons empowered to distrain by 4 Geo. I. c. 28, s. 5, (ante, 270), are entitled to distrain growing crops under this statute, see Johnson v. Faulkner, 2 Gale & D. 184.

2. What may be distrained.

At common law such things only can be distrained as may be restored to the owner in the same plight as they were in at the time of taking them, and for this reason sheaves and shocks of corn were not distrainable: but by stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 3, persons having rent arrear on any demise, lease, or contract, may seize and secure any sheaves or cocks of corn, or corn loose or in the straw, or hay, being in any barn or granary, or upon any hovel, stack, or rick, or otherwise upon any part of the land charged with rent, and may lock up or detain the same in the place where found, in the nature of a distress, so as the same be not removed to the damage of the owner out of the place where found and seized, but be kept there (as impounded) till replevied or sold. This provision extends to corn in whatever state it may be, whether thrashed or not. (Lutw. 214).

2 W. & M sess. 1, c. 5.

Things not restorable in as good a plight.

Corn or hay cut.

Where an annuity was charged upon certain premises, and it was stipulated that, in case it should be in arrear, it might be lawful for the grantee to enter on the premises to distrain in the same manner as the law directs in case of rent in arrear, it was held that the grantee might, under such a stipulation and the stat. of 2 Will. & Mary, take oats and hay in stacks or trusses as a landlord, under a distress for rent, the last-mentioned statute not being confined to distresses by landlords only. (Johnson v. Faulkner, 2 Gale & D. 184). Persons empowered to distrain by 4 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 5, (ante, 270), are entitled to the privileges conferred by this statute. (Ib.)

Milk, fruit, and the like, cannot be distrained, as they cannot be restored in as good a plight as when taken. (3 Bla. Com. 9). But it may be questionable whether now, as the distress may be sold, such things as will not injure in the five days, cannot be distrained.

Milk, fruit, &c.

For the protection of landlords, the stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, enacts, that no sheriff or other officer in England or Wales, shall, by virtue of any process of any court of law, carry off, or sell or dispose of for the purpose of being carried off from any lands let to farm, any straw thrashed or unthrashed, or any straw of crops growing, or any chaff, colder, or any turnips, or any manure, compost, ashes, or seaweed, in any case whatsoever, nor any hay, grass, or vetches, nor any roots or vegetables, being the produce of such lands, in any case where, according to any covenant or written agreement entered into and made for the benefit of the owner or landlord of any farm, such hay, grass, or grasses, tares and vetches, roots or vegetables, ought not to be taken off or withholden from such lands, or which by the tenor or effect of such covenants or agreements ought to be used or expended thereon; and of which covenants or agreements such sheriff or other officer shall have received a written notice before he shall have proceeded to sale.

56 Geo 3, c. 50 Sheriff, &c not to sell or carry off straw, &c contrary to covenants.

Sect. 2 enacts, that the tenant shall give notice to the sheriff of the existence of covenants, and the sheriff to the landlord.

Notice.

Sect. 3 empowers such sheriff or other officer to dispose of the produce, subject to an agreement to expend it on the land.

Agreements.

Sect. 6. "In all cases where any purchaser or purchasers of any crop or produce hereinbefore mentioned shall have entered into any agreement with such sheriff or other officer, touching the use and expenditure thereof on lands let to farm, it shall not be lawful for the owner or landlord of such lands to distrain for any rent on any corn, hay, straw, or other produce thereof, which at the time of such sale and the execution of such agreement entered into under the provisions of this act, shall have been severed from the soil and sold, subject to such agreement, by such sheriff or other officer; nor on any turnips, whether drawn or growing, if sold according to the provisions of this act; nor on any horses, sheep, or other cattle, nor on any beasts whatsoever, nor on any waggons, carts, or other implements of husbandry, which any person or persons shall employ, keep, or use on such lands for the purpose of thrashing out, carrying, or consuming any such corn, hay, straw, turnips, or other produce under the provisions of the act, and the agreement or agreements directed to be entered into between the sheriff or other officer, and the purchaser or purchasers of such crops and produce as hereinbefore are mentioned." (See Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.; Wright v. Dewes, 1 Ad. & Ell. 641; ante, 278).

2. What may be distrained.

It has been decided in analogy with this act, that where a farm tenant is under covenant not to carry off the premises the hay and straw made on the farm, the landlord who has seized the hay and straw under a distress may sell it, subject to a condition that the purchaser shall consume it on the premises. (Abbey v. Petch, 8 M. & W. 419).

The queen not affected by this act.

The crown, or its process, not being in any way alluded to in this statute, is not affected by the provisions it contains for preserving covenants between the tenants and landlords of lands, &c. let to farm; the Court of Exchequer therefore held, that the sheriff, on a writ of venditioni exponas issued after an extent, could not sell the crops, &c. taken under it, subject to any condition that the same should be used and expended according to the covenants of the lease. (R. v. Osbourne, 6 Price, 94).

Stranger's or lodger's goods.

Generally, whatever goods and chattels the landlord finds upon the premises, whether they in fact belong to the tenant or a lodger, or a stranger, are distrainable by him for rent; for otherwise a door would be opened to infinite frauds upon the landlord; and the lodger or stranger hath his remedy over by action on the case against the tenant, if by the tenant's fault the goods are distrained, so that he cannot render them when called upon. (See 3 Bla. Com. 8; ante, 276).

Sometimes equity will relieve

But on particular circumstances perhaps a court of equity may relieve. As in Fowkes v. Joyce, 3 Lev. 260; 2 Ventr. 50, S. C., a person driving sheep to London to sell, by agreement with the master of an inn put them into the ground at so much a score for the night. The landlord seeing them, asked whose they were, but consented to their staying there, and afterwards distrained them for rent due to him from the master of the inn; and it was adjudged for the landlord. But in the same case, upon a bill for relief in equity, the lords commissioners seemed to think that the grounds lying to the inn, and used therewith, ought to have the same privileges the inn hath, and that a passenger's cattle ought not to be distrainable there. (2 Vern. 129). And on the ground of a fraudulent consent by the landlord it was decreed that he should answer for the value of the sheep, and pay costs both in law and equity. (Prac. Ch. 7). And a court of law in the present day would, it seems, be of opinion, that cattle belonging to a drover, being put into a ground with the consent of the occupier to graze only one night in their way to a fair or market, would not be liable to the distress of the landlord for rent. (2 Saund, 290, n. (7); ante, 277).

Cattle agisting.

Cattle escaped on the premises.

Where a stranger's beasts escape into the land, they may be distrained for rent, though they have not been levant and couchant, (that is, not having so long remained upon the ground as to have lain down and risen up again to feed), provided they are trespassers; but if the tenant of the land is in default in not repairing his fences, whereby the beast came into the land, the landlord cannot distrain such beasts, though they have been levant and couchant, unless he have caused notice to be given to the owner, and the owner suffers them to remain there afterwards. (Lutw. 364; see Jones v. Powell, 5 B. & Cres. 647; 8 D. & R. 416). But such notice, it is said, is not necessary where the distress is by the lord of the fee for an ancient rent, or by the grantee of a rent-charge. (Woodf. 301). Where the cattle escape accidentally, there they are not distrainable until they have been levant and couchant; but if they escape by default of their owner, they are distrainable the first minute. (Per Treby, C. J., Kemp v. Crewes, 1 Ld. Raym. 169; Lutw. 1577, S. C.) "And if the cattle of one man escape into the land of another, it is no excuse that the fences were out of repair if they were trespassers in the place from whence they came. If it be a close, the owner of the cattle must show an interest or right to put them there. If it be a way, he must show that he was lawfully using the way; for the property is in the owner of the soil, subject to an easement for the benefit of the public." (Per Heath. J., Dovaston v. Payne, 2 H Bla. 531).

2. What may be distrained.

Things for which a replevin will not lie, so as to be known again, as money out of a bag, cannot be distrained. (2 Bac. Abr. 109; Moore, 394). But money in a bag sealed may be distrained, for the bag sealed may be known again.

Things for which a replevin will not lie.

Money.

Title deeds, receipts, bills, notes, &c., are not distrainable.

Title deeds, &c

Goods in the custody of the law are not distrainable; therefore goods distrained for damage feasant cannot be taken for rent, nor goods in a bailiff's hands on an execution, nor goods seized by process at the suit of the king, because they are in the custody of the law. (Co. Litt. 47; Park, 120). But the goods so in custody must be removed from the premises within a reasonable time, or they will not be protected. (Blades v. Arundale, 1 Price, 277; 1 M. & Sel. 711; Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.; ante, 278). Goods taken under a void outlawry are liable to a distress for rent. (President and Scholars of St. John's College, Oxford, v. Murcott, 7 T. R. 259). We have already noticed the provisions of the 56 Geo. III. c. 50, ante, 279. Goods seized by a messenger under a fiat in bankruptcy are not while in his custody privileged from distress for rent due from the bankrupt to his landlord. (Briggs v. Sowry, 8 M. & W. 729). As to distraining growing crops seized in execution, see ante, 278; and see further as to distresses on goods under an execution, or in cases of bankruptcy, post, 308.

Goods in custody of the law.

By the 7 Anne, c. 12, s. 3, it is enacted, that process of distress against the goods of any ambassador or other public minister, &c. of a foreign state, or of their domestic servants, shall be void. But the goods, to entitle them to protection, must be for the necessary convenience of the ambassador or other public minister; and in the late war, where a British-born subject, employed as first chorister at the Portuguese ambassador's chapel with a salary, rented and occupied a house, and let part of it in lodgings, and a distress was levied on his goods for a poor's rate; it was held, that they were not protected by the statute, even assuming him to be a domestic servant of the ambassador. (Novello v. Toogood, 1 B. & Cress. 554).

Goods of ambassadors.

Trespass or trover will lie for distraining privileged goods. (Ward v. Ventom, Peake's Add. Cas. 126; Brown v. Shevil, 2 Ad. & Ell. 138; Gorten v. Falkner, 4 T. R. 565).

Action for distraining privileged goods.

A broker who enters under an ordinary warrant of distress and distrains on privileged goods, is not entitled to an indemnity from the person who employs him. But an undertaking to indemnify may in some cases be implied from the acts and directions of the landlord. (Toplis v. Grane, 7 Scott, 620; 5 Bing. N. C. 636; and see Hart v. Leach, 1 M. & W. 560; Lyons v. Martin, 8 Ad. & Ell. 513).

Bailiff's right to indemnity.

With respect to the remedy over by an under-tenant or lodger or other party distrained on for rent by the superior landlord against the person owing the rent, see Schlencker v. Moxsy, 3 B. & Cress. 789; 5 D. & R. 747, S. C. It may be laid down as a general rule, he has such remedy by action against his immediate landlord for not indemnifying. In Schlencker v. Moxsy, it was held, that were the tenant of premises had underlet a part by deed, and the original landlord distrained for rent upon the undertenant, the latter could not support assumpsit against his immediate lessor for an implied promise to indemnify him against the rent payable to the superior landlord.

Remedy by undertenant where he is distrained.

4. Where the distress shall be made.

III. At what Time the Distress shall be taken, and Statute of Limitation as to.

Time of distress

For a rent or service the lord cannot distrain in the night, but in the day-time; and so it is of a rent-charge; but for damage feasant, one may distrain in the night; otherwise it may be the beasts may be gone before he can take them. (1 Inst. 142, (a).)

Before sunrising, or after sunset, no man can distrain but for damage feasant. (Mirrour, c. 2, s. 26; see also Milborn's Case, 7 Rep. 7 (a); Aldenburgh v. Peaple, 6 C. & P. 212).

In general the distress cannot be on the day the rent falls due; when otherwise, see ante, p. 271. It cannot be made in general after the expiration of the tenancy, when otherwise, ante, 273.

Statute of Limitation as to.

By the stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 42, the rent must be distrained for within six years after it becomes due, or after an acknowledgment in writing, signed by the party who owes it or his agent. (See the cases of Grant v. Ellis, 9 M. & W. 113; Strachan v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & Ell. 536; Paget v. Foley, 3 Scott, 120; 2 Bingh. N. C. 679, S. C., as to the limitation of actions for rent).

IV. Where the Distress shall be made.

Church lands.

The king's officers, as sheriffs and others, shall not take distresses in the fees wherewith churches in times past have been endowed: but distresses may be taken in possessions of the church newly purchased. 9 Edw. II. c. 9.

On the premises.

A man may distrain in places or lands within the fee, or premises demised liable to distress, and not elsewhere. (52 Hen. III. c. 51; 2 Inst. 131; Mir. c. 2, s. 26). If made elsewhere the tenant may, before impounding, rescue that distress, or, whether before or after impounding, may bring his action of trespass or trover.

On common and ways.

And by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord may distrain any cattle or stock of the tenant, depasturing on any common appendant or appurtenant, or any ways belonging to the premises demised. The right given by this act is confined to cattle and live stock, so that a distress could not be made on a cart standing on a common, unless fraudulently removed. (Furneaux v. Fotherby, 4 Campb. 136).

On highways.

No person (except the king's officers) shall take distresses in the king's highway. (52 Hen. III. c. 51). And the reason is, because the king's subjects ought to have free passage as well to fairs and markets as about their other affairs. But this rule is confined to the first taking of the distress; for if the lord coming to distrain see the beasts within his fee, and before he can distrain them they are chased into the highway, he may distrain them therein. (2 Inst. 132). And this statute, though passed for a remedy to the party distrained on, does not avoid the distress. (Ib.; F. N. B. 90; Buzzard v. Capel, 4 Bingh. 140; 12 Moore, 339; 2 C. & P. 541).

Barge on river.

A barge attached by a rope to a wharf in the river Thames, in the space between high and low water mark, cannot be distrained on for rent in arrear, in respect of the wharf and premises attached to it. (Buzzard v. Capel, 8 B. & Cres. 141; 3 Y. & Jerv. 344, S. C.; overruling 4 Bingh. 137, S. C.).

On canal for canal rates.

A distress for canal rates should, it seems, in general be made on the canal; though this of course must depend on the act of parliament authorizing the canal. (See Fraser v. Swansea Canal Company, 1 Ad. & Ell. 360). It was there held, that a power to seize for tolls on goods passing along a canal in barges, and to sell, unless redeemed by payment of arrear of toll then due from owner, within seven days after appraisement, and as in cases of distress, does not authorize a seizure of coals on a wharf adjoining canal for tolls due in respect of the carriage thereof, and the seizure can only be made whilst the coals are on board a barge, and in the canal.

V. Goods fraudulently conveyed off the Premises.

Goods fraudulently removed.

If the lessor did not find sufficient or any goods on the premises demised, he could formerly resort to no where else to distrain, and therefore tenants who were knavish made a practice to convey away their goods and stock fraudulently from the premises demised, in order to cheat their landlords.

11 Geo. 2, c. 19.

But now, by stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 1, "in case any tenant or tenants, lessee or lessees, for life or lives, term of years, at will, sufferance or otherwise, of any messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, upon the demise or holding whereof any rent is or shall be reserved, due, or made payable, shall fraudulently or clandestinely convey away, or carry off or from such premises, his, her or their goods or chattels, to prevent the landlord or lessor, landlords or lessors, from distraining the same for arrears of rent so reserved, due, or made payable; it shall and may be lawful to and for every landlord or lessor, landlords or lessors, within that part of Great Britain called England, dominion of Wales, or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, or any person or persons by him, her or them for that purpose lawfully empowered, within the space of thirty days next ensuing such conveying away or carrying off such goods or chattels as aforesaid, to take and seize such goods and chattels, wherever the same shall be found, as a distress for the said arrears of rent; and the same to sell, or otherwise dispose of, in such manner as if the said goods and chattels had actually been distrained by such lessor or landlord, lessors or landlords, in and upon such premises for such arrears of rent; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

May be distrained on within thirty days after removal,

Except when bonâ fide sold.

Sect. 2. "No landlord or lessor, or other person entitled to such arrears of rent, shall take or seize any such goods or chattels as a distress for the same, which shall be sold bonâ fide, and for a valuable consideration, before such seizure made, to any person or persons not privy to such fraud as aforesaid; anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

2 & 3 Vict c. 47.

Removing furniture to evade rent within the metropolitan police district.

By the 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47 (the Metropolitan Police Act), it is enacted, "that it shall be lawful for any constable (within the metropolitan police district) to stop and detain, until due inquiry can be made, all carts and carriages which he shall find employed in removing the furniture of any house or lodgings between the hours of eight in the evening and six in the following morning, or whenever the constable shall have good grounds for believing that such removal is made for the purpose of evading the payment of rent.

Act remedial, not penal.

Observations and Decisions on the above enactments of the 11 Geo. II. c. 19.]—The first and second sections of this act are remedial, and not penal, and should be construed liberally. (See Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301; Brooke v. Noakes, 8 B. & Cres. 537).

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction under s. 4 to inquire into and adjudicate on an information for the alleged fraudulent removal of goods by a tenant, although it appears that the property in the premises is disputed, and that the tenant has paid the rent to one of the claimants. (Coster v. Wilson, 3 M. & W. 411).

Applies to goods of tenant only.

The act applies to the goods of the tenant only, which are fraudulently removed, and not those of a stranger (Thornton v. Adams, 5 M. & Sel. 38); and it does not apply to an undertenant removing to avoid the distress of a landlord on his immediate tenant. (Ib.; Bennet's case, 2 Stra. 787; Postman v. Hurrell, 6 C. & P. 225).

A creditor may, with the assent of the debtor, remove goods from the premises for the payment of a bonâ fide debt, without incurring the penalty of the third section of the statute for assisting in removing goods. (Bach v. Meats, 5 M. & Sel. 200).

Rent must be due before removal.

To bring the case within the statute, the removal must have taken place after the rent became due. (Northfield v. Nightingale, 1 C. & M. 230, n.; Rand v. Vaughan, 1 Bingh. N. C. 767; Watson v. Main, 3 Esp. 15; 2 Saund. 284, n. 2; removing the doubt expressed by Lord Ellenborough in Furneaux v. Fotherby, 4 Campb. 136). And goods removed before the rent became due, cannot be followed and distrained, though they were removed fraudulently. (Watts v. Thomas, 1 Jur. 919).

Removal after end of tenancy.

A landlord has no right to follow the goods of a tenant, who has removed them after the tenancy had expired, by the landlord having conveyed away the reversion. (Ashmore v. Hardy, 7 Car. & P. 501).

If sufficient distress left on premises, case not within act.

If there be a sufficient distress left on the premises at the time of the removal, the case is not within the act, and the goods cannot be followed, and it lies on the landlord to prove that there was not such sufficient distress. (Parrey v. Duncan, 1 M. & M. 533).

What a fraudulent removal.

The first and second sections apply to all cases where a landlord is, by the conduct of his tenant in removing goods from premises for which the rent is due, turned over to the barren right of bringing an action for his rent. Where, therefore, a tenant openly and in the face of day, and with notice to his landlord, removed his goods without leaving sufficient on the premises to satisfy the rent then due, and the landlord followed and distrained the goods, it was held, that although the removal might not be clandestine, yet as it was fraudulent, (which was a question for a jury), the landlord was justified under the act in seizing the goods. (Opperman v. Smith, 4 D. & R. 33).

The removal need not be clandestine as well as fraudulent (Ib.); and it is immaterial whether the removal took place by night or with any concealment. (Ib.; Lyster v. Powron, 1 C. & P. 121).

The mere removal of goods by the tenant from the premises when rent is in arrear is not of itself fraudulent as against the landlord; and to justify him in pursuing them he must show that they were removed with a view to elude a distress, as by showing that the tenant left none on the premises or the like. (Parry v. Duncan, 7 Bingh. 243; 5 M. & P. 19, S. C.).

5. Goods fraudulently removed.

It is not necessary to show, in proof of concealment of cattle, that they were withdrawn from sight; if they have been removed to a neighbour's field so as to cause the landlord difficulty in finding them, it is sufficient. (Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301).

Question always for a jury.

It seems that it is always a question for the jury whether the removal was fraudulent, although it be admitted by the tenant at the trial that the removal was to avoid a distress. (John v. Jenkins, 1 C. & M. 227).

Proceedings against third persons.

It has been held under the third section, as we have seen supra, that a creditor, with the assent of his debtor, may take possession of the goods of the latter, and remove them from the premises for the purpose of satisfying a bonâ fide debt, without incurring the penalty inflicted by that section, although such creditor takes possession knowing the debtor to be in distressed circumstances and under an apprehension that the landlord will distrain. (Bach v. Meats, 5 M. & Sel. 200).

Proceedings against persons assisting in removal.

To make a third party liable, it must be proved he assisted in the removal, and was also privy to the fraudulent intent. (Brooke v. Noakes, 8 B. & Cres. 537). And in that case the court seemed to be of opinion that the statute is so far penal, that it is incumbent, in an action by the landlord against a third party, for assisting the tenant in such fraudulent removal, to bring the case by strict proof within the words of the first section.

In such action against a third person, the acts and orders of a tenant are admissible evidence of his own fraud, and of knowledge on the part of the defendant, if by other evidence he is proved to have contributed to the facility of it; and circumstances of suspicion may be laid before the jury to prove such fraudulent co-operation as the legislature contemplated. (Stanley v. Wharton, 10 Price, 138; 9 Price, 301, S. C.)

Action against tenant on the third section.

In an action against the tenant himself on the third section, it is not necessary to shew an actual participation in the act if the removal was with his privity. (1 C. & P. 121; 3 D. & R. 501, S. C.)

Proceedings before justices.

Justices either of the county from which the tenants fraudulently remove goods, or of that in which they are concealed, may convict the offenders within their respective counties. (R. v. Morgan, Cald. 156).

The value of the goods being under 50*l.* does not render it compulsory on the party to have recourse to the summary remedy before two justices under the fourth section. (Stanley v. Wharton, 9 Price, 301; Horsefall v. Davy, Holt, C. N. P. 147; 1 Stark. 169, S. C.; Bromley v. Holden, 1 M. & M. 175).

The fact of the landlord's having in the first instance made his complaint under the act before a magistrate, will not prevent him from afterwards bringing an action. (Horsefall v. Davy, 1 Stark. 169; Holt, C. N. P. 147, S. C.)

Form of order.

As to orders in general, see "Orders," Vol. V. An order of magistrate under the act need not enumerate or specify the particular goods alleged to have been removed. (R. v. Rabbits, 6 D. & R. 341).

The order must show on the face of it that the party removing the goods was tenant; and that is not sufficiently shown by stating that on complaint duly made the party was charged with having fraudulently removed his goods from certain premises to prevent A. B. from distraining them for arrears of rent due to him for the said premises, and that it appearing that he did so remove, &c., he is convicted thereof. (R. v. Davis, 5 B. & Adol. 551). Semble also, that the order should state that the complainant was the party's landlord, or the bailiff, servant, or agent of such landlord. (Ib.)

Where a party is convicted of aiding and assisting the tenant in fraudulently conveying away the goods, the order must expressly allege the offence to have been committed "wilfully and knowingly." (Reg. v. Radnorshire (JJ.), 9 Dowl. 90; Ex parte Morgan, 4 Jur. 916, S. C.)

In the last case, Williams, J., doubted whether, since the case of Rex v. Hulcott, (6 T. R. 583), any intelligible distinction can be said to exist between an order and a conviction; it is therefore advisable that the order under this act should be drawn up with all the strictness of a conviction. It seems, however, that it is not necessary to set out the evidence in it. (R. v. Bissex, Sayer, 304; 29 & 30 Geo. II.; MS. (Burn), S. C. (a); and see R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 5 B. & Adol. 439).

5. Goods fraudulently removed.

(a) R. v. Bissex, T. 29 & 30 Geo. II., MS. (Burn); S. C. Sayer, 304. Order made by two justices, reciting that a complaint had been made to them in writing by A. Clavey against J. Bissex, that he the said Clavey demised his estate in the parish of Shelley, in the county of Somerset, to William Thatcher, at the yearly rent of 44*l.*, and that there was due in arrear from Thatcher to him for rent of the said estate, on the 5th day of April last, 24*l.* 15*s.* 8½*d.*; and that he the said Clavey would have distrained the goods and chattels of the said W. Thatcher upon the said estate, in order to obtain satisfaction of the said rent; but to prevent him from so doing, the said Bissex, on or about the 27th, 28th, and 29th days of August last, did knowingly and wilfully aid and assist the said Thatcher in fraudulently conveying and carrying off from the said estate his the said Thatcher's goods and chattels, and also in concealing the same, being under the value of 50*l.*; that is to say, two cows, one heifer, and ten hundred weight of cheese, of the value of 20*l.*; whereby the said Clavey was prevented from distraining the same in order to obtain satisfaction for the said rent, and contrary to the statute 11 Geo. II., and therefore praying us to grant him our warrant of summons, requiring you the said J. Bissex to appear before us, and that we would examine the fact, and thereupon make such order therein for his relief as the said statute directs and requires, and as should be agreeable to justice; whereupon we the said justices, residing near the said estate from whence the said goods and cattle were removed, and neither of us any way interested in the said estate, did issue our warrant of summons, requiring you the said J. Bissex to attend us thereon to answer the said complaint; and you having attended accordingly, and we in your presence having examined the witnesses produced by the said A. Clavey upon oath, and heard what was alleged by you in your defence, do adjudge that the said complaint is true; and that the said goods and cattle of the said W. Thatcher, which you so aided and assisted in conveying and carrying off from the said estaie, and also in concealing the same, were of the value of 20*l.*, and that you have thereby forfeited double the value of the said goods and cattle, being the sum of 40*l.*, to the said complainant, A. Clavey, by virtue of the said statute: we, therefore, in pursuance of the said statute, do adjudge, order, and require you the said J. Bissex, within the space of three days from the date hereof, to pay to the said A. Clavey the sum of 40*l.*, which if you shall neglect to do, such further proceedings will be then had against you to enforce the payment thereof as the said statute directs and requires. Given under our hands and seals this 5th day of January, 1756. This order was affirmed by the sessions upon appeal. Both the orders were removed by certiorari into the King's Bench. It was moved to quash the same. Objections taken: 1. The complaint is said to be taken in writing, but not upon oath. 2. It is only said, that he demised to W. Thatcher; but not said for what estate or term. 3. It is stated, so much was due for rent, but not said for what term; it might be due twenty years ago: it is not stated to be due when Thatcher removed his goods. 4. The words of the order are, goods and cattle; of the statute, goods and chattels. 5. No certain time is alleged when the defendant aided and assisted; only said, on or about the 26th, 27th, or 28th of August. 6. Not stated that Thatcher did carry off his goods; only that Bissex did aid and assist him in carrying them off. 7. They adjudge the complaint true, but do not state the evidence; and this is a conviction, not an order; and for any thing that appears, it might be upon Clavey's evidence alone. 8. It is not stated that the goods were under the value of 50*l.*, which is the ground of the justices' jurisdiction. 9. The words of the statute are, if any person shall be a tenant of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments: the word used in the order is estate; which may be a thing incorporeal, or may mean the interest in the land, and so not within the statute. 10. It should appear whether the landlord has a right to distrain: by stat. 8 Anne, c. 14, the landlord may distrain at any time within six months after the expiration of the term; it does not appear that these six months were not expired; and if they were, this is no offence. After consideration, Mr. J. Denison delivered the resolution of the court: "I think the most material objection is, whether this is an order or a conviction. If a conviction, the evidence ought to have been set out. And there has been no doubt, (notwithstanding the case of R. v. Purleine, 1 Salk. 369), that in a conviction the evidence must be set out, that the court may judge upon it. So it was held by Lord Hardwicke, in the case of R. v. Lloyd, (Stra. 996); and in that case it was objected that as it subjected the party to a penalty, though in the statute it was called an order, yet it should be construed as a conviction; but the court said, every act of the justices, which subjects the party to a penalty, shall not be construed as a conviction; R. v. Venables, Stra. 630; 2 Ld. Raym. 1406, S. C., upon the statute for licensing alehouses, considered as an order; R v. Blackwell, M. 4 G. II., which the court said was a strong case, and must be considered as an order. I understood from Lord Hardwicke, in the case of R. v. Lloyd, that his ground of the difference was founded upon the expression of the statute and not upon the penalty; as where the words of the statute are, 'of which he shall be convicted,' it is to be construed as a conviction. Here it is extremely strong; the statute calls it an order: and in the nature of it, it is the examination upon a complaint. If the party were never summoned, this court, upon affidavit, will grant an information against the justices; but the summons need not be set out; and the court will intend that the justices have done right, in case the contrary does not appear upon the face of the order. As to the 1st objection: this is not an information, but a complaint; when the party is summoned, the witnesses are to be examined upon oath, but the complaint need not be upon oath. In answer to the 2nd objection: as the order has followed the words of the statute, we will not intend it a case wherein the justices had not a jurisdiction. The court will not, in case of an order, intend that the justices have done wrong. As to the 3rd objection: it is sufficiently alleged in an order; his assisting the tenant to carry away the goods, as it is here alleged, is sufficient to show the rent continued then to be in arrear; and the rather, as the defendant might have availed himself of the rent paid, by proving it before the justices. I much doubt whether in a declaration it would not be sufficient to say, the rent was in arrear at such a day; and I think it would lie upon the defendant to prove that the rent does not remain in arrear. As to its not being said for what time the rent was due. this is mere matter of form. As to the 5th objection: about, in common parlance, means in this case three days, or near it. They might be three days in carrying the goods away. The days are not material even in legal proceedings. (R. v. Chandler, 1 Ld. Raym. 581). And in the case of R. v. Simpson, H. 3 Geo. II. (Stra. 46), the day and hour in a conviction are not material. By this statute no time is limited when the complaint shall be made: it may be made at any time. Suppose that the defendant had paid the penalty on a different complaint made, he might easily have shewn it. As to the 6th, the answer is obvious: if Thatcher had not carried his goods away, the defendant could not have aided in carrying them. The statute makes two offences; one, carrying the goods away, the other, aiding in carrying them away. It is only necessary here to state the offence which the defendant had been guilty of, which this order does in the words of the statute. In the case of R. v. Monk, M. 13 G. II., there was a conviction for aiding and assisting in killing a buck. It was objected, that it was not charged the buck was killed. But the court held, that as the conviction was in the words of the statute, it was sufficient. And the court held they were all principals, as well those that killed the buck as those that assisted. And this was the case of a conviction. All the other objections may have this general answer: that in case of orders, where the justices have jurisdiction, we will intend they have acted right; and if they have done wrong, they may be punished by an information. Let the orders be confirmed." (See "Order of Justices," Vol. V.).

(a) So in R. v. Middlehurst, (1 Burr. 399). Two justices made an order against one T. M. for wilfully and knowingly aiding and assisting J. C., the tenant of Sir T. F., in fraudulently removing and conveying away five cows

6. Manner of taking, &c.

Order not amendable.

The adjudication of the justices under the statute is an order and not a conviction, and cannot, therefore, like a conviction, be returned to the sessions in an amended form. (R. v. Justices of Cheshire, 5 B. & Ad. 439).

Warrant of commitment.

A warrant of commitment, under it not stating that there had been a complaint in writing to the justices, or that the examination of witnesses was upon oath, but referring to the order of the justices (for payment of double the value of the goods removed) in which those matters were stated, was held sufficient; and that the justices were not liable in trespass. (Coster v. Wilson, 3 M. & W. 411).

Constable must aid in breaking open doors.

It is absolutely requisite, in order to justify breaking open outer gates or doors, or where other force is resorted to, under the 7th section of the act, to call in the aid of a constable as therein prescribed. (Rich v. Woolley, 7 Bing. 651; 5 M. & P. 663, S. C.) But it is not necessary that a party seizing goods fraudulently removed should first call to his assistance an ordinary peace officer; it is sufficient if he be assisted by a person appointed a special constable for the occasion. (Cartwright v. Smith, 1 M. & Rob. 284).

Defence of fraudulent removal to be specially pleaded.

A defence for proceeding under the act must be pleaded specially, the statute 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 21, (post, 306), not applying to such a case. (Postman v. Harrell, 6 C. & P. 225; and see further, as to the pleadings, Bowler v. Nicholson, 12 Ad. & Ell. 341; Fletcher v. Marillier, 9 Ad. & Ell. 457; Norman v. Wescombe, 2 M. & W. 349).

VI. Manner of taking Distress, and what is a taking.

This has already been partially considered as far as respects the time and place of taking and the goods that may be taken. (Ante, 281, 282).

By bailiff, deputed by warrant.

The distress is made either by the landlord in person, or, as is more usual, by some person deputed by him by warrant. (See ante, 275).

The stat. Westm. 2, c. 37, which requires distresses to be made by brokers, sworn and known, does not extend to distresses for rent. (Child v. Chamberlain, 6 C. & P. 213; Begbie v. Hayne, 2 Scott, 193).

Breaking gates and outer doors.

Gates or inclosures may not be broken open, nor thrown down, to make a distress. (1 Inst. 161). Nor may the lessor enter into the tenant's house, unless the doors are open. (2 Bac. Abr. tit. Distress, 347; Gould v. Bradstock, 4 Taunt. 562). Upon a question about taking a distress, it was holden by the Lord Chief Justice Hardwicke, (Exeter Summ. Ass. 1736), that a padlock put on a barn door could not be opened by force, to take the corn by way of distress. (9 Vin. Abr. 128, pl. 6). But if the outer door of a house be open, one may break an inner door if necessary to take a distress. (Browning v. Dann, Cases temp. Hardw. 168; Bull. N. P. 7th edit. 81, c).

In case of rescue.

In case of a rescue it would seem that an outer door may be broken open to re-enter and regain possession, if done immediately afterwards. But where a broker's man having taken possession of property under a distress for rent, after remaining two days, left the house and other goods, or in concealing the same. Which order, on appeal to the sessions, was confirmed. It was removed to quash these orders upon two objections. 1. That it is not described sufficiently what the offence is. 2. That the charge was in the disjunctive, that he assisted the tenant in removing or concealing the goods. By Lord Mansfield, C. J. "Upon indictments it hath been determined, that an alternative charge is not good (as, forged or caused to be forged); though one only need be proved, if laid conjunctively (as, forged and caused to be forged); but I do not see the reason of it; the substance is exactly the same; the defendant must come prepared against both; and it makes no difference to him in any respect. But this is an order; and being good in substance, needs not be literally so strict. And by the court, the rule to shew cause was discharged, and consequently both orders affirmed."

in a state of great excitement, bordering on insanity. The landlord thinking that his leaving had been procured by the drugging of his liquor by the parties in the house, but which was not proved, six days after broke into the house and took away the goods, without any previous demand of admission: but it was held, that he had no right to enter again after so long a delay, and that the owner of the goods might maintain trover for them. (Russell v. Rider, 6 C. & P. 416).

In case of fraudulent removal.

Where the goods are clandestinely conveyed, it will be seen from what hath been said, that in order to make distress, gates and doors may be broken open if a constable be present. (Ante, 283; Rich v. Woolley, ante, 289; and see further as to breaking open doors, "Warrant," Vol. VI.)

What amounts to a taking

With respect to what is a good taking, if a landlord come into a house and seize upon some goods as a distress, in the name of all the goods of the house, that will be a good seizure of all. (Dod v. Monger, 6 Mod. 215).

Where a landlord's agent went upon the tenant's premises, walked round them, and gave a written notice that he had distrained certain goods lying there for an arrear of rent, and that unless the rent was paid or the goods replevied within five days, they would be appraised and sold, and then went away not leaving any person in possession; it was held, that this was a sufficient taking to give the tenant a right of action for an excessive distress, (there being one), and that quitting the premises without leaving any one in possession was not an abandonment of the distress, the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, giving the landlord power to impound or otherwise secure the goods on the premises distrained. (Swann v. Earl Falmouth, 8 B. & Cres. 456).

So where a landlord, to whom rent was in arrear, hearing his tenant and a stranger disputing about the property of an article on the premises early in the morning, entered and said, "The article shall not be removed till my rent is paid." The stranger nevertheless removed the article on the same day, after such removal the landlord sent his broker to distrain for the rent; it was held, that the distress was sufficiently commenced by the landlord to entitle him to the article in question. (Wood v. Nunn, 5 Bing. 10; 2 M. & P. 276).

A landlord's broker went to the tenant's house, and pressed for payment of rent alleged to be due, and 3*l.* 3*s.* for expenses of the levy, but touched nothing, and made no inventory. The tenant paid him the rent and expenses under protest, on which he withdrew. In an action against the landlord for an excessive distress, the defendant was not allowed to say that there had been no actual distress. (Hutchins v. Scott, 2 M. & W. 809).

But where A. entered plaintiff's house, and said that he came to make a distress, and began taking an inventory; but finding out he had made a mistake, left the house without removing any of the goods; his acts, it was considered, did not amount to making distress. (Spice v. Webb, 2 Jur. 943).

Aid of police

In making a distress for rent, circumstances may occur which may require the presence of a police officer. But to justify the landlord in calling him in, it must be shewn that his presence was rendered necessary either from threats of resistance, or the apprehension of violence, &c. (Skidmore v. Booth, 6 C. & P. 777).

VII. When a Party may distrain twice.

Distraining twice

When a man is entitled to distrain for an entire duty, he ought to distrain for the whole at once, and not for part at one time, and part at another; as in the case of Wallis v. Savill (Lutw. 1532), a second distress was held unjustifiable, because both distresses were taken for one and the same rent, and it was the lessor's folly that he had not taken a sufficient distress at first. But if he distrains for the whole, and there is not sufficient on the premises, or he happens to mistake the value of the thing distrained, and so takes an insufficient distress, he may take a second distress to complete his remedy. For if a man seize for the whole sum that is due to him, and only mistake the value of the goods seized, (which may be of very uncertain, or even imaginary value, as pictures, jewels, race-horses, and the like), there is no reason why he should not afterwards complete his execution by making a further seizure, provided it be for the same sum due. Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 589; and see Hudd v. Ravenor, 2 B. & B. 662; 5 Moore, 542, S. C.)

8. Must be reasonable, and not for more than due.

The restriction which existed on this subject at the common law was removed by stat. 17 Car. II. c. 7, which enables the lessor, or his executors or administrators, to make a second distress, in case there be not sufficient goods found on the premises at the time of the first distress, or that the party mistake the value of the things distrained, a provision which is calculated as much for the benefit of the tenant as that of his landlord; for as it was observed by Lord Mansfield, in the case of Hutchins v. Chambers, (1 Burr. 579), "if a person were not permitted to distrain a second time, in case he at first makes an insufficient distress, it might induce him to a necessity of taking effects of very great value; which, in things of an uncertain or imaginary value, he might do without being guilty of an excessive distress; and this would be far more prejudicial to the tenant, than to allow a second distress to be made." (Bradby, 130).

Thus by the statute, in all cases where the value of the cattle distrained shall not be found to be to the full value of the arrears distrained for, the party to whom such arrears were due, his executors or administrators, may distrain again for the residue of the said arrears. So in like manner, where the distress is made by virtue of the warrant of a justice of the peace, in nature of an execution. And the distinction seems to be this: where a person hath an entire duty, he shall not split the entire sum, and distrain for part of it at one time, and for part of it at another time, and so toties quoties, for several times; for that is great oppression. (Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 579).

In replevin, a plea of a former distress for the same rent, without adding that the rent was satisfied, was held bad, (Hudd v. Ravenor, 2 B. & B. 662; 5 Moore, 542, S. C.)

If a distress be relinquished at the request of the tenant, the landlord may distrain a second time. (Lear v. Edmonds, 1 B. & Ald. 159).

So he may do also if the distress die in the pound, or be otherwise destroyed by the act of God. (Vesper v. Eddowes, 1 Salk. 248; 1 Ld. Raym. 719, S. C.)

The tenant's remedy for a second unjustifiable distress is by special action on the case, or trover, or trespass.

VIII. Distress shall be reasonable, and not for more Rent than is due.

By stat. 52 Hen. III. c. 4, distresses shall be reasonable and not too great; and he that taketh great and unreasonable distresses shall be grievously amerced. For example, if the lord distrain two or three oxen for 12*d.* or the like small sum, and the owner replevy the oxen, and the lord avow the taking of them for the 12*d.* of his own showing, he shall make fine; or the party may have his action upon this statute. (2 Inst. 107). If the lord distrain an ox, or horse, for a penny, if there were no other distress upon the land, holden the distress is not excessive; but if there were a sheep, or a swine, or the like, then the taking of the ox or horse is excessive, because he might have taken a beast of less value. (2 Inst. 107).

Distress to be reasonable.

Where a landlord is about to make a distress, he is not bound to calculate very nicely the value of the property seized; but he must take care that some proportion is kept between that and the sum for which he is entitled to take it. Per Bayley, J. (Willoughby v. Backhouse, 2 B. & C. 823). Where seven guineas were in arrear, and goods were taken, valued by the plaintiff's witness at 30*l.*, but which in fact sold for only 10*l.*, it was contended that the plaintiff ought to be non-suited; but Lord Ellenborough left the case to the jury, and said, "There is a distinction between the cases where there is but one thing that can be distrained, and where there are many, and so the distress is divisible. If there is but one thing that can be taken, so that it must be taken or the party must go without his distress, for taking it no action lies, though it much exceeds the sum for which it was taken. But if there are several articles of some value, and there is much more taken than is sufficient to satisfy the rent and expenses, this action is maintainable, and express malice is not necessary to maintain the action, nor required to be proved; but it is not for every trifling excess that this action is maintainable: it must be disproportionate to some extent, and if disproportionate to an excess, the action is clearly maintainable." (Field v. Mitchell, 6 Esp. 71).

8. Must be reasonable, and not for more than due.

Action for unreasonable distress.

At common law the right of a landlord to distrain for rent service appears to be restricted to the taking of a reasonable distress, and Lord Coke intimates that the above statute 52 Hen. III. (Statute of Marlbridge) agreeth in that respect with the reason of the common law. (2 Inst. 107). But whether the duty to make a reasonable distress be created by the common law or by the statute, an action on the case will equally lie if there be a breach of that duty, and damage thereby arise to the person on whose goods the distress is made. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 447; Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 379; Lynne v. Moody, 2 Stra. 851; Woodcroft v. Thompson, 3 Lev. 48; 2 Keny. 204). He cannot sue in trespass (Id.), nor in trover, (Whitworth v. Smith, 1 M. & Rob. 193; Buldish v. Vesse, id., 331; 4 M. & Scott, 552); unless the distress was of gold or silver of certain known value. (Moor v. Munday, 1 Burr. 590). Malice need not be proved. (Field v. Mitchell, 6 Esp. 74). It is no bar to the action that the tenant tendered the rent before the distress, (Branscombe v. Bridges, 1 B. & Cres. 145); or that between the distress and sale the parties came to an arrangement respecting the sale. (Sells v. Hoare, 1 Bing. 401; 8 Moore, 451, S. C.; Willoughby v. Backhouse, 2 B. & Cres. 821).

A landlord is liable to some damages in an action for an excessive distress, where the excess consists wholly in seizing growing crops, the probable produce of which is capable of being estimated at the time of the seizure; but the measure of damage is not the value of the crops, but the inconvenience and expense which the tenant sustains in being deprived of the management of them, or which he is put to in procuring sureties to a larger amount than he would otherwise have been in replevying the crops. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 441).

The plea of not guilty by statute pleaded under stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 21, (post, 306), in an action for an excessive distress, puts in issue not only the matter of justification, but the tenancy and ownership of the goods. (Williams v. Jones, 11 Ad. & E. 643).

Indictment for.

A man is not liable to a criminal prosecution for taking an excessive distress. (R. v. Ledgingham, 1 Vent. 104; 1 Mod. 200, S. C).

Action for distraining for more rent than is due.

The landlord will be liable to an action on the case if he distrains for more rent than is in arrear. This action is at common law, and is not founded on the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 19, (post, 306). That section applies only where the distress is lawful in its inception, but some irregularity is committed in conducting it which would have rendered the party a trespasser by relation at common law. Where a landlord distrains for more than is due for rent, an action on the case lies at the suit of the tenant, though the goods distrained are of less value than the rent really due, and it is no defence that after distress and notice thereof and before the sale the landlord served a second notice on the tenant, stating the amount really due, and that the distress was taken for that amount only, and would be sold unless that amount was paid. (Taylor v. Henniker, 12 Ad. & Ell. 488; and see Crowder v. Self, 2 M. & Rob. 190).

9. How proceeded with till Sale.

To a declaration for distraining for more rent than was due, defendant pleaded, that the whole sum distrained for was due and in arrear, concluding to the country, on which plaintiff joined issue:—On this issue it was held that defendant was not precluded from insisting on certain arrears, by the fact that, since they became due other arrears had become due, and had been distrained for. And this, although, on the first distress, the warrant and notice stated the distress to be for rent due up to a day named, being subsequent to those on which the arrears in question accrued: and although, on the second distress, the defendant stated, that it was for rent due since the last distress. (Gambrell v. Earl Falmouth, 4 Ad. & Ell. 73).

IX. Distress when taken, how to be proceeded with till Sale.

Inventory.

After having taken the distress, the party distraining proceeds to take an inventory of the goods and chattels he may deem sufficient to cover the amount of the rent distrained for, and the costs and charges of the distress and sale. Though usual and advisable, there does not seem to be absolute necessity to make out this inventory. If one be made out, and the landlord or broker remove or sell any goods not included in it, and without giving any notice of his removing those goods under the distress, he would be liable in action of trover. (See Sims v. Tuffs, 6 C. & P. 207; Bishop v. Bryant, id, 484).

Notice of distress.

After or before this inventory is made, it is necessary, in order to proceed to a sale of the distress, to give the tenant or owner of the goods distrained on, notice of the distress, with the cause of the taking, the amount of the rent distrained for, and informing the party that unless the rent and costs be paid in five days the same will be sold. This is required by the statute 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, which also directs that it should be left at the chief mansion-house or other most notorious place on the premises charged with the rent distrained for. The notice should, it seems, be in writing. (See Walter v. Rumbal, 12 Mod. 76; 1 Ld. Raym. 53; 1 Salk. 247, S. C.). In the notice it is not necessary to mention when the rent became due for which the distress was made, (Moss v. Gallimore, Dougl. 279); and if mentioned, a mistake therein is immaterial. Id.; Crowther v. Ramsbottom, 7 T. R. 654; see Lucas v. Nockells, 4 Bingh. 729; 1 M. & P. 783; 10 Bingh. 157; 3 M. & Sc. 650; Governors of Bristol Poor v. Wait, 1 Ad. & Ell. 281; Butler and Baker's case, 3 Rep. 26 a).

A personal service on the owner of the goods will dispense with the necessity of leaving such notice at the dwelling-house, as directed by the act. (Walter v. Rumbal, 1 Ld. Raym. 53; 1 Salk. 247, S. C.)

The party distraining next proceeds to impound the goods taken.

Impounding distress.

As regards what amounts to an impounding, in a recent case where the agent of the landlord went into a field on the farm where the tenant's cattle were feeding, and, placing his hand upon one of the beasts, said he distrained the whole for the rent due, counted them, and took a note of the particulars, and then went away; on the following morning he left with the tenant a notice, stating that he had distrained the cattle thereunder mentioned, and had impounded them on the premises; it was held, that this constituted an impounding, and that a subsequent tender of the rent, and costs of distress, was too late. (Maule, J., dissentiente). (Thomas v. Harries, 1 Scott, N. R. 524).

Where to be impounded.

By the common law a distress might in general be impounded, in a proper pound, where the party pleased. (2 Inst. 106).

9. How proceeded with till Sale.

Cattle may be impounded in a pound overt(a) or public pound, or on the premises, where the owner may give them meat and drink without trespass to any other. But if they are put in pound covert, as in a house or private pound, the distrainer must keep them with meat and drink at his peril, and for which he shall have no satisfaction. (1 Inst. 47).

If the distress be of utensils of household, or such like dead goods, which may take harm by wet or weather, or be stolen away, there the distrainer must impound them in a house, or other pound covert, within three miles in the said county; for if he impound them in a pound overt he must answer for them. (1 Inst. 47).

Pound must be in a fit state.

Distrainers are bound to see that the pound to which they take the distress is in a fit state to receive it; and therefore, if the pound be wet and muddy, the distrainers are liable for any damage thereby caused to the distress, and it is no defence that the place was the manor pound, and was generally in a proper state. (Wilder v. Speer, 8 Ad. & Ell. 547).

Impounding on premises.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, any person distraining for rent may impound or otherwise secure the distress, of what kind soever it be, in such place, or on such part of the premises chargeable with the rent, as shall be most convenient; and may appraise and sell the same upon the premises, as any person before might have done off the premises, by virtue of statutes 2 W. & M. c. 5, and 4 Geo. II. c. 28.

In Washborn v. Black (11 East, 405), the law was admitted to be that without consent the distrainer ought either to have put the goods all into one room and kept possession of that only, or to have removed the goods out of the house; but very slight evidence of consent was admitted. (See Swann v. Lord Falmouth, 8 B. & Cress. 456.)

A tenant being in arrear for rent of a cottage, his landlord distrained the goods there, and locked up the cottage, and, after selling the goods, kept possession, the tenant saying he would "have done with it:" in an action by the tenant for an expulsion, the landlord was held to be justified in impounding the distress on the premises, and in locking up the cottage to secure the distress, but that he could not avail himself of the tenant's license to take possession, unless he specially pleaded it. (Cox v. Painter, 7 Car. & P. 767).

Impounding out of the county.

By the 52 Hen. III. c. 4, none shall cause any distress that he hath taken to be driven out of the county where it was taken; and if one neighbour do so to another of his own authority, (as for damage feasant, or rent-charge (2 Inst. 206),) he shall make fine as for a thing done against the peace; and if the lord so presume to do against the tenant, he shall be grievously punished by amerciament.

Before this act, at the common law, a man might have driven the distress to what county he pleased; which was mischievous for two causes: 1. Because the tenant was bound to give the beasts being impounded in an open pound sustenance, and being carried into another county by common intendment he could have no knowledge where they were. 2. He could not know where to have a replevy; but the party was, before this statute, driven to his action upon the case. (2 Inst. 106).

And albeit this statute be in the negative, yet if the tenancy be in one county, and the manor in another county, the lord may drive the distress which he taketh in the tenancy to his manor in the other county; for the tenant is out of both the said mischiefs; for the tenant, by doing suit and service to the manor by common intendment, may know what is done there, and therefore may give his beast sustenance. And to know where to have his replevy, the bailiff of the manor usually drives the cattle distrained to the pound of the manor. And hereby it is to be noted, that a case out of the mischief is out of the meaning of the law, though it be within the latter. (2 Inst. 106; Gilb. 223).

(a) By pound overt is meant an open pound, as a public penfold made for that purpose, or an open field where the owner may go to his goods at pleasure without trespass. And by pound covert is meant a place covered, or close, as a house, or place where the goods are locked up or secured, where he cannot go to them at his pleasure.

9. How proceeded with till Sale.

And by the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 1, it is further enacted, that no distress of cattle shall be driven out of the hundred, rape, wapentake, or lathe, where such distress shall be taken, except it be to a pound overt within the same shire, not above three miles distant from the place where the said distress was taken; and no cattle nor other goods distrained for any cause at one time shall be impounded in several places, whereby the owner may be constrained to sue several replevies; on pain of 100*s.* to the party grieved, and treble damages.

Impounding out of the hundred, &c.

In several places.

In Gimbart v. Pelah (2 Stra. 1272), the defendant justified impounding cattle damage feasant. It appeared that the impounding was in another county. And Lee, C. J. held, it did not make him a trespasser, though it subjected him to the penalty of stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12; and the action should have been on the statute.

By the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 9, corn or hay, loose, &c. shall not be removed &c. from the place where seized, but kept there till replevied or sold. (See Com. Dig. Distress (D. 1), post, 303).

Corn or hay not removable.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8 (post, 303), growing corn crops and product seized for rent, when ripe and cut, are to be impounded on the premises demised; and in case there be no proper place to impound them on the premises, then they are to be impounded in another place "as near as may be to the premises." (See Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.; Wright v. Dewes, 1 Ad. & Ell. 641; Swann v. Lord Falmouth, 8 B. & Crcs. 456).

Growing corn, &c.

Cattle distrained may not be worked or used. And the principle has been carried so far, that it seems to be the better opinion, that even milch kine cannot be milked by the distrainer, in order to prevent them from being damaged; because the owner would perhaps have come to milk his cattle before they had sustained any material injury, and it is not necessary for the security of the distrainer, who, if the cattle die without his default, may make another distress. (Bradby, 241, and the authorities there cited).

Using the goods distrained.

So if the distress be lost by the act of God, as if the distress die in the pound, without any default in the distrainer, in such case he who made the distress may distrain again. (Vasper v. Eddows, 1 Salk. 248; 1 Ld. Raym. 719, S. C.).

Distress dying

It is the distrainer's own fault, if he put the distress in a pound which will not hold it; but he cannot justify the tying of cattle in the pound; and if he tie a beast, and it is strangled, he must pay damages. (S. C.).

Killed.

By the recent act of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 59, ss. 4, 5, & 6, parties impounding cattle are bound under a penalty to provide sufficient food for them; but the act gives a remedy for the recovery of the expense of the food by sale of the cattle, whether the impounding be in a pound overt or covert, and in this respect alters the common law.

Cattle impounded to be provided with sufficient food.

The statute however affords no remedy for the recovery of the amount of the damage for which the cattle were distrained, the distrainer can only get the single value of the food, and not the amount of the damage, as all the overplus beyond the value of the food and the expenses of the sale, is to be returned to the owner of the cattle.

The 5th section does not give any person a right to any payment; it merely allows charitable persons to supply food to impounded cattle, without being liable to an action for doing so. (Mason v. Newland, 9 C. & P. 575; and see the enactment, title "Cattle and Animals," Vol. I.)

By the common law it seems the goods when distrained on for rent ought to have been removed off the premises immediately, or at all events in a reasonable time after the taking. (Mod. Ca. 215). But now by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10 (ante, 294), they need not be so.

Time of removal off the premises

By operation of that act, and the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the removal ought to take place a reasonable time after the expiration of five days from the time of the taking, exclusive of the day of taking. (Griffin v. Scott, 2 Ld. Raym. 1424; 2 Stra. 717, S. C.; Pitt v. Shew, (4 B. & Ald. 208; Wallace v. King, 1 H. Bla. 15). In Griffin v. Scott (2 Ld. Raym. 1424), it was considered three days after the fifth day was an unreasonable time; but in Pitt v. Shew (4 B & Ald. 208), eight days after was considered reasonable: this reasonable time however being a question for a jury, no fixed rule can be laid down, each case depending on its own peculiar facts.

By consent, which is not unusual, the party distraining may keep in possession on the premises after the expiration of the time allowed for that purpose; otherwise he would become a trespasser. (Winterbourne v. Morgan, 11 East, 395). Slight evidence of such consent will suffice. (Washborn v. Black, 11 East, 405, n. a). The request of the tenant will not, it seems, justify the landlord in detaining the goods of a lodger upon the premises beyond the proper time of selling. (See Fisher v. Algar, 2 C. & P. 374). By the request not to remove, the tenant or owner of the goods does not waive any right of action he may have. (Sells v. Hoare, 1 Bing. 431; 8 Moore, 451, S. C.; Willoughby v. Backhouse, 2 B. & C. 821).

Notice of removal.

Generally speaking there does not appear to be any notice of removal requisite; where, however, the distress is on growing corn, hay, or product, as allowed by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8 (ante, 278); the tenant must, in pursuance of the 9th section (post, 303) of that act, have notice of the place where the corn &c. is lodged given within a week after such lodging.

Appraisement, and how conducted.

It is necessary before selling that "the person distraining" shall, with the sheriff or undersheriff of the county, or with the constable of the hundred, parish, or place where such distress shall be taken, (who are required to be aiding or assisting therein), cause the goods distrained to be appraised by two sworn appraisers, (whom such sheriff, undersheriff, or constable, is empowered to swear,) who are to appraise the same truly according to the best of their understandings. (2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, post, 301).

The true construction of this statute, in requiring an appraisement, is, that the value of the goods might be ascertained by a fair estimate made at the time of the distress; and that, if on such valuation there should not be thought sufficient without them, the landlord might distrain beasts of the plough. Where, therefore, there had been such an appraisement on oath, and no evidence was offered to show that there was a sufficient distress without taking the beasts of the plough, the Court of Exchequer held, that it was not necessary that the other goods should all have been first disposed of before the latter were sold; unless they were wrongfully taken in the first instance, such sale was not a sufficient ground to support an action on stat. 51 Hen. III. stat. 4. (Jenner v. Yolland, 6 Price, 3; 2 Chit. Rep. 167, S. C.).

The enactment provision applies to all cases, and though the rent distrained for does not exceed 20*l.* (Allen v. Flicker, 10 Ad. & Ell. 640).

The person distraining must not be one of the appraisers, (B. N. P. 81; Westwood v. Cowne, 1 Stark. 172; Lyon v. Weldon, 2 Bing. 337; 9 Moore, 629, S. C.), unless indeed the tenant consent thereto, (Bishop v. Bryant, 6 C. & P. 484); and he may, it seems, in any case waive the necessity for an appraisement.

The appraisers must not be sworn before the constable of another parish. (Avenell v. Croker, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 172; Wallace v. King, 1 H. Bla. 13). But where the premises partly lay in the hundred of Andover, and partly in the hundred of Kinalsey, the constable of Kinalsey was held the proper officer to administer the oath for the appraisement of the whole distress. (Walter v. Rumbal, 1 Ld. Raym. 53).

They must be sworn before the appraisement. (Kenny v. May, 2 M. & Malk. 56).

10. Replevying the Distress.

The constable must be present at the appraisement. (Id.).

The appraisement must be stamped. (See 1 Moore, 241; Har. L. & T. 369; 55 Geo. III. c. 184).

Growing crops and the other things distrainable under 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 8 (ante, 278, and post, 303), cannot be appraised until after they are ripe, cut, gathered, cured, and made. (Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 78, S. C.)

X. Replevying the Distress (a).

When to be adopted.

If the owner of the goods distrained on wishes to try the right of distress, and have his goods delivered back to him again, his course is to replevy them.

He could not try such right by paying under protest the sum distrained for, and then bringing an action for money had and received, (see Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414; Knibbs v. Hall, 1 Esp. 84); unless, indeed, the distress was for more rent than was due, in which case such action for money had and received might lie for the excess. (Ashmole v. Wainwright, 2 Gale & D. 217).

If the owner of the goods does not care about getting them back again, or does not replevy, then if no part of the rent distrained for was due, he may try the right of distress by an action of trespass or trover; or if the goods were sold, by action on the case under the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 5.

If ever so small a sum of the rent distrained for was due at the time of the distress, or the distress was excessive or otherwise irregular, the remedy for it is not by replevin, but by action on the case, and sometimes trespass. (See 1 Chit. Pl. 164; Whitworth v. Smith, 5 C. & P. 250, post, 307).

Time of replevy.

The replevy may be made at any time before the goods are actually sold. (Jacob v. King, 1 Marsh. 135; 5 Taunt. 457, S. C.)

Who to grant replevin.

As to the party to grant the replevin by stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 3, the sheriff of every county shall, at his first county day, or in two months after he hath received the patent of office, appoint and proclaim in the shire town four deputies at the least, dwelling not above twelve miles one distant from another, to make replevies; on pain of 5*l.* for every month that he shall lack such deputy or deputies, half to the king and half to him that shall sue in any court of record.

One of the sheriffs of London has power to grant replevin without his companion, (Thompson v. Farden, 1 Man. & G. 535; 1 Scott, N. R. 215).

Where the distress is made within a franchise, the lord of which has cognizance of plaints on replevin, the replevin must be granted by the lord. Thus where an action on the case was brought for distraining plaintiff's cattle on a farm, for rent due to D. for the farm, and selling them after a replevin was granted by the sheriff, and paying the proceeds to D., it was held a good plea that, from time immemorial, the farm has been parcel of the manor of F., and F. parcel of the honour and lordship of C., of which E. is the lord; and that from time immemorial E., and all whose estate &c., have had cognizance of pleas and plaints in replevin, in the courts of the manor, to be holden from three weeks to three weeks, by plaints, to be there instituted; and have re-plevied and granted deliverance of cattle, &c., as the sheriff might, in his county, before the statute of Marlbridge; and that no sheriff, &c., might enter the honour except in default of the bailiff: that such court baron of the lord of the manor of F. had been, from time immemorial, holden from three weeks to three weeks; that E. made no default in replevying or granting deliverance of the cattle; that the sheriff, before he replevied, did not require E. to replevy or grant deliverance; and that none but the sheriff replevied or granted deliverance, and the plea is good, although it does not allege that the cattle were impounded within the franchise. (Mounsey v. Dawson, 6 Ad. & El. 752).

Under the statute of Marlbridge, 52 H. 3, c. 21, the declaration ought to allege notice to the lord of the franchise, or to his officer, and default made by the lord or officer in delivering the cattle; and, semble, that this should be an actual default, and not merely a delay arising from the ordinary course of proceeding in the lord's court. (Id.)

Surety to be taken on replevin.

The sheriff or other officer having authority to grant replevins (b), shall, in every replevin of distress for rent, take in his own name from the plaintiff and two sureties, a bond in double the value of the goods distrained, to be ascertained on the oath of one witness not interested in the goods, and conditioned for prosecuting the suit with effect, and without delay, and for duly returning the goods distrained, in case a return shall be awarded, before any deliverance be made of the distress; and the sheriff shall assign such bond to the avowant, or person making conusance. (11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 23) (c).

The bond may be taken and assigned by any officer who has power to grant replevin. (Thompson v. Farden, supra.)

What cases within the act.

A rent charge is within the statute. (Short v. Hubbard, 2 Bing. 349; 9 Moore, 667; 10 Moore, 107, S. P. overruling Bulpit v. Clarke, 1 New R. 57).

Form of bond, &c.

Although the statute directs the bond to be taken with two sureties, yet a bond by one surety only has been holden good (d). (Austen v. Howard, 7 Taunt. 28, 327). And at all events he is not bound to take more than one pledge on a replevin for distraining cattle damage feasant. (Huckes v. Gordon, 1 C. & M. 58).

The words "then and there" usually inserted in the conditions of replevin bonds are not strictly proper. (Jackson v. Hanson, 8 M. & W. 477). It is apprehended, however, that the insertion of them does not invalidate the bond.

(b) A party obtaining a replevy of goods under a false authority would be guilty of a rescous. Trevannion's case, 11 Mod. 32.

(c) Avowry is where one takes a distress, and the person distrained sues a replevin; then he that took the distress must avow and justify in his plea, for what cause he took it, if he took it in his own right; and this is called an avowry; if he took it in the right of another, then when he hath showed the cause, he must make conusance of the taking, as bailiff or servant to him in whose right he took it. Termes de la Ley.

(d) In Richards v. Acton, a rule was made on the replevin clerk, the under-sheriff, and the clerk of the county court, to discover the names of the pledges taken upon granting the replevin in this cause, and to show cause why they should not pay the defendant 57*l.* 15*s.*, being the damages and costs recovered by him in this cause, together with the costs of the application. The distress was for rent; and on replevin brought the defendant had a verdict with the damages and costs above mentioned. On cause being shown, the court held that as well the high-sheriff and under-sheriff as the replevin clerk (who is their deputy) are answerable to the defendant in replevin for the sufficiency of the pledges; they therefore discharged the rule against the county court clerk, but with regard to the high and under sheriff, and the replevin clerk, they made the rule absolute. Richards v. Acton, 2 Bla. Rep. 1220.

10. Replevying the Distress.

Where a replevin bond was taken in a penalty greater than the amount of goods distrained, and with a clause in the condition to indemnify the sheriff for granting the replevin; and it appeared that the bond had been executed in September, and assigned in February, but no application to set it aside was made till Easter Term:—The court refused to set it aside on those grounds, but intimated that it was objectionable that the bond should be taken in such an amount; and that the frequent practice so to do, and the delay, were the only causes for not interfering to set it aside. (Miers v. Lockwood, 9 Dowl. 975).

Sheriff after bond taken, to make deliverance.

The sheriff having taken bond from the plaintiff in replevin as aforesaid, he ought forthwith to make deliverance of the goods or cattle distrained; and if the distress be drawn into a house or other stronghold, the sheriff or his bailiff, after demand made for deliverance of the distress, may break open the house to replevy them; for though a man's house is privileged by common law for himself, his family, and his own goods, so that the sheriff cannot break it open to attach any of them, in a civil action at the suit of a private person, yet a man's house could not privilege or protect the goods of another person unjustly taken, so as to prevent the officer to make replevin; because the privilege and security of a man's house could but protect his own goods. (2 Inst. 140).

Neglect of sheriff to take security.

If the sheriff deliver up the goods to the party replevying the same without the security required by the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, he is not liable to an attachment, but the landlord or defendant in replevin, if damnified, may have his remedy against him by action on the case. (R. v. Lewis, 2 T. R. 617).

Liability of sheriff for taking insufficient sureties, &c.

So the sheriff, under-sheriff, and replevin clerk are all responsible to the landlord for the sufficiency of the sureties in the replevin bond, as also for the sufficiency of the pledges, under the stat. Westm. 2, c. 2; and an action on the case may be maintained against him if they or either be not sufficient sureties. (See B. P. N. 60). But the sheriff is not liable if the sureties were to all appearances, and after his using reasonable diligence and inquiry, sufficient at the time, though it turn out afterwards otherwise. (Hindle v. Blades, 5 Taunt. 225; 1 Marsh. 27, S. C.; Scott v. Waithman, 3 Stark. 168). If a person known to the sheriff make inquiries as to the credit or reputation of a tradesman and the value of his stock, and communicate the result of such inquiry to the sheriff, if it be favourable, the latter need not make a personal inquiry. (Sutton v. Waite, 8 Moore, 28). In taking sureties the sheriff is to exercise a reasonable discretion in deciding upon their sufficiency; and, in an action for taking insufficient sureties, it is for the jury to decide whether he has used such discretion or not. The sheriff or replevin clerk is not bound to go out of his office to make inquiries: but, if the sureties are unknown to him, he ought to require information, beyond their own statement, as to their sufficiency. Where persons of respectable appearance are brought to the replevin clerk as sureties, by the attorney's clerk on behalf of the party replevying, their circumstances being known both to the attorney's clerk and to the replevin clerk, and the latter causes the sureties to make affidavit in detail as to their sufficiency, with which he is satisfied, and an action is afterwards brought against the sheriff for taking insufficient sureties, the jury may properly find that the inquiry made does not excuse the sheriff. (Jeffery v. Bastard, 4 Ad. & Ell. 823). The sheriff is it seems liable, if one of the sureties was insufficient. (Scott v. Waithman, 3 Stark. 168). In such action the penalty of the bond is the limit of damages. (Jeffery v. Bastard, 4 Ad. & Ell. 823; Yea v. Lethbridge, 4 T. R. 433; Evans v. Brander, 2 Bing. 250; 2 H. Blac. 547). If notice were previously given to the sheriff, it seems the costs of an ineffectual action against the sureties might be recovered. (See Baker v. Garratt, 3 Bing. 56).

10. Replevying the Distress.

Assignment of bond.

The sheriff is directed by the above statute to assign the bond to the avowant or person making conusance, (see Dias v. Freeman, 5 T. R. 195 ; Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 36 ; 1 B. & P. 378), in the same manner as a bail bond is assigned, and the party afterwards may bring an action on the bond if forfeited in his own name ; and the court may by rule give such relief to the parties as may be agreeable to justice and reason. Where a replevin bond has been assigned, the assignee is not obliged to sue in the court into which the plaint has been removed by re. fa. lo. (Nelson v. Hartley, 7 Dowl. P. C. 461). Where one of the sureties was a material witness for the plaintiff, the court of Common Pleas allowed another to be substituted for him. (Bailey v. Bailey, 1 Bing. 92). Taking an assignment of the replevin bond is not a waiver of the remedy against the sheriff, if the bond be not in compliance with the act, or the sureties were insufficient. (See 1 Saund. 195, e ; Baker v. Garratt, 3 Bing. 56 ; 10 Moore, 324, S. C.)

Liability of sureties, and actions on the bond

The condition in a replevin bond, for prosecuting the suit with effect, means the prosecuting it to a not unsuccessful termination. In a declaration in an action on a replevin bond, the breach assigned was, that the defendant did not appear at the next county court, and then and there prosecute his suit with effect. Held, that the breach was not well assigned, it being consistent therewith that the suit might have been begun at the next county court, and be still pending. (Jackson v. Hanson, 8 M. & W. 477).

When a sheriff's bond had been assigned to the plaintiff above, and he declared against the defendant above, for not appearing and prosecuting his suit with effect, and the plaintiff above had appeared in the county court, according to the sheriff's summons, and the defendant above pleaded, that the plaintiff above had entered an appearance to the plaint of the defendant according to the practice of the said court, and that the cause was then pending:—It was held, that this plea was bad on special demurrer, because neither the declaration nor the bond made mention of delay of proceeding, on which only the defendant had taken issue; and because, if the plea were meant as an excuse for not appearing, it ought to have set out the practice of the particular county court, and whereby he was excused. (Rider v. Edwards, 3 Scott, N. R. 456).

It is no breach of a replevin bond conditioned to appear at the next county court, and "then and there to prosecute the suit with effect, that the plaint has been removed by re. fa. lo., and that after the removal the suit abated by the death of the plaintiff in replevin. (Morris v. Matthews, 1 G. & D. 677). Where more is levied under a replevin bond than the assignee of the sheriff is entitled to, the court will not grant a rule to make the assignee refund, though the overplus is alleged to be due to a second execution creditor of the same defendant. (Bowser v. Lloyd, 9 Dowl. 1029). Where an action was brought against the pledges before the bond was forfeited the court refused to set aside the proceedings, saying that the matter might be pleaded as a defence to the action. (Anon., 5 Taunt. 776).

Staying proceedings.

The terms on which the court will stay proceedings on a replevin bond, at the instance of the sureties, are the payment of the appraised value of the goods, if that is less than the amount of rent due, the double costs, and the costs of application. (Miers v. Lockwood, 9 Dowl. 976).

An action on replevin bond was stayed, on the application of the sureties, upon their paying into court the value of the goods distrained, together with the costs ; such value to be ascertained by the prothonotary. (Gingell v. Turnbull, 3 Bing. N. C. 881 ; 5 Scott, 153).

XI. Sale of the Distress and Costs.

When impounded, the goods were formerly only in the nature of a pledge or security to compel the performance of satisfaction; and upon this account it hath been held, that the distrainer is not at liberty to work or use a distrained beast. And thus the law still continues with regard to beasts taken damage feasant, and distresses for suit or services, which must remain impounded till the owner make satisfaction, or contests the right of distraining, by replevying the chattels. (3 Bla. Com. 13).

Distress in nature of a pledge.

Distress taken for an offence presented in the leet may of common right be sold, because it is a court of record; but otherwise it is of distresses in courts that are not of record. (Rex v. Speed, 12 Mod. 330).

Sale of distress for offence presented in leet.

A distress for an amercement in a court-baron cannot be sold; but in such a case a distress infinite shall go. (1 Bulst. 52, 53).

For amercement in court-baron.

In like manner, before stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, distress for rent in arrear could not be sold, but only detained till payment of the rent: but the said statute, sect. 1, reciting that "the most ordinary and ready way for recovery of arrears of rent is by distress, yet such distresses not being to be sold, but only detained as pledges for enforcing the payment of such rent, the persons distraining have little benefit thereby;" therefore enacts that "where any goods or chattels shall be distrained (a) for any rent reserved and due upon any demise, lease, or contract whatsoever, and the tenant or owner of the goods so distrained shall not, within five days next after such distress taken, and notice thereof (with cause of such taking) left at the chief mansion-house, or other most notorious place on the premises charged with the rent distrained for, replevy the same, with sufficient security to be given to the sheriff according to law, that then in such case, after such distress and notice as aforesaid, and expiration of the said five days, the person distraining shall and may, with the sheriff or under-sheriff of the county, or with the constable of the hundred, parish, or place where such distress shall be taken (who are hereby required to be aiding and assisting therein), cause the goods and chattels so distrained to be appraised by two sworn appraisers (whom such sheriff, under-sheriff, or constable are hereby empowered to swear), to appraise the same truly, according to the best of their understandings; and after such appraisement shall and may lawfully sell the goods and chattels so distrained for the best price that can be gotten for the same, towards the satisfaction of the rent for which the said goods and chattels shall be distrained, and of the charges of such distress, appraisement, and sale, leaving the overplus (if any) in the hands of the said sheriff, under-sheriff, or constable, for the owner's use."

Sale of goods distrained for rent.

2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5.

After complying with the requisites pointed out by this statute, the landlord may proceed to a sale. But if the distress taken was a subject distrainable at common law he is not obliged to proceed to such a sale, but he may as at common law retain such distress for an unlimited period as a pledge. (Hudd v. Ravenor, 2 B. & B. 662; 5 Moore, 542, S. C.; Lear v. Edmonds, 1 B. & Ald. 159).

Sale of things distrainable at common law not compulsory.

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, (ante, 294), the sale may take place on the premises, or it may elsewhere.

Place of sale.

The sale must not take place within the five days, otherwise an action might be maintained, on the equity of the 2 W. & M., against the parties selling. (Wallace v. King, 1 H. Blac. 13; Pitt v. Shew, 4 B. & Ald. 208). The five days are to be reckoned exclusive of the first; (Pitt v. Shew, 4 B. & Ald. 208; Wallace v. King, 1 H. Blac. 13; Harper v. Taswell, 6 C. & P. 166); therefore the sale must not take place until the sixth day, inclusive of the day of taking; and five times twenty-four hours must have elapsed from the time of the original seizure.

Time of sale.

(a) See "Forms," post, No. 1 to 6.

11. Sale of the Distress and Costs.

Remaining on premises after five days.

A reasonable time after the expiration of the five days is allowed to the landlord to remain on the premises for appraising and selling the goods distrained, for he cannot appraise or sell until after the five days have elapsed, and the act directs he shall sell for the best price; the making the appraisement, and notifying the intended sale and selling for the best price, must take some time after the expiration of the five days, and it is for a jury to say, in each case, whether more than reasonable time has been taken. (Pitt v. Shew, 4 B. & Ald. 208). By the consent of the tenant the landlord will be justified in remaining on the premises beyond the time otherwise allowable. If the goods remain on the premises for an unreasonable time without the tenant's consent, the distrainer, after the expiration of that time, becomes a trespasser. (Griffin v. Scott, 2 Stra. 717; 2 Ld. Raym. 1424; Winterbourne v. Morgan, 10 East, 395).

Sale by auction.

The sale need not be by auction.

Price of sale.

Upon the equity of the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the distrainer must sell for the best price that can be obtained for the goods, and an action lies if he do not. The price at which the goods were appraised will be presumed to be the best until the contrary is proved. (Walter v. Rumbal, 4 Mod. 380; Com. Dig. Distress (D. 8).)

Order of sale.

It appears that there is no order required by law to be observed in the sale of the goods, as that the beasts of the plough shall be postponed to the other goods; and therefore it is not a cause of action that the beasts of the plough have been sold before the other goods were disposed of, where the distress itself was not wrongful. (Jenner v. Yolland, 6 Price, 5; 2 Chit. Rep. 167, S. C.)

Sheriff or constable need not be present at.

It is not necessary that the sheriff or constable should be present at the sale, but the appraisers being regularly sworn, may with the distrainer proceed to sell. (Walter v. Rumbal, 4 Mod. 321; Com. Dig. Distress (D. 8).)

Sale of corn or hay cut.

At common law such things only can be distrained as may be restored to the owner in the same plight as they were in at the time of taking them, and for this reason sheaves and shocks of corn were not distrainable.

But by stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 3, persons having rent arrear on any demise, lease, or contract, may seize and secure any sheaves or cocks of corn, or corn loose or in the straw, or hay, being in any barn or granary, or upon any hovel, stack, or rick, or otherwise upon any part of the land charged with the rent, and may lock up or detain the same in the place where found, in the nature of a distress, so as the same be not removed to the damage of the owner out of the place where found and seized, but be kept there (as impounded) till replevied or sold. This provision extends to corn in whatever state it may be, whether thrashed or not. (Lutw. 214).

This section, as before noticed, (ante, 279), has introduced a new distrainable subject, which is not to be treated in the same way as those subjects which were distrainable at common law. The things distrainable under this section are to be locked up or detained in the place where found as in the nature of a distress until replevied, and in no default of replevying must, it should seem, be sold in five days, and cannot be removed, so that this species of subject of distress differs from that at common law, in respect of its being legally both incapable of removal, and also of being kept for an indefinite period till payment of the rent. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 448).

11. Sale of the Distress and Costs.

Sale of growing crops, &c.

By stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 8, the landlord or his steward, or other person empowered by him, may take and seize any cattle or stock feeding on any common appendant or appurtenant, or belonging to the premises, corn, grass, hops, roots, fruits, pulse, or other product growing on the estate, as a distress for rent; and the same may cut, gather, make, cure, carry, and lay up when ripe in the barns or other proper place on the premises; and if there shall be no barn or proper place on the premises demised, then in any other barn or proper place which he shall procure as near as may be to the premises; the appraisement whereof shall be taken when cut, gathered, cured, and made, and not before.

Sect. 9. And notice of the place where the goods so distrained shall be lodged, shall in one week after the lodging thereof be given to the tenant, or left at the last place of his abode. And if the tenant shall pay or tender to the landlord, or his steward or receiver of rents, the whole of the arrears of rent and incidental expenses, after such distress has been taken, and at any time before it shall be ripe, and cut, cured, or gathered, the distress shall be thereupon delivered up to the tenant.

This statute, like 2 W. & M. c. 5, s. 3, has introduced a new subject of distress which was not distrainable at common law, and which must therefore be dealt with in strict accordance with the statute. The growing crops and other things distrained under this statute cannot be removed off the demised premises, except sub modo, that is in default of there being a proper place for lodging them on the premises. The landlord is not empowered to appraise and sell the growing crops &c. until after they are ripe, cut, gathered, cured, and made. (Percevell v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.) And consequently a tenant, whose standing corn and growing crops have been seized as a distress for rent before they were ripe, cannot maintain an action upon the case under 2 W. & M. c. 5, s. 28, against the landlord or his bailiff for selling the same before five days, or a reasonable time have elapsed after the seizure, such sale being wholly void. (Owen v. Legh, 3 B. & Ald. 470). But in such a case the owner could only recover the amount of the damage actually sustained, the case being within the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 19. Therefore where a landlord seized growing crops, and sold them before they were cut for the full value which they would have fetched if sold at the proper time, and the rent due exceeded the amount for which the crops were sold, it was held, that in an action of trover by the tenant, he was entitled to nominal damages only. (Proudlove v. Twemlow, 1 C. & M. 326; and see Notts v. Curtis, 2 C. & J. 364, n.; Biggins v. Goode, ib.)

A notice must also, as required by the act, be given of the place where the crops &c. distrained shall be lodged within one week after the lodging thereof, and as soon as these different provisions have been complied with, the distress must, as it seems, be then sold. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 449).

Costs of distress.

Costs of Distress.]—By the words of the 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, the distrainer for rent may deduct from the amount of the produce of the goods on sale, besides the rent, all reasonable charges attending the distress.

The man in possession of the goods, where the rent does not exceed 20*l.*, is in general to be paid 2*s.* 6*d.* per day, if the tenant keeps him, and 3*s.* 6*d.* if he keeps himself.

Poundage.

By the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 12, s. 2, "no person or persons shall take for keeping in pound, impounding, or poundage of any manner of distress, above the sum of 4*d.* for any one whole distress that shall be so impounded; and where less hath been used, there to take less; upon the pain of 5*l.*, to be paid to the party grieved, over and beside such money as he shall take above the sum of 4*d.*; any usage or prescription to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

This enactment does not extend to cases where the goods are impounded on the premises by virtue of the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 10, ante, 294. (Child v. Chamberlain, 5 B. & Adol. 1049; 3 N. & M. 520, S. C.)

Where rent due does not exceed 20*l.*

Stat. 57 Geo. III. c. 93, intituled "An Act to regulate the Costs of Distresses levied for Payment of small Rents," after reciting that "divers persons acting as brokers, and distraining on the goods and chattels of others, or employed in the course of such distresses, have of late made excessive charges, to the great oppression of poor tenants and others; and it is expedient to check such practices," enacts, that "no person whatsoever making any distress for rent, where the sum demanded and due shall not exceed the sum of 20*l.* for and in respect of such rent, nor any person whatsoever employed in any manner in making such distress, or doing any act whatsoever in the course of such distress, or for carrying the same into effect, shall have, take, or receive out of the produce of the goods or chattels distrained upon and sold, or from the tenant distrained on, or from the landlord, or from any other person whatsoever, any other or more costs and charges for and in respect of such distress, or any matter or thing done therein, than such as are fixed and set forth in the schedule hereunto annexed (post, 305), and appropriated to each act which shall have been done in the course of such distress; and no person or persons whatsoever shall make any charge whatsoever for any act, matter, or thing mentioned in the said schedule, unless such act shall have been really done."

Remedy before a justice.

Sect. 2. "If any person or persons whatsoever shall in any manner levy, take, or receive from any person or persons whatsoever, or retain or take from the produce of any goods sold for the payment of such rent, any other or greater costs and charges than are mentioned and set down in the said schedule, or make any charge whatsoever for any act, matter, or thing mentioned in the said schedule and not really done, it shall be lawful for the party or parties aggrieved by such practices to apply to any one justice of the peace for the county, city, town, and acting for the division where such distress shall have been made, or in any manner proceeded in, for the redress of his, her, or their grievances so occasioned; whereupon such justice shall summon the person or persons complained of to appear before him at a reasonable time to be fixed in such summons; and such justice shall examine into the matter of such complaint by all legal ways and means, and also hear in like manner the defence of the person or persons complained of; and if it shall appear to such justice that the person or persons complained of shall have levied, taken, received, or had other and greater costs and charges than are mentioned or fixed in the schedule hereunto annexed (see form, post), or made any charge for any matter or thing mentioned in the said schedule, such act, matter, or thing not having been really done, such justice shall order and adjudge treble the amount of the monies so unlawfully taken, to be paid by the person or persons so having acted to the party or parties who shall thus have preferred his, her, or their complaint thereof, together with full costs; and in case of non-payment of any monies or costs so ordered and adjudged to be paid, such justice shall forthwith issue his warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party or parties ordered to pay such monies or costs, rendering the overplus (if any) to the owner or owners, after the payment of the charges of such distress and sale; and in case no sufficient distress can be had, such justice shall, by warrant under

Justices may summon witnesses

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for such justice, at the request of the party complaining or complained against, to summon all persons as witnesses, and to administer an oath to them, touching the matter of such complaint or defence against it; and if any person or persons so summoned shall not obey such summons, without any reasonable or lawful excuse, or refuse to be examined upon oath, or if a Quaker, upon solemn affirmation, then every such person so offending shall forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding 40*s*., to be ordered, levied and paid in such manner and by such means, and with such power of commitment, as is hereinbefore directed as to such order and judgment to be given between the party or parties in the original complaint, excepting so far as regards the form of the order, and hereinafter provided for."

Penalty.

If complaint unfounded, justice may give costs to party complained against.

Sect. 4. "It shall be lawful for such justice, if he shall find that the complaint of the party or parties aggrieved is not well founded, to order and adjudge costs, not exceeding 20*s*., to be paid to the party or parties complained against, (see form of order, post, No. 18), which order shall be carried into effect, and levied and paid in such manner, and with like power of commitment, as is hereinbefore directed as to the order and judgment founded on such original complaint: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall empower such justice to make any order or judgment against the landlord, for whose benefit any such distress shall have been made, unless such landlord shall have personally levied such distress: provided always, that no person or persons who shall be aggrieved by any distress for rent, or by any proceedings had in the course thereof, or by any costs and charges levied upon them in respect of the same, shall be barred from any legal or other suit or remedy which he, she or they might have had before the passing of this act, excepting so far as any complaint to be preferred by virtue of this act shall have been determined by the order and judgment of the justice before whom it shall have been heard and determined, and which order and judgment shall and may be given in evidence, under the plea of the general issue, in all cases where the matter of such complaint shall be made the subject of any action."

Landlord not liable unless he personally levied distress.

Parties not barred of other legal remedies.

General issue.

Proof of justice's order.

Sect. 5. "Such orders and judgments on such complaints shall be made in the form in the schedule hereunto annexed, and may be proved before any court by proof of the signature of the justice to such order and judgment; and such orders as regard persons who may have been summoned as witnesses shall be made in such form as to such justice shall seem most fit and convenient."

Brokers to give copies of charges to persons distrained.

Sect. 6. "Every broker or other person who shall make and levy any distress whatsoever shall give a copy of his charges, and of all the costs and charges of any distress whatsoever, signed by him, to the person or persons on whose goods and chattels any distress shall be levied, although the amount of the rent demanded shall exceed the sum of £20."

Copy of act to be hung up in sessions house.

Sect. 7. "A fair printed copy of this act shall be hung up in some convenient place in such halls or rooms where the justices of each and every county in England and Wales shall hold either their quarter or other sessions."

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, extends the provisions of this act of 57 Geo. III. to distresses for rates, taxes, impositions, and assessments.

After a distress made by a broker in a case within the above act, the rent and charges may still be tendered to the landlord. (Smith v. Goodwin, 4 B. & Adol. 413; 2 N. & M. 114, S. C.)

The 6th section of the act, compelling brokers to give copies of their charges of distress, applies only to cases where the goods have been sold. (See Hills v. Street, 5 Bingh. 39).

And a landlord who does not personally interfere in the distress is not liable for the neglect of the broker employed by him to make a distress, in not delivering a copy of the charges. (Hart v. Leach, 1 M. & W. 560).

Overplus.

Overplus.]—After complying with all the foregoing requisites, if there be any overplus, after paying the rent and charges of the distress, appraisement and sale, the same should be immediately left in the hands of the sheriff, undersheriff or constable of the hundred, parish or place where the distress was taken, for the owner's use, (see 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 1, ante, 301), otherwise a special action on the case will lie.

The overplus, which by the stat. 2 W. & M. sess. 1, c. 5, s. 2, is directed to be left in the hands of the sheriff, undersheriff, or constable, on a distress, for the owner's use, means the overplus after the payment of the rent and of the reasonable charges. Therefore, in an action on the case for not leaving the overplus in the hands of the sheriff, &c., for the plaintiff's use, the plaintiff may question the reasonableness of the charges. (Lyon v. Tomkins, 1 M. & W. 603). And where the plaintiff herself received from the broker the balance remaining after payment of the rent and the actual charges, making no objection as to their reasonableness, it was held, that it was a question for the jury whether she accepted such balance in satisfaction, and if not, whether it was sufficient to satisfy the real balance; but that it was not correct to lay it down as matter of law that such payment and receipt substantially satisfied the requisitions of the statute.

XII. Irregularity in the Proceedings and Tender of Amends.

Irregularity in distresses.

The 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 19, declares, that where any distress shall be made for any kind of rent justly due, and any irregularity shall be afterwards done by the party distraining, or his agent, the distress itself shall not be therefore deemed unlawful, nor the distrainer a trespasser ab initio, but the party aggrieved may recover satisfaction for the special damage and no more in an action of trespass or on the case, at the election of the plaintiff; and if he recover, he shall have full costs.

Tender of amends.

Sect. 20. But no tenant shall recover on such action if tender of amends hath been made before the action brought.

General issue.

Sect. 21. In all actions of trespass or upon the case to be brought against any person or persons entitled to rents or services of any kind, his, her, or their bailiff or receiver, or other person or persons, relating to any entry by virtue of this act or otherwise upon the premises chargeable with such rents or services, or to any distress or seizure, sale or disposal of any goods or chattels, thereupon it shall and may be lawful to and for the defendant or defendants in such actions to plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence, any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.

If the first entry be illegal and unjustifiable, as if no rent whatever was due, (see Whitworth v. Smith, 5 C. & P. 250); or if the party distraining should break open the outer door or the like, his subsequent proceedings would not be protected, it should seem, under this act, and he would be a wrong-doer in every respect. (See Avenall v. Croker, M. & M. 173). Trespass may be maintained if the distrainer keep too long in possession; (Winterbourne v. Morgan, 11 East, 395); or if he expel the tenant the premises, (Etherton v. Popplewell, 1 East, 139); or if he distrain fixtures. (Danby v. Harris, 1 G. & Dav. 234).

12. Irregularity in the Proceedings, &c.

Decisions on 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 19.

Where a distress is made after a sufficient tender, and there has been no subsequent demand, trespass or case lies. (Ladd v. Thomas, 12 Ad. & Ell. 117; Branscombe v. Bridges, 1 B. & Cres. 145). But for any subsequent irregularity, the remedy is by special action on the case.

The sale of goods under a distress, after the service of an irregular notice of replevy, without removing the goods off the premises, is not a conversion to enable the tenant to maintain trover. (Cuckson v. Winter, 2 M. & R. 313).

The enactment is not confined to distresses on goods. (Proudlove v. Twemlow, 1 C. & M. 329).

Damages.

The enactment, it will be observed, entitles the plaintiff to recover only the damage actually sustained by him in cases where the distress was originally lawful, but there has been some subsequent irregularity. Where a landlord seized and sold, under a distress for rent, growing crops, which were afterwards taken away by the purchaser, and it appeared that the crops were sold for the full value which they would have fetched if sold at the proper time, and the rent proved to be due exceeded the amount for which the crops sold; it was held, in an action of trover brought by the tenant, that he was entitled to nominal damages only. (Proudlove v. Twemlow, 1 C. & M. 326).

A landlord is liable to some damages in an action on the case for an excessive distress, where the excess consists wholly in seizing growing crops, the probable produce of which is capable of being estimated at the time of the seizure; but the measure of damages is not the value of the crops, but the inconvenience and expense which the tenant sustains in being deprived of the management of them, or which he is put to in procuring sureties to a larger amount than he would otherwise have been in replevying the crops. (Piggott v. Birtles, 1 M. & W. 441).

In an action for an excessive distress, the question is, what the goods seized would have sold for at a broker's sale. If it be excessive, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the fair value of them. (Wells v. Moody, 7 C. & P. 59). And in a similar action, the plaintiff, having received the taxed costs of his replevin on the distress, was held not entitled to recover, as damages, the extra costs occasioned to him by the replevin. (Grace v. Morgan, 2 Bing. N. C. 534; 2 Scott, 790, S. C.)

In case for selling goods distrained for rent without an appraisement, the measure of damages is the value of the goods minus the rent. (Biggins v. Goode, 2 C. & J. 364; Notts v. Curtis, id. n.)

Tender of amends.

The tender of amends need not be pleaded specially, nor the amount of the tender paid into court, but it may be given in evidence under the general issue by statute. (Jones v. Gooday, 1 Dowl. (N. S.), 914; Lawrence v. Hill, 6 Bac. Ab. tit. "Tender," 6).

General issue.

The plea of "not guilty by statute," pleaded under stat. 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 21, in an action for an excessive distress, puts in issue not only the matter of justification, but the tenancy and ownership of the goods. (Williams v. Jones, 11 Ad. & Ell. 643).

Costs.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 24, a judge's certificate is necessary to give a plaintiff costs in actions of case and trespass wherein he recovers less than forty shillings damages. This salutary provision has the effect of stopping many frivolous actions for trifling irregularities in distresses.

The provision at the end of the 21st sect. of the 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, giving the defendant double costs if plaintiff becomes nonsuit or discontinues his action, is repealed by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97; and by that act, sect. 2, the defendant will in such case be entitled to receive only a full indemnity as to his costs of the defence.

XIII. Rent in case of an Extent, or Execution, or Bankruptcy, &c.

Rent in case of extent.

Rent in case of Extent.]—In R. v. Cotton, T. 1755, it was determined by the barons of the exchequer, and affirmed on a writ of error, that if a distress be made for rent, and before the five days given by act of Parliament have expired, an extent is issued, though it be not levied, for a debt due to the crown, the extent shall take place of the distress, because the distrainer neither gains a general nor a special property, nor even the possession of the cattle or things distrained. The distress is only a pledge in his hands for the rent. But the extent binds the property of the goods of the king's debtor from the teste of it. (Park, 112; and see R. v. Hodder, 4 Price, 313). The landlord of the premises on which goods have been seized under an extent in aid is not entitled under the act of 8 Anne, c. 14, to call on the sheriff to pay twelve months' rent due before the teste of the writ. (R. v. Decaux, 2 Price, 17).

Rent in case of execution.

Arrears of rent to be first paid not exceeding one year's rent.

Rent in case of an Execution.]—By stat. 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, no goods being on any messuage, lands or tenements, leased for life, term of years, at will, or otherwise, shall be liable to be taken by execution, unless the party, at whose suit the execution is sued out, shall, before the removal of such goods from off the premises, pay to the landlord or his bailiff all such rent as shall be then due for the premises, provided that it amount not to more than one year's rent; and if the said arrears shall exceed one year's rent, then the party paying such landlord one year's rent may proceed to execute his judgment. This act is extended to process in Durham and Sadbirge by 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 11.

According to this statute the sheriff is not bound to take the goods in execution unless the plaintiff in the action, before the removal of such goods, pays the landlord the rent due to the extent of one year's arrears at the time of the levy. (Calvert v. Joliffe, 2 B. & Adol. 418; and see Wray v. Earl of Egremont, 1 N. & M. 190; 4 B. & Adol. 122, S. C.)

Liability of sheriff.

If the sheriff does not comply with this act, he will be liable to an action at suit of the landlord. (Palgrave v. Windham, 1 Stra. 212; Green v. Austin, 3 Camp. 260; Duck v. Braddyll, M'Clel. 217; 13 Price, 455, S. C.; Rothery v. Wood, 3 Camp. 24, on motion to the court). But he will not be so liable, unless there be a demand for the rent before the removal by the party entitled to it. The sheriff is liable to the landlord for a year's rent, though the goods seized on the premises and sold were not the property of the execution debtor, and though the sheriff afterwards accounted for the proceeds with the real owner: for goods found on the premises are liable to be distrained, whether they are the property of the tenant or a stranger. (Forster v. Cookson, 1 Ad. & Ell. (N. S.) 419).

The sheriff is not bound to find out what rent is due to the landlord and pay it him, but the landlord must give him notice. (Smith v. Taunton, 3 Taunt. 400; Arnitt v. Garnett, 3 B. & Ald. 440). No particular form of notice is requisite. (Andrews v. Dixon, 3 B. & Ald. 645; Colyer v. Speer, 4 Moore, 473; 2 Brod. & B. 67, S. C.)

In Arnitt v. Garnett (3 B. & Ald. 440), the court, on motion, ordered a year's rent out of the proceeds, while in the sheriff's hands, to be paid to the landlord, though the sheriff had no notice of the rent being due till after the removal. But an action for money had and received could not be sustained against him. (Green v. Austen, 3 Camp. 260).

13. Rent in case of Execution.

A demand on the sheriff by a person to whom administration is afterwards granted will not operate by relation. (Waring v. Dewberry, 1 Stra. 79; Smith v. Russell, 3 Taunt. 400).

The sheriff must satisfy the landlord in the first instance, (Colyer v. Speer, 4 Moore, 473); and before the removal of any part of the goods. (Id.; 2 B. & B. 67; S. C. Calvert v. Joliffe, 2 B. & Adol. 418). A bill of sale is a removal. (West v. Hedges, Barnes, 211). No deduction for poundage can be made from the rent. (Gore v. Gofton, Stra. 643).

When landlord entitled.

There must be a subsisting tenancy to entitle the landlord to the rent. (Hodgson v. Gascoigne, 5 B. & Ald. 88). In an agreement for assigning a lease for a sum of money, to be paid on or before a distant day, the lessee agreed to make some alterations on the premises, which his assignee was to occupy, paying until the completion of the assignment "at the rate of £100 per year, in half-yearly payments." The lessee afterwards agreed to allow £12 for some of the alterations he ought to have made, the rest were never completed, and the assignee paid in advance £10. It was held that the sheriff, levying on the goods of the assignee under a fi. fa., was bound to pay over to lessee half a year's rent due, and that the £12 and £10 were in part payment of rent, as they were intended to be allowed out of the first payment due by the assignee to the lessee. (Saunders v. Musgrave, 6 B. & Cres. 524; 2 C. & P. 294, S. C.)

The landlord, to be entitled to the rent, must also be the immediate one, and not the ground landlord. (Bennet's case; 2 Stra. 787).

An executor or administrator is entitled to arrears accrued in the testator's lifetime, (Palgrave v. Windham, 1 Stra. 212); and so is a trustee of an outstanding satisfied term in trust for mortgagees. (Colyer v. Speer, 4 Moore, 473; 2 B. & B. 67, S. C.)

The statute extends to an execution at the suit of the defendant for costs. (Henchett v. Kimpson, 2 Wils. 140). But a commission of bankruptcy is not an execution within the statute. (Lee v. Lopes, 15 East, 230). Goods taken on a capias utlagatum are within it. (Bunb. 5, 194, 269; 7 T. R. 284). So are goods taken on a pone per vadios, issuing out of the court of pleas of Durham; in which case the goods are forfeited to the bishop, who afterwards assigns them over to the party. (Brandling v. Barrington, 6 B. & Cres. 467).

In the case of two executions, there shall not be two years' rent paid to the landlord; for the intent of the act was to reserve to the landlord only the rent for one year, and it was his own fault if he let more run in arrear. Therefore one year's rent to the landlord being paid to him on the first execution, the sheriff is not to levy for him again any thing on a subsequent execution. (Dod v. Saxby, 2 Stra. 1024; Peacock v. Purvis, 2 B. & B. 362, 366; 5 Moore, 79, S. C.; Wright v. Dewes, 3 N. & M. 790; 1 Ad. & Ell. 641, S. C.); unless perhaps the goods be not removed in a reasonable time. (Guilliam v. Barker, 1 Price, 277; Blades v. Arundale, 1 M. & Sel. 711).

The landlord's claim under the statute may be supported for forehand rent. (Harrison v. Barry, 7 Price, 690). So for rent that falls due on the day of the levy. (Tidd, 8 ed. 1054). But rent arising after the seizure under the execution is not within the act, and cannot be deducted. (Hoskins v. Knight, 1 M. & Sel. 245). A sheriff taking corn in the blade under a fi. fa., and selling it before rent due, is not liable to account to the landlord of the defendant under this act of Anne, for rent accruing subsequently to the levy and sale, although he has given notice, and though the corn be not removed from the premises until long afterwards, when a considerable portion of rent has become due; the landlord's remedy in such case is by distress. (Guilliam v. Barker, 1 Price, 274).

14. Rent how recoverable by Executors, &c.

Bankruptcy and insolvency.

Distresses in case of Bankruptcy and Insolvency.]—The landlord may distrain before an act of bankruptcy by his tenant for the whole amount due. After an act of bankruptcy also he may distrain, even although the messenger be actually in possession of the goods on the premises. (Exp. Plummer, 1 Atk. 103; Buckley v. Taylor, 2 T. R. 600; Briggs v. Sowry, 8 M. & W. 724). And formerly he might have distrained for the whole rent due, but now by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 74, the distress shall not be available for more than one year's rent, and the landlord must prove under the commission for the residue.

This enactment applies only to rent accrued due before the bankruptcy. (Briggs v. Sowry, 8 M. & W. 729).

Though in the case of the tenant's becoming bankrupt a landlord may distrain for his rent upon the bankrupt's goods, either before or after the assignment under the commission, yet if he neglect to do so, and suffer the goods to be sold by the assignees, he can only come in for his rent pro ratâ with the other creditors. (Anon., 1 Atk. 102; and Ex parte Descharmes, ib. 103).

So in the case of Ex parte Devismos, Jan. 1776, where the question was, whether the landlord was entitled to have a year's rent paid to him out of the effects of a bankrupt (his tenant), such effects having been seized under the commission, and removed by the messenger from the demised premises in respect of which the rent was in arrear, Lord Chancellor Bathurst was clearly of opinion, upon the authority of the two cases from 1 Atk. (suprà), that the landlord could only come in as a common creditor. And he added, that if the legislature had intended to prefer the landlord, they would have done so under the statute of Anne, as they did in the insolvent debtors act. (MS. Vide Cooke's B. L. 191, 6th edit.)

In Bradyll v. Ball, (1 Bro. 427), it was decided that the landlord has no lien upon the goods after they are removed from the premises.

In order to enforce a landlord's claim for rent in arrear, against assignees after a seizure under a fi. fa., he must distrain. (Gethin v. Wilks, 2 Dowl. P. C. 189).

The effect of the 75th section of 6 Geo. IV. c. 16 is it seems only to exempt the bankrupt from personal liability, and does not affect the landlord's right of distress, (Briggs v. Sowry, 8 M. & W. 729); and where a landlord distrained the goods of A. on his tenant's premises, for rent, and the tenant afterwards became bankrupt and obtained his certificate, it was held that the certificate did not operate as a release of the rent, and therefore that the landlord had a right in replevin at the suit of A., to avow for the return of the goods. (Newton v. Scott, 9 M. & W. 434).

The 58th section of the Insolvent Act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, contains a similar provision to sect. 74 in the Bankrupt Act. In the construction of a similar provision contained in the prior Insolvent Act, 7 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 31, it has been held, that a distress taken before, but not sold till after the arrest of the insolvent debtor, is available for more than a year's rent. (Wray v. Earl of Egremont, 4 B. & Adol. 122).

XIV. Rent how far Recoverable by Executors or Administrators.

Rent recoverable by executors or administrators 32 Hen. 8, c. 37.

By the 32 Hen. VIII. c. 37, s. 1, forasmuch as by the order of the common law the executors or administrators of tenants in fee simple, fee tail, and for term of life, of rent services, rent charges, rent secks, and fee farms, have no remedy to recover such arrearages of the said rents or fee farms as were due to their testators in their lives, nor yet the heirs of such testator, nor any person having the reversion of his estate after his decease, may distrain or have action to levy the same, it is enacted, that the executors and administrators of every such person to whom any such rent or fee farm shall be due and not paid at the time of his death, may have an action of debt for the same against the tenant who ought to have paid the same, or against his executors or administrators; or may distrain upon the premises, so long as they continue in the possession of such tenant in demesne, who ought immediately to have paid the same to the testator in his life, or of any other person claiming the same only by and from such tenant by purchase, gift, or descent.

14. Rent how recoverable by Executors, &c.

By action. Or distress.

In like manner the husband may have action, or distrain for arrears due in the life-time and in the right of his wife. Sect. 3.

And if any person shall have any rents or fee farms for the life of any other person, which shall be behind and unpaid at the death of such other person, he, his executors or administrators, may have action of debt against the tenant in demesne that ought to have paid the same when it was first due, his executors or administrators, or may distrain for the same upon the premises in such like manner as he might have done if the person by whose death the estate was determined had been in full life. Sect. 4.

The recital of the above act is explained in Co. Litt. 162. a., b. Lord Coke there recommends the remedy by distress as most plain and certain.

Remedy by distress recommended.

Fee farm is, when the lord, upon the creation of the tenancy, reserves to himself and his heirs either the rent for which it was before let to farm, or at least a fourth part of the value, without homage, fealty, or other services, beyond what are especially comprised in the feoffment; and it is called a fee farm rent, because a farm rent is reserved upon a grant in fee. (2 Inst. 44).

Fee farm, what is.

The act does not extend to copyhold rents; (Appleton v. Doily, Yelv. 135), nor to a creditor by elegit of tenant for life of a rent charge; (B. N. B. 56); nor to the executors of a grantee of a rent charge for years, if he so long live; (Id.); nor does it apply to the executor of a person who was seised in fee of lands, and demised it for a term of years reserving a rent, so as to enable him to distrain for arrears of rent accrued in the testator's life-time, for the latter was not a tenant in fee simple of a rent within the meaning of the stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 37, s. 1. (Prescott v. Boucher, 3 B. & Ad. 849; Jones v. Jones, id. 967; and see the cases and law in 1 Williams on Executors, 602, &c.)

Creditor by elegit. Executor of grantee of rent charge.

Distress by executor of freeholder.

But it is a remedial law, and extends to all tenants for life, (Co. Litt. 162. a., b.), and if a tenant for years underlet for years and die, it is clear that his executor may distrain for arrearages at common law; for such arrears were never separated from the reversion, and both belong to the executor. (Latch. 211).

Act remedial. Extends to all tenants for life.

Executors of tenant for years.

And now by stat. 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, ss. 37, 38, the executors or administrators of any lessor or landlord may distrain upon the lands demised for any term or at will for the arrearages due to such lessor or landlord in his life-time in like manner as such lessor or landlord might have done in his life-time. And such arrearages may be distrained for after the determination of such term or lease at will, in the same manner as if such term or lease had not been ended or determined; provided such distress be made within the space of six calendar months after the determination of such term or lease, and during the continuance of the possession of the tenant from whom such arrears become due, and all powers and provisions in the several statutes made relating to distresses for rent, are made applicable to the distresses so made as aforesaid

A distress for rent arrear was made by the command and in the name of the landlord, but he died before it was effected. Held, that his executrix might ratify the distress before she had obtained probate of the will, and the bailiff might make cognizance as her bailiff. (Whitehead v. Taylor, 10 Ad. & Ell. 210).

15. Of Rescous and Pound Breach.

Where a landlord is entitled to a term of years, and dies without appointing an executor, a distress for rent made after his death, and before any grant of administration, cannot be justified. (Keane v. Dee, 1 Alcock & Napier, 496, n.)

XV. Of Rescous and Pound Breach.

Rescous and pound breach.

By the common law, if a man break the pound or the lock of it, or part of it, he greatly offendeth against the peace, and doth trespass to the king, and to the lord of the fee, and to the sheriff, and hundredors, in breach of the peace, and to the party, and to the delaying of justice; and therefore hue and cry is to be levied against him, as against those who break the peace. (Mir. c. 2, s. 26).

Reception.

And the party who distrained may take the goods again, wheresoever he shall find them, and impound them again. (1 Inst. 47.)

Breaking open doors in pursuit

But it seems he cannot break open the house, or enter the grounds of a third person for that purpose, at any rate unless on fresh pursuit, (see Francombe v. Pinche, Esp. N. P. 396, 6th edit.; Rich v. Woolley, 7 Bing. 651; Russell v. Rider, 6 C. & P. 416); and he must not be guilty of any breach of the peace in such reception.

Actual force not necessary to constitute offence of pound breach.

It seems that actual force is not necessary to constitute the offence of pound-breach. Thus where an attorney, assuming upon himself an authority to grant a replevin, when he had none, granted a replevin in his own cause, he was considered guilty of a pound-breach. (Trevannion's case, 11 Mod. 32).

What is a rescous.

Where a man hath taken distress (as to what is such taking see ante, 290), and the cattle distrained, as he is driving them to the pound, go into the owner's house, if he that took the distress demand them of the owner and he deliver them not, this is a rescous in law. (1 Inst. 161; 6 Bac. Abr. tit. "Rescue," (A).)

There can, however, be no rescous but where the party has had the actual possession of the cattle or other things whereof the rescous is supposed to be made; for if a man come to arrest another or to distrain, and be disturbed regularly, his remedy is by action on the case. (1 Inst. 161; 6 Bac. Abr. 87; and the authorities there cited).

If a hayward take cattle which are straying in a common or lane, and they are rescued as he is taking them to the pound, this rescue is indictable; but if the hayward take cattle which are damage feasant in the inclosed land of any private occupier, the rescue of them before they get to the pound is not indictable; as in the latter case, till the cattle get to the pound, the hayward is to be considered the mere servant of the occupier. (Rex v. Bradshaw, 7 Car. & P. 233).

When justified.

If a distress be taken without cause, before it is impounded the party may make a rescous, but if it be impounded he cannot justify the breach of the pound to take it out of the pound, because the distress is then in the custody of the law; if, however, the pound be unlocked, it seems he may take it. (See B. N. P. 61).

An indictable offence.

The forcibly rescuing goods distrained, and the rescuing cattle by the breach of the pound in which they have been placed, have been considered as offences at common law, and indictable as such, (1 Russ. 363); and it would seem that the indictment will lie though there was no actual breach of the peace; for though a mere trespass, without circumstances of violence, is not indictable, yet a pound breach, or rescue, is an injury and insult to public justice. (2 Chit. C. L. 204, note (B); 1 Russ. 363).

Civil remedy.

The old common-law remedy for the party injured was a writ of rescous, but the civil remedy given by stat. 2 Will. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 5, s. 4, will, in most cases of a pound breach, or a rescue of goods distrained for rent, be found the most desirable mode of proceeding where the offenders are responsible persons. That statute enacts, that upon pound-breach or rescous of goods distrained for rent, the person grieved shall, in a special action on the case, recover treble damages and costs against the offenders or against the owners of the goods if they come to his use. (See 1 Russ. 411; Bradby on Distresses, 282. Bac. Ab. Rescue (C.)) In case for rescous of goods, distrained for toll, under the authority of a statute, which gives a right to distrain particular goods only, the declaration must state, that the goods taken were such as the plaintiffs were empowered to distrain. But a declaration for pound-breach of such goods is sufficient, though it discloses no right of distress. (Parrett Navigation Company v. Stower, 6 M. & W. 564, and see Castleman v. Hicks, 1 Car. & M. 266). In Firth v. Purvis (5 T. R. 432), it was held to be no answer to an action on this enactment, that the rent in demand was tendered after the distress and impounding. The enactment was construed to entitle the person grieved to treble costs as well as damages, (Lawson v. Storey, 1 Ld. Raym. 20; Deacon v. Morris, 2 B. & Ald. 393); but the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, repeals all enactments giving double and treble costs. (See that enactment, tit. "Justices," Vol. III. p. 1043).

15. Of Rescue and Pound Breach.

Summary remedy before justices.

By the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 30, intituled, "An Act to amend the Law relating to Pound-breach and Rescue in certain Cases," reciting that, "It frequently happens that cattle which are lawfully impounded, or which are lawfully seized for the purpose of being impounded, are rescued from the pound or place in which they are so impounded, or on the way to or from such pound or place, and the expense of prosecuting such offenders, or obtaining redress for the injury occasioned by such rescue to the persons so entitled to distrain, is usually out of proportion to the damage for which such cattle are distrained; and whereas it is expedient for remedy thereof, to enable two or more of her Majesty's justices of the peace to try such offenders in a summary way, and award such redress as hereinafter mentioned to the persons on whose behalf the cattle so rescued shall have been distrained;" it is enacted, "That in case any person or persons shall release or attempt to release any horse, ass, sheep, swine, or other beast or cattle, which shall be lawfully seized for the purpose of being impounded, in consequence of having been found wandering, straying, or lying or being depastured on any inclosed land without the consent of the owner or occupier of such inclosed land, from the pound or place where the same shall be so impounded, or on the way to or from any such pound or place, or shall pull down, damage, or destroy the same pound or place, or any part thereof, or any lock or bolt belonging thereto, or with which the same shall be fastened, every person so offending shall, upon conviction thereof before any two of her Majesty's justices of the peace, forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 5*l.*, together with reasonable charges and expenses, or in default thereof be committed by such justices, by warrant under their hands and seals, to the house of correction of the county wherein the said offence shall have been committed, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three calendar months nor less than fourteen days, unless such sum of money and costs as aforesaid shall be sooner paid; and it shall be lawful for the said justices to award the whole or any portion of such penalty to the person or persons on whose behalf such cattle were distrained."

Persons releasing or attempting to release cattle impounded, or damaging any pound, &c., upon conviction before two justices, to forfeit 5*l.* and expenses, and in default of payment to be imprisoned.

Justices not to hear cases where questions of title arise, or as to any bankruptcy, &c.

Sect. 2 provides and enacts, "That nothing herein contained shall authorize any justices of the peace to hear and determine any case of pound-breach or rescue in which any question shall arise as to the title to any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any interest therein or accruing therefrom, or as to any bankruptcy or insolvency, or any execution under the process of any court of justice, or as to the obligation of maintaining, repairing, or keeping in repair any wall, hedge, paling, ditch, sunk fence, or fence whatsoever."

Summonses may be issued against offenders, who, on proof on oath of one or more witnesses before two justices, shall be convicted in penalty and costs.

summon the party accused to appear before any two justices of the peace within whose jurisdiction the offence shall have been committed, at a time and place to be named in such summons, and upon the appearance of such party, or in his absence in case he shall not appear according to the tenor of such summons, any such justices before whom such party shall have been so summoned to appear shall and may (upon proof of the service of such summons) proceed to examine into the matter, and upon due proof made of such having been committed, either by confession of the party accused, or upon the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to give judgment or convict for the penalty and costs (as the case may be)."

Offenders may be apprehended by a warrant of justices.

Sect. 4. "That every such justice of the peace may, without issuing any summons, forthwith issue his warrant to any constable for the apprehension of any person charged under this act, whenever good grounds for so doing to his satisfaction shall be stated on oath before him."

Highways.

The 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 50, s. 75, (tit. "Highways," Vol. III. p. 585), imposes a penalty on persons breaking the pound to rescue cattle and animals found trespassing on highways.

As to the punishment &c. of persons guilty of a pound-breach on a distress made under a Turnpike Act, see 3 Geo. IV. c. 126, s. 123; "Highways," "Turnpike," Vol. III. p. 749.

XVI. Tenant holding over.

Distress when allowed where tenants hold over after the term is expired.

We have already seen that there can be no distress where there is no tenancy, and consequently none after the termination of a prior tenancy, (ante, 273).

But by stat. 8 Ann. c. 14, s. 6, reciting that tenants pur autre vie, (that is, holding during the life of another person), and lessees for years, or at will, frequently hold over after the determination of the lease; and that, after the determination of such or any other leases, no distress can be made for arrears of rent that grew due on such leases before the determination thereof; it is enacted, "That it shall be lawful to distrain after the determination of such lease, in the same manner as if it had not been determined."

Sect. 7. Provided, "That such distress be made within the space of six calendar months after the determination of such lease, and during the continuance of such landlord's title or interest, and during the possession of the tenant from whom such arrears became due."

To enable a landlord to distrain under this act it is requisite that his title should continue, and that the tenant should still remain in possession of the land demised, and that the distress should be made within six months after the tenancy has expired. The possession of the tenant must be an actual possession; for where the tenant, a few days after his lease expired, gave up possession to the incoming tenant, but, without the latter's permission, left some cattle in the fold-yard, which were afterwards distrained in the name of the landlord, it was held, that the tenant was not possessed of the premises, and that the grazing of the cattle thereon did not constitute a possession under 8 Ann. c. 14, ss. 6, 7, and that the distress was consequently illegal. (Taylerson v. Peters, 7 Ad. & El. 110).

But a distress may be made after the expiration of six months, during the time that the tenant, according to the custom of the county, has the away-going crops on the premises. (Beaven v. Delahay, 1 H. Black. 5). So, where by agreement as well as custom of the county a tenant was to have the use of the barns and gate-rooms to thresh out his corn and fodder his cattle till the May-day after the expiration of his term; his term expired at Michaelmas, 1824: he was then restrained by injunction, at the instance of his landlord, from carrying off the premises corn in the straw: and in January, 1825, his landlord distrained a rick of corn on the premises; it was held the distress was valid. (Knight v. Bennett, 3 Bing. 364).

The act is not confined to a tortious holding over, or to a holding over of the whole, and, therefore, a landlord, who permits his tenant to retain possession of part of a farm after the tenancy has expired, may distrain under this act on that part within six months after the expiration of the tenancy. (Nuttall v. Staunton, 6 D. & R. 155; 4 B. & Cress. 51, S. C.) But the act does not apply to cases where the tenancy is put an end to by the tenant's wrongful disclaimer. (Doe v. Williams, 7 C. & P. 322). 16. Tenant holding over.

A termor, who lets to an under-tenant, cannot, after his term expired, enforce the continuance of the under-tenancy by distress, if the under-tenant refuse to acknowledge him as landlord, or to pay him under threat of distress, although the under-tenant still retains the possession. (Burne v. Richardson, 4 Taunt. 720).

By the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 18, if any tenant shall give notice of his intention to quit the premises holden by him at a time mentioned in such notice, and shall not accordingly deliver up the possession thereof at the time in such notice contained, then such tenant, his executors or administrators, shall thenceforward pay to the landlord double the rent or sum which he should otherwise have paid, to be levied, sued for, and recovered at the times and in the same manner as the single rent or sum, before the giving of such notice, could be levied, &c.; and such double rent or sum shall continue to be paid during the time such tenant shall continue in possession. Double rent.

For this double rent the landlord may distrain. (Timmins v. Rawlinson, 3 Burr. 1603; Jenner v. Clegg, 1 Mood. & R. 213). The statute applies whether the tenant hold under a lease or a parol demise, or whether the tenant's notice be in writing or by parol. (Timmins v. Rawlinson, ubi sup.) Those cases only are within the statute where the tenant has the power of determining the tenancy by notice, and where a valid notice is given, or the bad notice has been assented to by the landlord in writing. (Johnson v. Huddlestone, 4 B. & C. 922). The notice mentioned in this statute need not be in writing; (Timmins v. Rawlinson, 3 Burr. 1603); but it must give a fixed time for quitting: thus a notice to quit "as soon as the tenant can get another situation" does not render him liable on this statute, though he has got another situation. (Farrance v. Elkington, 2 Camp. 591). A tenant who holds over for a year, after notice to quit, paying double rent, according to the above act, may quit at the end of the year without fresh notice. (Booth v. Macfarlane, 1 B. & Adol. 904).

If a landlord accept single rent after the tenant has given notice, he waives his claim to double rent. (Doe v. Batten, 1 Cowp. 243).

By the 4 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 1, in case any tenant or tenants for life, lives, or years, or other persons who shall come into possession of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, by, from, or under, or by collusion with such tenant or tenants, shall wilfully hold over any lands, &c. after the determination of their term, and after demand made and notice in writing given for delivering the possession thereof, by his or their landlord or lessor, or the person or persons to whom the remainder or the reversion of such lands, &c. shall belong, his or their agents thereunto lawfully authorized, such persons so holding over shall, for and during the time he or they shall so hold over, or keep the person or persons entitled out of the possession of the said lands, &c., pay to the person or persons so kept out of possession, their executors, administrators, or assigns, at the rate of double the yearly value of the said lands, &c. for so long time as the same are detained. Double value.

The landlord cannot distrain for double value. His remedy for it is by action.

Where the tenancy is put an end to by a notice to quit, the notice to entitle the landlord to double value must, it will be seen by the act, be in writing. A notice containing a threat of requiring double rent on refusal is sufficient. (See Poole v. Warren, 8 A. & Ell. 582, 585).

No further demand of possession is necessary than the notice to quit, where the tenancy has been put an end to by such notice. (Wilkinson

v. Colley, 5 Burr. 2694). But where the tenant has held over after the determination of a term certain, a demand of the possession must be proved; but it need not appear that the demand was made on or before the expiration of the tenancy, (Cobb v. Stokes, 8 East, 361), though the plaintiff will only be entitled to the double value from the time of the demand made. And where the rent is reserved quarterly, and the demand is made in the middle of a quarter, the plaintiff cannot recover the single rent for the antecedent fraction of the quarter. (Ib.) Where the notice was served upon the tenant, a feme sole, who married before the expiration of the year, it was held, that the landlord might maintain debt against the husband, without making a demand of the possession from him; and that in such action it was not necessary to join the wife for conformity. (Lake v. Smith, 1 New Rep. 174). A person appointed by the Court of Chancery to receive the rents and profits of the estate is a sufficient agent within the statute to make the demand in his own name. (Wilkinson v. Colley, 5 Burr. 2694). Where a trustee joined with the cestui que trust in a mortgage to the plaintiff, and all parties joined in appointing G. to be the agent and attorney of the cestui que trust, to demand and collect rent, to give notices to quit, &c., and to do every thing that the cestui que trust could have done before the mortgage, it was held that G. was authorized to demand within the statute. (Poole v. Warren, supra).

Where the claim for double value is against co-tenants, a statement by one, on receipt of notice to quit, that "he has nothing to do with the land," is not evidence in his favour to shew that his holding was not wilful; but if one offers to give up the land, and the other alone holds out, it is doubtful whether the action will lie against both. (Hirst v. Horn, 6 M. & W. 393).

The value must be estimated according to the time the tenant actually held over the premises. He will not, it would seem, be liable for any rent after the day he quitted possession, though he quitted in the middle of a quarter. (See Booth v. Macfarlane, 1 B. & Ad. 904, per Tenterden, C. J.) Where the owner of a mill let part of it to the defendant, with the use of the revolving shaft of a steam-engine which passed through the part demised, at an entire rent, the value of the power must be excluded in estimating the amount of the double value. (Robinson v. Learoyd, 7 M. & W. 48).

The landlord may waive the notice to quit and demand of possession, and thereby lose his claim to double rent; and, where he has accepted rent from the tenant after the expiration of the notice to quit, it is a question for the jury whether such rent was received in part satisfaction of the double value, or as a waiver of it. (Ryall v. Rich, 10 East, 52). A recovery in ejectment is no waiver of the landlord's right to the double value for the time between the expiration of the notice to quit and the time of recovering possession under the ejectment. (Soulsby v. Neving, 9 East, 310). A tenant, who holds over under a fair claim of right, will not be considered as wilfully holding over within the statute, though it appear eventually that he had no right. (Wright v. Smith, 5 Esp. 203).

Distress by Justice's Warrant.

[7 & 8 Will. III. c. 34; 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 6; 27 Geo. II. c. 20; 33 Geo. III. c. 55; 5 Geo. IV. c. 18.]

When it may be granted.

A distress by warrant of a magistrate is usually issued for the purpose of compelling payment of a penalty or costs, and payment also of a debt or duty.

A magistrate has no power whatever at common law to issue such a warrant, his authority for that purpose can only be derived from act of Parliament, and then only in case it is expressly given. He therefore must be guided in his proceedings in this respect by the express enactment of the legislature.

Demand before issuing.

Sometimes this authority is given by the statute, directing the magistrate to exercise it immediately upon non-payment of the penalty; in other cases, only upon failure of payment after a certain number of days. In the latter case no demand is, it seems, necessary to enable the magistrate to issue the warrant after the expiration of the time limited for payment. (Wootton v. Harvey, 6 East, 75; Paley, 234).

The demand required by 43 Geo. III. c. 99, s. 33, previously to a distress being levied for assessed taxes, need not be made in writing, nor personally on the party from whom they are due; it is sufficient if a demand has in fact been made, and there has been a refusal on the ground of inability to pay, or for any other cause. (Rex v. Ford, 2 Adol. & Ell. 588). It is not essential that the demand to which the refusal applies, should have specified the precise amount claimed, if the debtor understood what the amount was, and did not object to it. (Ib.)

(a) The form is prescribed by the act, ante, 305.

As to when a demand and refusal of a land tax or assessed tax rate is necessary before distress, see Gibbs v. Stead, 8 B. & Cres. 528; tit. "Land Tax," Vol. III.

Before a party is distressed on for a sewer's rate a demand should be made. (Style, 13).

Summons before issuing.

In a distress for poor rates, a summons is necessary before issuing the warrant, (R. v. Benn, 6 T. R. 198. And see R. v. Justices of Stafford, 3 Ad. & Ell. 425, post, "Poor," Vol. IV.).

And the same should be issued in most cases where the distress is for a mere rate or assessment.

And accordingly where by statute establishing a gas-light company it was enacted, that if any person should refuse or neglect for ten days after demand to pay any rent due from him to the company for the supply of gas, such rent should be recovered by the company or their clerk by warrant of any justice of the peace for the town, &c.; and it should be lawful for the company or their clerk, or any person acting under their authority, with such warrant, to levy the sum so due by distress and sale of the goods of the party so neglecting or refusing to pay, or the same might be recovered by action, &c. It was held that a warrant so issued by a justice, without previously summoning and hearing the party to be distrained upon, was illegal, though a summons and hearing were not in terms required by the act. (Painter v. Liverpool Gas Company, 3 Ad. & Ell. 433).

In the same case it was decided, as a general rule, that where a magistrate grants a warrant in the nature of execution, he is bound first to summon and hear the parties, unless the statute under which he acts clearly renders the discharge of that function ministerial only, or in some other manner dispenses with the summons and hearing. (Ib.)

In trover for distraining plaintiff's goods, the company justified under the above warrant, and stated that it was issued on the complaint of their collector, and that he, by virtue of it and under their authority, seized the plaintiff's goods for the purpose of levying a sum owing by him to them and duly demanded according to the act. It was also held, that the warrant, although it would have protected the clerk or an officer, was no justification to the company, they not having acted in obedience to it, but having put it in force as parties. (Ib.)

Oath before issuing.

If an oath or affirmation be required before granting the warrant of distress, the same may be made before any justice acting under the statute which authorizes the levy. (15 Geo. III. c. 39; tit. "Oaths," Vol. V.)

By whom to be granted.

The warrant may in all cases be granted by one justice, though the conviction be by two, and the justice who grants it need not be one of the justices who made the conviction. (3 Geo. IV. c. 23, s. 2; tit. "Conviction," Vol. I.)

Mandamus to issue.

If the magistrate improperly refuse to issue the distress warrant, the Court of Queen's Bench will grant a mandamus against him to compel him to issue it. (See "Justices," Vol. III.)

Best not to issue in case of doubt.

But if there be reasonable ground for the magistrate's doubting his authority to grant the warrant, he had better not do so; and the court would not compel him to act. (R. v. Bucks, JJ., 1 B. & Cres. 485; 1 D. & R. Mag. Ca. 366, S. C.)

And where a local act of Parliament declares that it shall be lawful for justices to issue their warrant to levy a rate imposed by certain commissioners under that act, upon a neglect or refusal to pay the rate; but does not contain any language directly making it compulsory on them to issue it, they may refuse to issue the warrant till the party has been summoned before them, and the court will not compel them by mandamus to issue a warrant in the first instance without any summons. Where in such an act the power of entertaining an appeal against a rate is in the commissioners appointed under the act and not in the justices, the latter may still reasonably require the party to be summoned before them previously to their issuing their warrant. The provisions of such an act must be treated in that respect like those of the 43 Eliz. (R. v. Justices of Stafford, 3 Ad. & Ell. 425; and see Painter v. Liverpool Gas Company, post).

By a local act commissioners were empowered to make paving rates, and to hear and relieve parties complaining of such rates. The act also gave an appeal from the commissioners to the sessions. And it provided that on non-payment of rates for seven days after personal demand, it should be lawful for certain justices upon proof on oath of such demand and non-payment to issue a distress warrant. Justices being applied to for such warrant refused to grant it; but stated that they would do so if a proper information were sworn, and the party summoned before them. The court refused a mandamus to compel the justices to issue a warrant without summoning the party. Supposing that the act authorized the justices to grant a warrant without a summons, it was held nevertheless that they acted rightly in not so granting it. (R. v. Hughes, 3 Ad. & Ell. 425).

Warrant during an appeal.

Several statutes give a power of appeal to the party convicted, and at the same time provide that, upon the appeal and security given for the prosecuting it, the distress shall be stayed until the appeal be determined. In such cases, after the determination of the appeal, if the time limited for making the distress be expired, the magistrate may it seems issue his warrant immediately without any fresh demand, for the time runs from the order. (6 East, 75). But if the warrant has been issued before and suspended by the appeal, it is better after the decision of the appeal to apply to the magistrate and lay the facts before him, before proceeding to the execution of the warrant. (Per Lawrence, J., Wooton v. Harvey, 6 East, 79; Paley, 234).

Suspension of warrant.

It seems doubtful if justices have in any case a right to revoke or suspend a warrant after they have once issued it, at least when third parties have become interested in having the execution of the warrant. If the warrant were a nullity, it might perhaps be suspended. But where justices are empowered to settle and allow the accounts of a public officer, and, in case of a neglect or refusal by such officer, for fourteen days after the allowance, to pay over the balance found to be due from him, are directed, upon application of the parties interested, to issue a distress warrant for such balance, they cannot after issuing a warrant in conformity with the power given to them, but before execution of it, order that the execution be suspended, on the ground of an error in the settlement of the accounts, unless the parties interested consent to such suspension. (Barons v. Luscombe, 3 Ad. & Ell. 589).

Form of warrant.

With respect to the warrant of distress itself, it is directed to the constable or other proper officer of the parish or district in which the goods to be distrained upon are to be found. It then shortly recites the conviction, and commands the officer to levy the sum specified, directing to whom it is to be paid. It should state when the distress is to be sold. (27 Geo. II. c. 20, post, 325). It should be warranted by the conviction. (Reg. v. Wyatt, 2 Ld. Raym. 1189; Rogers v. Jones, 3 B. & Cres. 409; Daniel v. Phillips, 5 Tyr. 293). And all those facts must appear upon the face of it which are necessary to give jurisdiction to the justice over the subject-matter. (Day v. King, 5 Ad. & Ell. 359; Johnson v. Reid, 6 M. & W. 124). Very often the form of the warrant is prescribed by the act allowing it to be issued.

Should be in writing, &c.

The warrant must be in writing, and in general under the hand and seal of the magistrate. (See Hutchinson v. Lowndes, 4 B. & Ad. 118; "War- rant," Vol. VI.) But in Padfield v. Cabell, (Willes, Rep. 411), it was held that a warrant of distress, granted by two justices under stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 23, which refers to stat. 12 Car. II. c. 24, s. 45, on a conviction for selling spirituous liquors without a license, need not be under the seals of the justices; it is sufficient if it be under their hands. (See further "Warrant," Vol. VI.)

When warrant bad in part, is bad for the whole.

If one warrant only be made for levying a good and a bad rate, the warrant, it seems, is bad for the whole, and the distress cannot in any way be supported. (2 W. Bla. 1330).

One distress under several warrants, one of which is defective.

But if a joint distress be made under four several warrants, for four several rates, of which one is bad, the distress is not therefore void. If a party enter and make a joint distress for four several rates, being furnished for that purpose with four warrants, one of which is bad, he may in a replevin for such distress justify under the good warrants and abandon the bad one; and if the causes of taking are distinct, and the avowries separate, he will be entitled to a return of all the goods. Where some of the avowries justified the whole taking under good warrants only, and the plaintiff alleged in answer to each of the avowries, that the whole distress was taken jointly under the four warrants, of which one was bad, and the defendant did not on the record contradict that allegation; it was held, nevertheless, that the defendant was entitled to judgment and a return of all the goods. But in such case an action may possibly be maintained for an excessive distress. (Governor, &c. of Poor of City of Bristol v. Wait, 1 Ad. & Ell. 264; Burn's J. 27th ed. 992).

Distress for several rates where some invalid.

In replevin the defendants made avowry under a distress warrant for poor rates. The warrant was to levy a gross sum, made up of several rates, some of which had not been published on the Sunday after allowance, but the plaintiff had not appealed against them; held, however, that as the rates, of which due notice had not been given, were invalid, the distress was illegal. (Sibbald v. Roderick, 11 Ad. & Ell. 38; and see Charlton v. Alway, 11 Ad. & Ell. 993).

Who to execute it.

The constable or parish officer, or other known officer in a borough or other special jurisdiction, is the proper person to execute the warrant. (Paley, 235). He is bound to execute and return the warrant, if delivered to him in a reasonable time, and is punishable for neglect. (Fortes. 127; 2 Lord Raym. 1189; 1 Salk. 380, post, 329).

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, s. 6, (post, 329), constables may execute warrants addressed to them in their character of constables out of their precincts, provided it be within the jurisdiction of the justice granting or backing the same.

The constable is not protected by the warrant, though it be valid on the face of it, if the justices have no jurisdiction to issue it; but if the justices have jurisdiction, and merely act inverso ordine, or irregularly, the constable will then be protected by the warrant. (Morrell v. Martin, 4 Scott, N. R. 300).

Mode of execution.

The mode of executing warrants in general will be found treated of under title "Warrant," Vol. VI.

In cases of distress for the levying of penalties there seems to be no power to break open doors or gates, in case they are locked up or shut, unless such penalty or part thereof be given to the king; which matter may seem to require some consideration. (See 2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 5; 2 Jones, 233; Theobald v. Critchmore, 1 B. & Ald. 227; Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald. 592; Parton v. Williams, 3 B. & Ald. 330). And as to breaking open doors in general, post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.; "House," Vol. III.

It should seem that in general the law as to what may be taken in execution under a writ of fieri facias would be here applicable. (And as to which, see Tidd's Prac. 9th ed. 1001, &c.; 1 Arch. Pr. by Chit. 425).

What may be seized.

It has been decided that averia carucæ or implements of trade may be distrained for a poor's rate, although there be other sufficient distress; for the distress in this case is in nature of an execution. (Hutchins v. Chambers, 1 Burr. 579; Com. Dig. Distress, C.)

If the party convicted be a feme covert, the goods of the husband are not in general liable to be distrained on, unless there be an express authority for it in the act of Parliament allowing the distress, as there is in the 22 Car. II. c. 1. (See 11 Co. 61 b; Paley, 237). Against feme covert.

The constable distraining has no power to impound the goods on the premises, and cannot remain longer than a reasonable time to enable him to remove the goods. (Peppercorn v. Hofman, 9 M. & W. 618). Impounding distress on premises.

By the 27 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2, infra, the officer, upon the execution of the warrant, is bound, if required, to show it to the person whose goods are distrained, and to suffer a copy of it to be taken. Showing warrant.

Sale.]—Before the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, there was no time limited for the sale of the goods; by section 1 however of that act it is enacted, "that in all cases where any justice of the peace is or shall be required or empowered, by any act of Parliament, to issue a warrant of distress for the levying of any penalty inflicted, or any sum of money directed to be paid by or in consequence of such act, it shall be lawful for the justices granting such warrant therein to order and direct the goods and chattels so to be distrained to be sold and disposed of within a certain time to be limited in such warrant, so as such time be not less than four days, nor more than eight days, unless the penalty or sum of money for which such distress shall be made, together with the reasonable charges of taking and keeping such distress, be sooner paid." Justices to limit in warrants of distress the time for sale. 27 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 1. Not less than four, nor more than eight days.

It had before been solemnly resolved that these words in an act of Parliament, "to be levied by distress," must be understood of "distress and sale." (R. v. Speed, 1 Salk. 379, Carth. 502; 1 Ld. Raym. 583, S. C.; Morley v. Stacker, 6 Mod. 83; Com. Dig. Distress, D. 7).

The sale ought to be by the officer for ready money, and if he sells on credit, he will be liable for the produce. (Semble, Morley v. Stacker, 6 Mod. 83). Should be for ready money.

It is doubtful whether a sale under a defective or void warrant passes any property in the goods even to a bonâ fide purchaser. (Lock v. Sellwood, 1 G. & Dav. 366). Under a void warrant.

Costs and Charges.]—Before the 18 Geo. III. c. 19, (ante, 179), except where special provision was made for levying the costs and charges, no more than the mere penalty could in any case be levied. That act, however, first empowered the justice to give costs, and at the same time authorized the recovery of the amount in addition to the penalty, if under £5. If the penalty amounts to or exceeds that sum, the costs are still to be deducted out of it, provided the deduction does not exceed one-fifth of the penalty. Costs and charges.

The costs of the distress are given by several statutes, in certain cases of warrants of distress; though it seems, from the case of Moyse v. Cocksedge, (Will. 636), that such a power is impliedly given in all acts that authorize the levying of a sum of money by a warrant of distress.

To remove all doubts, however, the stat. 27 Geo. II. c. 20, after authorizing by sect. 1, supra, the sale of the distress in case of non-payment of the penalty, &c., and costs, by sect. 2 enacts, "that the officer making such distress shall and is hereby empowered to deduct the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling such distress, out of the money arising by such sale; and the overplus (if any) after such charges, and also the said penalty or sum of money shall be fully satisfied and paid, shall be returned on demand to the owner of the goods and chattels so distrained; and the officer so executing such warrant, if required, shall show the same to the person whose goods and chattels are distrained, and shall suffer a copy thereof to be taken." Officer to deduct charges of taking, keeping, and selling. 27 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 2. Copy of warrant.

Quakers excepted.

Sect. 3. But this shall not extend to alter any provisions relating to distresses to be made for the payment of tithes and church-rates by the people called Quakers, contained in stats. 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 34, and 1 Geo. I. stat. 2, c. 6. (See the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 6, tit. "Church or Chapel," Vol. I.)

Mode of ascertaining amount of charges.

There is no power given by this act to the justices to ascertain such charges; therefore it seemeth that the officer executing the warrant shall be the sole judge thereof in the first instance; and afterwards, if the owner of the goods distrained shall be dissatisfied, the reasonableness thereof shall be determined by a judge and jury upon an action brought.

But by special statutes, this power of ascertaining the charges of distress and sale is sometimes given to the justices, as is set forth under the respective titles throughout this work.

Quakers' tithes and church and other rates, taxes, &c.

The above-mentioned statutes of the 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 34, and 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 6, relate not only to tithes and church rates, (by which last seemeth only to be understood the churchwardens' rate for the repair and other uses of the church), but also to any customary or other rates, dues, or payments belonging to any church or chapel, which of right by law and custom ought to be paid for the stipend or maintenance of any minister or curate officiating in any church or chapel. Therefore, for any thing that appears from the words of this statute, unless it be in the case of tithes or church rates, the justices may order the distress for those other dues and payments to be detained for a certain time, and the officer may deduct the charges not only of distraining, but also of keeping and selling the distress; whereas by those former acts above mentioned, the officer was only allowed to deduct the necessary charges of distraining.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 17, (tit. "Church," Vol. I.), the provisions of the 57 Geo. III. c. 93, (ante, 304), regulating the costs of distresses for rent not exceeding 20*l.*, are extended to distresses not exceeding 20*l.* for land tax, assessed taxes, poor's rates, church rates, tithes, highway rates, sewers rates, or any other rates, taxes, impositions, or assessments whatever.

Defendant removing out of jurisdiction.

Defendant removing out of Jurisdiction of the Justice.]—Formerly there was no means of levying the penalty if the offender was not possessed of sufficient goods to answer it within the jurisdiction of the convicting magistrate, for the levy could not be made elsewhere.

Where distress cannot be found in the jurisdiction of the justices granting warrants, it may be levied in any other place.

33 Geo. 3, c. 55, s. 3.

But now, by stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 55, s. 3, reciting, "And whereas warrants of distress granted by justices of the peace are sometimes ineffectual, by reason of the goods and chattels of the person, against whom such warrants are granted, being out of the jurisdiction of the justice granting the same," it is enacted, that in all cases where any penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money may by warrant of any justice of the peace be directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of any person, if sufficient distress cannot be found within the limits of the jurisdiction of such justice, on oath thereof made by one witness before any justice of any other county or place, (which oath shall be by him certified by indorsement on such warrant), such penalty, forfeiture, fine, or other money, or so much thereof as may not have been before levied or paid, shall and may, by virtue of such warrant and indorsement, be levied by the person to whom such warrant was originally directed, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of such person in such other county or place; to be applied in like manner as if sufficient distress had been found within the jurisdiction of the magistrate originally granting such warrant; and if no such distress can be found, such offender shall be proceeded against according to law: provided that no justice who shall indorse any certificate upon, or authorize the execution of any such warrant of distress which may not have been granted within his jurisdiction, shall be answerable for any Constable's jurisdiction.

Remedy by Commitment, &c. where no sufficient Distress.]—By stat. 5 Geo. IV c. 18, intituled "An Act for the more effectual Recovery of Penalties before Justices and Magistrates on Conviction of Offenders; and for facilitating the Execution of Warrants by Constables," reciting that, "by several acts, certain penalties and forfeitures are imposed on persons for offences committed against the directions of such acts, which are directed to be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace, or any magistrate or magistrates, within their respective jurisdictions; and on non-payment thereof, such penalties and forfeitures, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending the several convictions, are directed to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justice and magistrates respectively: and whereas no power is given to such justices and magistrates, on conviction of such offenders, to detain him, her or them in custody till return is made to the warrant of distress, for the purpose of ascertaining whether such offenders have any goods and chattels to satisfy such penalties, forfeitures, costs and charges, whereby such offenders frequently escape any punishment for their offences:" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, (31 Mar. 1824), whenever any penalty or forfeiture is or shall be directed to be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace, or magistrate or magistrates for any county, riding, soke, city, division or place, and such justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, is or are authorized and empowered, on the conviction of the offender or offenders, in default of payment of such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending such conviction, to cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal of such justice or magistrate, or hands and seals of such justices or magistrates, together with the reasonable costs of such distress and sale; and in case upon a valuation being taken of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders, sufficient distress for the payment of all such penalties and forfeitures and other costs and charges cannot be found, or in case it shall appear to such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, either by the confession of the offender or offenders or otherwise, that the offender or offenders has or have not sufficient goods or chattels whereupon the same may be levied, within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, no sale shall take place of the goods and chattels of such offender or offenders, but it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, to commit such offender or offenders to the common gaol or house of correction, for such time and in such manner as in such acts respectively mentioned and directed, then and in every such case it shall and may be lawful to and for such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, at his or their discretion, to order the offender or offenders so convicted to be kept and detained in safe custody until return shall be made to such warrant or warrants of distress, unless such offender or offenders shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, for his, her or their appearance before him or them on such day or days as shall be appointed for the return of such warrant or warrants of distress, such day or days not being more than eight days from the time of taking such security; and such security such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, is and are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise, as to him or them shall seem right and proper; or in case it shall appear to the satisfaction

In cases where penalties are directed to be recovered by distress, but no remedy provided where sufficient distress cannot be found, justices may commit the offender, &c.

Sect. 2. "And whereas by some acts certain penalties or sums of money are to be recovered before a justice or justices of the peace, or a magistrate or magistrates, and he or they is and are authorized to issue forth his or their warrant for levying such penalties or sums of money by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or defendant; but no further remedy is provided in case no sufficient goods and chattels can be found whereon to levy such penalties or sums of money; for remedy whereof, be it further enacted, that whenever it shall appear to any such justice or justices of the peace, magistrate or magistrates, by whom any penalty or sum of money is adjudged to be paid, upon the return of any such warrant of distress, that no sufficient goods and chattels of the offender or defendant can be found whereon to levy the sum adjudged to be paid, and all costs and charges, within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, or in case it shall appear to such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, either by the confession of the party or parties, or otherwise, that he, she, or they have not sufficient goods and chattels within the jurisdiction of such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, sufficient whereon to levy such sum of money, costs and charges, such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, at his or their discretion, and without issuing any warrant of distress, may proceed in such and the like manner as if a warrant of distress had been issued and a nulla bona returned thereon; and it shall be lawful for such justice or justices, or magistrate or magistrates, to issue forth his or their warrant for committing such offender or defendant to the common gaol for any term not exceeding three calendar months, unless the sum adjudged to be paid, and all costs and charges of the proceedings, shall be sooner paid; provided always, that the amount of such costs and expenses shall be specified in such warrant of commitment."

For a term not exceeding three months.

Sect. 3. "In the case of any offender or offenders committed to the common gaol or house of correction for default of payment of such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable costs and charges attending the conviction, if such offender or offenders shall at any time, during the period of his, her, or their imprisonment, pay or cause to be paid to the governor or keeper of the prison, the full amount of such penalty, together with the costs and charges, it shall be lawful for such governor or keeper of such prison, and he or they are hereby required forthwith to discharge such offender or offenders from his or their custody."

Justices empowered to commit to prison without issuing warrant of distress in certain cases.

Sect. 4. "And whereas cases may occur where the recovery of such penalty or forfeiture by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender or offenders may appear to the justice or justices of the peace, or magistrate or magistrates, for any county, riding, soke, city, division or place, to be attended with consequences ruinous, or in an especial manner injurious to the offender or offenders and their family or families; be it enacted, that the justice or justices, and magistrate or magistrates aforesaid, shall be empowered, and they are hereby authorized, in all cases and upon all such occasions as to them shall seem fit, and where such consequences are likely to arise, to cause to be withheld the issue of any warrant or warrants of distress, and to commit the offender or offenders aforesaid immediately after conviction, and in default of payment of the penalty or forfeiture, with costs and charges, to the common gaol or house of correction, for such time and in such manner as are in such acts respectively mentioned and directed: provided always, that it be by the desire or with the consent in writing of the party or parties upon whose property the penalty or forfeiture is to be levied."

5 Geo. 4, c. 18.

Consent of party.

Sect. 5. "Nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called Scotland."

Act not to extend to Scotland.

The above enactments of 5 Geo. IV. c. 18, extend only to the recovery of penalties or forfeitures before justices, and not to debts, (Wyles v. Cooper, 3 Ad. & Ell. 524); and therefore, where a master was ordered under the 20 Geo. II., and 4 Geo. IV., to pay his servant wages due to him, and refused to pay same, and there was no sufficient distress, it was held the justice had no power to commit him for the default in payment. (Ib.)

Act extends to penalties only.

The warrant of commitment under this enactment must be in writing; and the detention of the party without such written warrant cannot be justified for any longer time than is absolutely requisite for making it out. (Hutchinson v. Lowndes, 4 B. & Adol. 118). And see further as to commitments in execution, "Commitment in Execution," Vol. I.

Commitment must be in writing, &c.

Constables may in certain Cases execute Warrants out of their Precincts.]—By 5 Geo. 4, c. 18, s. 6, "whereas warrants addressed to constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, borsholders, or other peace officers of parishes, townships, hamlets or places, in their characters of and as constables, headboroughs, tithingmen, borsholders or other peace officers of such respective parishes, townships, hamlets or places, cannot be lawfully executed by them out of the precincts thereof respectively, whereby means are afforded to criminals and others of escaping from justice: for remedy whereof, be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful to and for each and every constable, and to and for each and every headborough, tithingman, borsholder or other peace officer for every parish, township, hamlet or place, to execute any warrant or warrants of any justice or justices of the peace, or of any magistrate or magistrates within any parish, township, hamlet or place, situate, lying, or being within that jurisdiction for which such justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, shall have acted when granting such warrant or warrants, or when backing or indorsing any such warrant or warrants, in such and the like manner as if such warrant or warrants had been addressed to such constable, headborough, tithingman, borsholder or other peace officer, specially by his name or names, and notwithstanding the parish, township, hamlet or place in which such warrant or warrants shall be executed, shall not be the parish, township, hamlet or place for which he shall be constable, headborough, tithingman or borsholder, or other peace officer, provided that the same be within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, so granting such warrant or warrants, or within the jurisdiction of the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, by whom any such warrant or warrants shall be backed or indorsed."

Constables may execute warrants out of their precincts, provided it be within the jurisdiction of the justice granting or backing the same.

See this section, and the reason of passing it, and law and decisions thereon noticed, under tit. "Constable," Vol. I.

It does not compel constables to execute warrants not directed to them out of their own precincts, nor does it apply to warrants of the judges. (Gimbert v. Coyney, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 469; Gladwell v. Blake, 1 C. M. & R. 636).

Return of Warrant.]—The constable is bound to certify to the justice, at the time assigned for the return of the warrant, what he has done upon it. (R. v. Wyatt, 1 Salk. 380). He need not, nor should he return the warrant itself, for that is for his own justification. (R. v. Wyatt, 2 Ld. Raym. 1196).

If the constable refuses to certify what he has done, or if he has levied the penalty and refuses to pay it over, he may be proceeded against by indictment or information; or it seems the justices before whom the warrant is returnable may fine him. (Paley, 244). The Court of Queen's Bench will not grant a mandamus. (R. v. Nash, 2 Ld. Raym. 996; Morley v. Stacker, 6 Mod. 83; "Constable," ante, Vol. I.)

Replevin, when it lies.

Replevin.]—It may be as well to observe, that where goods are taken by way of a levy, as for a penalty on a conviction under a statute, it is generally in the nature of an execution; and unless replevin be given by the statute, it will not lie, the conviction being conclusive and its legality not questionable in replevin. (Fenton v. Boyle, 2 New Rep. 399; 6 Bac. Abr. 5th ed. 58, Replevin, (O.); Com. Dig. Action, (M.); Willes, 673, n. b.; Wilson v. Weller, 1 B. & B. 57; Fawcet v. Fowlis, 7 B. & C. 398).

In some cases where a special inferior jurisdiction is given to justices, and they exceed it, replevin lies. (Willes, 673, n. b.) It lies for goods distrained under a warrant from commissioners authorized by act of Parliament to levy rates for specific local purposes, with power of distress. (1 Swanst. 301; and see Wilson v. Weller, 1 B. & B. 57). It lies to try the legality of a distress for poor rates, where there is a total want of jurisdiction; as if the party distrained on was not an occupier; (see Governors of Bristol Poor v. Wait, 1 Ad. & El. 264; Sibbald v. Roderick, 11 Ad. & Ell. 38; Fawcett v. Fowlis, 7 B. & C. 398; Dewell v. Marshall, 3 Wils. 442; Herbert v. Waters, 1 Salk. 205; 1 Ld. Raym. 59, S. C.; Fletcher v. Wilkins, 6 East, 283); or for a sewers' rate, (Pritchard v. Stephens, 6 T. R. 522; Hard. 478).

With respect to the question whether dogs are personal property, see Ireland v Higgins, Cro. Eliz. 125. It seems clearly they are.

Other dogs are not considered in law of any intrinsic value, and at common law are not the subject of larceny. (See 4 Bla. Com. 236). But several statutes have been passed to protect the property in them against theft, &c. (See "Larceny," Vol. III.) And it seems an action will lie for an injury to any reclaimed animal. (Com. Dig. Action sur Trover (C)).

Mischievous dogs.

Mischievous Dogs.]—A mastiff, going in the street unmuzzled, from the ferocity of his nature being dangerous and cause of terror to his Majesty's subjects, seemeth to be a common nuisance, and consequently the owner may be indicted for suffering him to go at large. (1 Russ. 303).

And in Smith v. Pelah, (2 Stra. 1264), it was ruled, that if any dog has once bit a man, and the owner having notice thereof keeps the dog, and lets him go about or lie at his door, an action will lie against him at the suit of the person bit, though it happened by his treading on the dog's toes; for it was occasioned by his not killing the dog on the first notice, and the safety of the King's subjects ought not afterwards to be endangered. (And see Blackman v. Simons, 3 Car. & P. 138).

If a man knowingly keeps a dog accustomed to bite, and any person coming by chance in his way be bitten, an action lies against the owner, though he had no malice against the particular individual. (Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., in the case of Townsend v. Wathen, 9 East, 280).

The harbouring a dog about one's premises, or allowing him to be or resort there, is a sufficient keeping of the dog to support this form of action. (Per Lord Tenterden, M'Hone v. Wood, 5 C. & P. 2).

Where the defendant's dog was reported to be mad, and the defendant tied him up, but he broke loose, and bit the plaintiff's child, who died of hydrophobia; it was held that the defendant was liable in damages to the amount of the apothecary's bill for attending the child; and Lord Kenyon, to prove the scienter, admitted evidence of reports in the neighbourhood that the dog had been bitten by a mad dog. (Jones v. Perry, 2 Esp. 482; differently reported, Peake's Evid. 5th ed. 292). The defendant was bound to destroy or effectually secure the dog.

And in Blackman v. Simons, 3 C. & P. 138, it seems to have been considered that in general the owner of a vicious animal, after notice of its having done an injury, is bound to secure it at all events, and is liable in damages to a party subsequently injured, if the mode he has adopted to secure it becomes ineffectual.

But if a dog accustomed to bite be let loose at night for the protection of the defendant's yard, and the injury arise from the plaintiff's incautiously going into the yard, after it has been shut up, no action will lie. (Brock v. Copeland, 1 Esp. 203).

And in a late case at Nisi Prius, it was considered that a person cannot recover damages for an injury received from the bite of a dog placed in a yard for the protection of outhouses, unless he had such reasonable and justifiable cause for being in the place where the dog was as might be pleaded in answer to an action of trespass; and if he had such cause, the circumstance of there being a notice on a board, in large letters, warning persons to beware of the dog, will not be an answer to an action by him for the injury, if it appear that he was not able to read. (Sarch v. Blackburn, 4 C. & P. 297).

If no suspicion be thrown upon the plaintiff by the defendant in such a case, it may be taken he had such cause, provided the dog is put in a place forming part of another entrance to the house of the defendant, although there may be other entrances of a more public description by which the plaintiff might have proceeded. (Sarch v. Blackburn, 4 C. & P. 297).

In the same case, Tindal, C. J., said, "I think a man has no right to place a dog so near the door of his house that any person coming to ask for money or on other business, might be bitten; and so with respect to a footpath, though it be a private one, a man has no right to put a dog with such a length of chain and so near that path that he could bite a person going along it."

Mischievous dogs.

Where the allegation in the declaration was that the dog was accustomed to bite mankind, and that the defendant knew it, it was held by Abbott, C. J., that proof that the defendant had warned a person to beware of the dog lest he should be bitten, was evidence to go to the jury in support of the allegation. (Judge v. Cox, 1 Stark. 285; and see 1 B. & Ald. 623). Though where it was alleged that the defendant knew that the dog was accustomed to bite sheep, the Court of King's Bench held that proof that the dog had jumped at a man and chased sheep, was not evidence to support the allegation. (Hartley v. Halliwell, 2 Stark. 214; 1 B. & Ald. 620, S. C.).

So, in an action for keeping a dog which bit the plaintiff, proof that the dog was of a fierce and savage disposition, and generally tied up by the defendant, and that defendant promised to make plaintiff a pecuniary recompense after the latter had been bit by the dog, was not considered sufficient. (Beck & Wife v. Dyson, 4 Camp. 198).

In order to maintain an action for biting by the defendant's dog, it must be proved also that he knew his dog to be used to bite; but one instance is sufficient in that case. (Anon., 12 Mod. 555; R. v. Huggins, 1 Ld. Raym. 1583).

If a man has a dog that kills sheep, this is not a public nuisance, but the owner of the dog (knowing thereof) is liable to an action; but if he is ignorant of such quality, he shall not be punished for this killing; and in an action upon the case for such killing, the plaintiff shall be required to prove in evidence that the dog had used to kill sheep. (Anon., Dyer, 25; Het. 171).

And if a man keeps a dog accustomed to bite sheep, and he knows it, and notwithstanding he keeps the dog still, and afterwards the dog bites a horse, this shall be actionable, although he had been known before to bite sheep only; because the owner, after notice of the first mischief, ought to have destroyed or hindered him from doing any more hurt. (Jenkins v. Turner, 1 Ld. Raym. 110; Salk. 662, S. C.; Bull. N. P. 77).

Keeping noisy dogs.

Noisy Dogs.]—Generally speaking, an action will not lie for such things as merely abridge the gratification of the plaintiff in the enjoyment of his property; and where the plaintiff brought his action against the defendant for keeping his dogs so near the plaintiff's house that his family were prevented from sleeping during the night, and were much disturbed during the day, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, though no evidence was given by him, the court refused to grant a new trial. (Street v. Tugwell, Selw. N. P. 1047; see "Nuisance," Vol. V.)

Dogs straying. Trover.

Dogs straying.]—An action of trover was brought for a pointing dog. The plaintiff proved the dog to be his property, and that it was found at the defendant's house twelve months after it was lost. The defendant said the dog strayed there casually, and demanded 20*s.* for twenty weeks' keeping before he would deliver up the dog. A verdict was given for the plaintiff, subject to the opinion of the court whether this refusal amounted to a conversion of the dog. But the counsel for the defendant declined arguing the question; and the plaintiff had judgment. (Binstead v. Buck, 2 Bla. Rep. 1117).

Dog-carts prohibited in the metropolitan police district.

Dog-carts.]—The 2 & 3 Vict. c. 47, s. 56, (the metropolitan police act), enacts, that after the 1st day of January, 1840, every person who within the metropolitan police district shall use any dog for the purpose of drawing, or helping to draw, any cart, carriage, truck, or barrow, shall be liable to a penalty of not more than 40*s.* for the first offence, and not more than 5*l.* for the second and any following offence.

Mad dogs.

Mad Dogs.]—And by the same statute, s. 61, "it shall be lawful for any constable belonging to the metropolitan police force to destroy any dog or other animal reasonably suspected to be in a rabid state, or which has been bitten by any dog or animal reasonably suspected to be in a rabid state; and the owner of any such dog or animal who shall permit the same to go at large after having information or reasonable ground for believing it to be in a rabid state, or to have been bitten by any dog or other animal in a rabid state, shall be liable to a penalty (of) not more than 5*l*."

Dogs attending Carts on Turnpike Roads.]—By the 4 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 76, these must be fastened to the cart, under a penalty not exceeding 20*s*. (See "Highway," "Turnpike," Vol. III.)

Dogs' collars.

Dogs' Collars.]—A remark has been made by Sir John Fielding, in his "Observations on the Penal Laws," which ought to be repeated here. He "recommends it to all persons to put brass or steel collars on their dogs' necks, with the name and place of abode of their owners, and to fasten them with a padlock; for the stealing such collars being felony, it will facilitate the punishing of the offender; and the dog, when found, is recoverable by action."

Egyptians.

Gypsies.

THESE are a strange kind of commonwealth among themselves, of wandering impostors and jugglers, who made their first appearance in Germany about the beginning of the sixteenth century, and have since spread themselves all over Europe and Asia. They were originally called Zinganees by the Turks, from their captain Zinganeus; who, when Sultan Selim conquered Egypt, about the year 1517, refused to submit to the Turkish yoke, and retired into the deserts, where they lived by rapine and plunder, and frequently came down into the plains of Egypt, committing great outrages in the towns upon the Nile, under the dominion of the Turks. But being at length subdued and banished from Egypt, they dispersed themselves in small parties into every country in the known world; and, as they were natives of Egypt, a country where the occult sciences, or black art, as it was called, was supposed to have arrived to great perfection, and which, in that credulous age, was in great vogue with persons of all religions and persuasions, they found the people, wherever they came, very easily imposed on. (Mod. Univ. Hist. vol. xliii. p. 271).

In the compass of a very few years, they gained such a number of idle proselytes, who imitated their language and complexion, and betook themselves to the same arts of chiromancy, begging, and pilfering, that they became troublesome, and even formidable, to most of the states of Europe. Hence they were expelled from France in the year 1560, and from Spain in 1591. And the government in England took the alarm much earlier; for, in 1530, they are described by the statute of the 22 Hen. VIII. c. 10, as "outlandish people, calling themselves Egyptians, using no craft nor feat of merchandize, who have come into this realm, and gone from shire to shire, and place to place, in great company, and used great, subtil, and crafty means to deceive the people; bearing them in hand, that they by palmestry could tell men's and women's fortunes; and so, many times, by craft and subtilty have deceived the people of their money, and also have committed many heinous felonies and robberies." Wherefore they are directed to avoid the realm, and not to return, under pain of imprisonment, and forfeiture of their goods and chattels: and, upon their trials for any felony which they may have committed, they shall not be entitled to a jury de medietate linguæ. And afterwards it was enacted by stat. 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 4, and 5 Eliz. c. 20, that if any such persons shall be imported into this kingdom, the importer shall forfeit 40*l.* And if the Egyptians themselves remain one month in this kingdom, or if any person being fourteen years old, whether a natural born subject or stranger, which hath been seen or found in the fellowship of such Egyptians, or which hath disguised him or herself like them, shall remain in the same one month at one or several times, it is felony without benefit of clergy. And Sir Matthew Hale informs us, that at one Suffolk assizes no less than thirteen gypsies were executed upon these statutes, a few years before the Restoration. But, to the honour of our national humanity, there are no instances more modern than this, of carrying these laws into execution. (4 Black. Com. 166). And by stat. 23 Geo. III. c. 51, the said stat. 5 Eliz. c. 20, is repealed.

of the common law of this realm, and shall, upon the trial of them or any of them therein, so tried in the county, and by the inhabitants of the county or place where they or he shall be apprehended or taken, and not per medietate linguæ, and shall lose the benefit and privilege of sanctuary and clergy," it is enacted, "that so much of the said act as is hereinbefore recited shall be, and the same is hereby repealed."

Escape.

See also "Rescue," "Prison-Breaking," Vol. V.

THIS is to be understood of escapes in criminal cases; and not in civil cases, as for debt, or the like.

Escape, what.

An escape is, where one that is arrested gaineth his liberty before he is delivered by the course of law. (Terms de la Ley).

Several kinds thereof.

Escapes are of three kinds.—1. By a person who hath the offender in his custody; this is properly called an escape.—2. Caused by a stranger; this is commonly called a rescue.—3. By the party himself; either without force, which is simply an escape, or with force, which is prison-breaking. Rescue and Prison-breaking are treated of under their respective titles: and this title treats only of escapes properly so called. Concerning which we will treat in the following order:

I. Escape by the Party himself, 338.
[13 Geo. III. c. 31; 44 Geo. III. c. 92; 45 Geo. III. c. 92; 54 Geo. III. c. 186.]

II. Escape suffered by a Private Person, 339.

IX. Aiding in attempting to escape, 345.
[16 Geo. II. c. 31; 4 Geo. IV. c. 64.]

X. Forms, 346.

I. Escape by the Party himself.

Escape by party himself.

As all persons are bound to submit themselves to the judgment of the law, and to be ready to be justified by it, whoever in any case refuses to undergo that imprisonment which the law thinks fit to put upon him, and frees himself from it by any artifice before such time as he is delivered by due course of law, is guilty of a high contempt, punishable with fine and imprisonment. (2 Haw. c. 17, s. 5; 4 Blac. Com. 129).

But escape, committed by the party himself, belongs more properly to the title "Prison Breaking," Vol. V.

Persons escaping from G. B. to Ireland, or from Ireland to G. B., to be apprehended and brought back.

By stat. 44 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3, offenders against whom any warrant shall be issued, escaping from Ireland into England, or Scotland, may be apprehended by an indorsed warrant, and conveyed to Ireland; and the fourth section of the act makes the same provision as to offenders escaping from England or Scotland into Ireland, being apprehended and conveyed back again to England or Scotland.

The apprehension of persons escaping from England into Scotland, and from Scotland into England, is provided for by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 31. (4.) What is an Escape, &c.

And as to admitting persons apprehended in England, Scotland, and Ireland, to bail, for bailable offences, see stat. 45 Geo. III. c. 92, and 54 Geo. III. c. 186; which latter stat. s. 2 enacts, that all warrants issued in England, Scotland, or Ireland, respectively may and shall be indorsed and executed, and enforced and acted upon, in any part of the United Kingdom, in like manner as is directed by stat. 13 Geo. III. c. 31, in relation to warrants issued or granted in England and Scotland respectively, as fully as if all the provisions of the said act were made part of this act, as to every part of the United Kingdom, and as to all justices of the peace, sheriff's officers, constables, or other officer or officers of the peace in Ireland, as well as in England and Scotland respectively.

See also post, "Warrant," Vol. VI.

II. Escape suffered by a private Person.

It seems to be a good general rule, that wherever any person hath another lawfully in his custody, whether upon an arrest made by himself or another, he is guilty of an escape, if he suffer him to go at large before he hath discharged himself of him, by delivering over to some other who by law ought to have the custody of him. (2 Hawk. c. 20, s. 1.) Escape by a private person.

And the law is generally the same, in relation to escapes suffered by private persons, as by officers. (Id.)

As to escapes procured by third persons, see post, "Rescue," Vol. V.

III. Escape suffered by an Officer.

Whenever an officer, having a party lawfully in his custody on a charge of felony, voluntarily permits him to escape, the officer is involved in the legal guilt of the crime charged on his prisoner. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 40). Escape by Offic

Where he negligently permits a prisoner to escape, he is guilty of a misdemeanor; and he is guilty in this degree if a prisoner in his charge commits suicide. (Dalt, J., c. 159).

It is laid down, that who ever, de facto, occupies the office of a gaoler, is liable to answer for a negligent escape, and that it is no way material whether his title to the office be legal or not. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 28). It appears to have been holden, that it is an escape in the constable to discharge a person committed to his custody by a watchman, as a loose and disorderly woman, and a street-walker, although no positive charge was made. (Rex v. Bootie, 2 Burr. 864).

As to what is an escape, and what a negligent, and what an involuntary one, see infra.

IV. What is an Escape, and what a negligent or voluntary one.

In order to make an escape there must be an actual arrest; and therefore if an officer, having a warrant to arrest a man, see him shut up in a house, and challenge him as his prisoner, but never actually have him in his custody, and the party get free, the officer cannot be charged with an What is an escape.

4. What is an Escape, &c.

escape. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 1; 1 Hale, 594). As to what is an arrest, see "Arrest," Vol. I.

Must be a previous arrest. And justifiable.

The arrest must be also justifiable; for, if it be either for a supposed crime, where no such crime was committed, and the party neither indicted nor appealed, or for such a slight suspicion of an actual crime, and by such an irregular mittimus as will neither justify the arrest nor imprisonment, the officer is not guilty of an escape, by suffering the prisoner to go at large. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 2).

And for a criminal offence.

And as the imprisonment must be justifiable, so it must be also for a criminal offence. (Id. s. 3).

And not detained only for fee.

The imprisonment must also be continuing at the time of the escape; and its continuance must be grounded on that satisfaction which the public justice demands for the crime committed. So that if a prisoner be acquitted, and detained only for his fees, it will not be criminal to suffer him to escape, though the judgment were that he be discharged, paying his fees; he being detained, not as a criminal, but only as a debtor: but if a person convicted of a crime be condemned to imprisonment for a certain time, and also "until he pays his fees," and he escape after such time is elapsed, without paying them, perhaps such escape may be criminal, for it was part of the punishment that the imprisonment be continued till the fees should be paid (a). (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 4; 1 Russ. C. & M. 531).

Too much liberty, an escape.

Also, it is an escape in some cases to suffer a prisoner to have greater liberty than by the law he ought to have; as to admit a person to bail, who by law ought not to be bailed, but to be kept in close custody. (2 Hawk. c 19, s. 5).

Losing sight, an escape.

So if a gaoler or other officer shall license his prisoner to go abroad for a time, and to come again, this is an escape, even though the prisoner return again. (Dalt. c. 159).

If the gaoler so closely pursue the prisoner who flies from him, that he retakes him without losing sight of him, the law looks on the prisoner so far in his power all the time, as not to adjudge such a flight to amount at all to an escape: but if the gaoler once lose sight of the prisoner, and afterwards retake him, he seems in strictness to be guilty of an escape. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 6).

But it must be by a known officer of the law. T. Hill, a yeoman wardour of the Tower, and Dod, the gentleman gaoler there, were indicted for the negligent escape of Colonel Parker, committed to the Tower for high treason. Lord Lucas, the constable of the Tower, had committed the colonel to the care of the defendants, to be kept in the house of the defendant Hill. The judges present (O. B., January, 1694) were of opinion, that the defendants were not such officers as the law took notice of, and therefore could not be guilty of a negligent escape. It was merely a breach of trust to Lord Lucas, their master.

Upon the same principle, S. Stick, a wardour of the Tower, who was indicted at the same sessions for the negligent escape of Lord Clancarty, was acquitted.

Voluntary escape, what.

Wherever an officer, who hath the custody of a prisoner, charged with and guilty of a capital offence, doth knowingly give him his liberty, with an intent to save him from his trial or execution, this is a voluntary escape. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 10).

Negligent escape, what.

A negligent escape is, when the party arrested or imprisoned doth escape against the will of him that arrested or imprisoned him, and is not freshly pursued and taken again before he hath lost the sight of him. (Dalt. c. 159).

---

(a) By 55 Geo. III. c. 59, fees payable by prisoners are abolished. See "Gaols," Vol. III.

(5.) Retaking after.

If a constable or other officer shall voluntarily suffer a thief, being in his custody, to go into the water to drown himself, this escape is felony in the constable, and the drowning is felony in the thief: otherwise, if the thief shall suddenly, without the assent of the constable, kill, hang, or drown himself, this is but a negligent escape in the constable. (Id.)

Suffering a prisoner to kill himself.

If a prisoner for felony break the gaol, this seems to be a negligent escape in the gaoler, because there wanted either that due strength in the gaol, that should have secured him, or that due vigilance in the gaoler or his officers to have prevented it; and therefore it is lawful for the gaoler to hamper them with irons to prevent their escape; for if gaolers might not be punished for this as a negligent escape, they would be careless either to secure their prisoners, or to retake them that escape. (1 Hale, 601).

Prisoner breaking gaol.

V. Retaking a Person escaped.

If an officer hath arrested a man by virtue of a warrant, and then taketh his promise that he will come again, and so letteth him go, the officer cannot, after arrest, take him again by force of his former warrant, for that this was by the consent of the officer. But if he return, and put himself again under the custody of the officer, it seems that it may be properly argued that the officer may lawfully detain him, and bring him before the justice, in pursuance of the warrant. (Dalt. c. 169; 2 Hawk. c. 13, s. 9).

Let go voluntarily, cannot be retaken.

But if the party arrested had escaped of his own wrong, without the consent of the officer, now, upon fresh suit, the officer may take him again and again so often as he escapeth, although he were out of view, or that he shall fly into another town or county, and bring him before the justice upon whose warrant he was first arrested. (Dalt. c. 169, p. 405).

Fresh suit.

And it is said generally in some books, that an officer who hath negligently suffered a prisoner to escape may retake him wherever he finds him, without mentioning any fresh pursuit: and indeed since the liberty gained by the prisoner is wholly owing to his own wrong, there seems to be no reason he should take any manner of advantage from it. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 12).

And wherever a person is lawfully arrested for any cause, and afterwards escapes, and shelters himself in a house, the doors may be broken open to take him, on a refusal of admittance. (2 Hawk. c. 14, s. 9).

Breaking open doors to retake.

It is perhaps the better opinion, that wherever a prisoner, by the negligence of his keeper, gets so far out of his power that the keeper loses sight of him, the keeper is punishable for the escape, notwithstanding he took him immediately after: and it is clear that he cannot excuse himself from an escape by killing a prisoner in the pursuit, though he could not possibly retake him; but must in such case be content to submit to such punishment as his negligence shall appear to deserve. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 13).

Retaking excuseth not the escape.

In the case of Ryland v. Lavender, 2 Bing. 65, 9 Moore, 71, S. C., the defendant, as gaoler, covenanted with the sheriff, among other things, to attend the quarter sessions, and to remove prisoners, under writs of habeas corpus, without permitting them to escape. The defendant being engaged at the quarter sessions, the sheriff, upon a writ of habeas corpus for the removal of a prisoner, directed his warrant to the defendant, and "W. W., by me (the sheriff) for this time only thereto specially appointed." W. W., who was the defendant's turnkey, proceeded with the prisoner towards the place of destination. The prisoner having escaped, the court of C. P. held that the sheriff having specially directed the warrant to W. W., the defendant was not liable upon his covenant.

VI. Indictment for an Escape.

Indictment.

The indictment for an escape, whether negligent or voluntary, must shew that the party was actually in the defendant's custody for some crime, or upon some commitment on suspicion; and it is not sufficient to say that he was in the defendant's custody, and charged with such a crime; for that is no allegation that he was in custody upon that charge: 2 Hawk. P. C. c. 97, s. 4. It should shew that the prisoner went at large, and the time when the offence was committed for which the party was in custody, not only that it may appear that it was prior to the escape, but also that it was subsequent to the last general pardon. An indictment for a voluntary escape must allege that the defendant feloniously and voluntarily permitted the prisoner to go at large, and must also show the species of crime for which the party was imprisoned; for it will not be sufficient to say, in general, that he was in custody for felony, &c. It is questionable, however, whether such certainty, as to the nature of the crime, be necessary in an indictment for a negligent escape, as it is not, in such a case, material whether the person who escaped were guilty or not. (1 Russ. 374, Chit. Coll. Stat. tit. Escape).

VII. Evidence, Trial, and Conviction for an Escape.

Gaoler not producing him, a conviction.

If the prisoner be of record in the court, and the gaoler being called cannot give an account where he is, this is a conviction of an escape; but seems not a conviction of a voluntary escape, unless the gaoler confesseth it: And the gaoler may be fined in such a case. (1 Hale, 603).

Felony to be tried before the escape.

And it seems to be clear, that a keeper who voluntarily suffers another to escape who was in his custody for felony, cannot be arraigned for such escape as for felony until the principal be attainted, for that the felony of the prisoner shall not be tried between the king and the keeper, because the prisoner is a stranger thereunto; yet he may be indicted and tried for it as a misprision before the attainder of the principal offender. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 26; 2 Inst. 591, 592).

Method of trial and conviction of offenders making escapes, &c.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 44. "And, to the intent that prosecutions for escapes, breaches of prison, and rescues, may be carried on with as little trouble and expense as is possible, be it enacted, that any offender escaping, breaking prison, or being rescued therefrom, may be tried either in the jurisdiction where the offence was committed, or in that where he or she shall be apprehended and retaken; and in case of any prosecution for any such escape, attempt to escape, breach of prison, or rescue, either against the offender escaping or attempting to escape, or having broken prison, or having been rescued, or against any other person or persons concerned therein, or aiding, abetting, or assisting the same, a certificate given by the clerk of assize, or other clerk of the court in which such offender shall have been convicted, shall, together with due proof of the identity of the person, be sufficient evidence to the court and jury of the nature and fact of the conviction, and of the species and period of confinement to which such person was sentenced."

Evidence.

The certificate to make it evidence under this enactment must set forth the effect and substance of the conviction. (Rex v. Watson, R. & R. 468).

Sect. 48. Gaol, though locally situate out of the county, &c. shall be deemed part of the county, &c., and subject to the jurisdiction of the justices of the county, &c. (8.) Punishment.

Sect. 96. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to the royal hospital of Bethlehem and prison of Bridewell, nor to the King's Bench or Fleet Prison, or to the prison of the Marshalsea, or Palace Courts, the general Penitentiary at Milbank (a), nor to the Penitentiary at Gloucester; nor to any ships or vessels provided in any port or navigable river for the reception and employment of convicts sentenced to transportation; nor to exempt any such convicts from any punishment or discipline to which they were liable by law before the passing of this act." Not to extend to certain prisons, &c.

VIII. Punishment of an Escape.

If a felon escape before arrest, it is not punishable in him as felony; but for the flight he forfeits his goods when presented. (Hale's Sum. 111). Escape before arrest

If a private person arrest a felon, and he escape by force from him, the township shall be amerced; but it seems it excuseth the party because he cannot raise power to assist him: but if a constable or other officer hath the custody of a prisoner, bringing him to the gaol, it seems that a simple escape by the rescue of the prisoner himself doth not wholly excuse him, because he may take sufficient strength to his assistance. (1 Hale, 601). Escape by private person.

Wherever a person is found guilty upon an indictment or presentment of a negligent escape of a criminal actually in his custody, he is punishable by fine and imprisonment, according to the quality of the offence (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 31; c. 20, s. 6; 1 Hale, 600, 604).

And it seems to be the better opinion, that the sheriff is as much liable to answer for a negligent escape suffered by his bailiff as if he had actually suffered it himself, and that the court may charge either the sheriff or bailiff for such an escape; and if a deputy gaoler be not sufficient to answer a negligent escape, his principal must answer for him. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 29; Rex v. Fell, 1 Ld. Raym. 424). Escape by officer.

Mr. Hawkins, although he is one of the most accurate of all writers, yet hath inserted in this place certain penalties for escapes which were expired above two hundred years before. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 34, 35. Vide the edition by Mr. Curwood).

It seems to be generally agreed, that a voluntary escape suffered by an officer amounts to the same kind of crime, and is punishable in the same degree, as the offence of which the party was guilty, and for which he was in custody; whether it be treason, felony, or trespass, (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 22): if the cause be expressed in the commitment. (2 Inst. 52. See "Commitment," Vol. I.)

But yet a voluntary escape is no felony, if the act done were not felony at the time of the escape made, as in case of a mortal wound given, and the party not dying till after the escape; but the officer may be fined to the value of his goods. (Dalt. c. 159).

Also a voluntary escape suffered by one who wrongfully takes upon him the keeping of a gaol, seems to be punishable in the same manner as if he was never so rightfully entitled to such custody; for that the crime is in both cases of the same ill consequence to the public; and there seems to be no reason that a wrongful officer should have greater favour than a rightful, and that for no other reason but because he is a wrongful one. (2 Hawk. c. 19, s. 23).

(a) As to escapes from the Penitentiary at Milbank, see 7 Will. IV. & 1 Vict. c. 91, s. 1.

But it seemeth to be clear that no one is punishable as for felony for the voluntary escape of a felon, but the person only who is actually guilty of it; and therefore that the principal gaoler is only fineable for a voluntary escape suffered by his deputy; for that no one shall suffer capitally for the crime of another. (Id. s. 27).

And therefore, although in all civil causes the sheriff is to be responsible, or the gaoler, at election, yet if the gaoler do voluntarily suffer a felon in his custody to escape, this, inasmuch as it reacheth to life, is felony only in the gaoler that was immediately trusted with the custody, and not in the sheriff. (1 Hale, 597).

For the escape must be voluntarily permitted in him that permitted it, which could not be in the high sheriff, though it were such in the gaoler, for he was not privy to it, and therefore could not do it feloniously; but it was a negligent escape in him, in trusting such a person with the custody of his prisoners that would be false to his trust, and therefore the sheriff shall pay, but not corporally suffer for the miscarriage of his gaoler. (1 Hale, 597, 598).

But although the felony for which a man is committed be not within clergy, yet the person who voluntarily suffers him to escape shall have the benefit of the clergy. (1 Hale, 599. See now ante, "Clergy, Benefit of," Vol. I.)

Escape of offenders sentenced by courts-martial, and conditionally pardoned.

The Mutiny Act in general enacts, that if any offender, under sentence of death by a court-martial, shall obtain a conditional pardon, [viz. on transportation], all the laws in force touching the escape of felons under sentence of death shall apply to such offender, and to all persons aiding, abetting, or assisting, in any escape or intended escape of any such offender, or contriving any such escape, from the time when an order [for his transportation] shall be made by a justice or baron, and during all the proceedings had for the purposes mentioned in the act. (See "Military Law," Vol. V., 6 Geo. IV. c. 5, s. 13; 6 Geo. IV. c. 6, s. 14).

A former statute, 37 Geo. III. c. 140, s. 6, contains a similar provision with respect to offenders under sentence of death by a naval court-martial, and allowed the benefit of a conditional pardon.

Aiding escape of prisoners of war.

The 52 Geo. III. c. 156, provides against the aiding of the escape of prisoners of war, and enacts, that "every person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any alien enemy of H. M., being a prisoner of war in H. M.'s dominions, whether such prisoner shall be confined as a prisoner of war in any prison or other place of confinement, or shall be suffered to be at large in H. M.'s dominions, or any part thereof, on his parole, to escape from such prison or other place of confinement, or from H. M.'s dominions, if at large upon parole," shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported for life, or for fourteen or seven years.

Sect. 2. Every person who shall knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any such prisoner at large on parole in quitting any part of H. M.'s dominions, where he may be on his parole, although he shall not aid or assist such person in quitting the coast of any part of H. M.'s dominions, shall be deemed guilty of aiding the escape of such person within the act. There is a further provision as to assisting such prisoners in their escape after they had got upon the high seas.

Sect 3. "If any person or persons owing allegiance to H. M., after any such prisoner as aforesaid hath quitted the coast of any part of H. M.'s dominions in such his escape as aforesaid, shall, knowingly and wilfully, upon the high seas, aid or assist such prisoner in his escape to or towards any other dominions or place, such person shall also be adjudged guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported as aforesaid." It is also provided, that offences committed upon the high seas, and not within the body of any county, may be tried in any county within the realm.

By sect. 4, the act is not to prevent offenders from being prosecuted as they might have been if the act had not been passed; but no person prosecuted otherwise than under the provisions of the act is to be liable to be prosecuted for the same offence under the act; and no person prosecuted under the act is, for the same offence, to be otherwise prosecuted.

(9.) Aiding in.

The offence of aiding a prisoner of war to escape is not complete if such prisoner is acting in concert with those under whose charge he is merely to detect the defendant, who was supposed to have assisted in the escape of other prisoners, and such prisoner having no intention to escape. (Rex v. Martin, Russ. & R. C. C. 196).

IX. Aiding in attempting to Escape.

Aiding a prisoner in an attempt to escape from gaol.

The mere aiding an attempt of persons confined to make an escape, though no escape should ensue, is made highly penal by stat. 16 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 1 (a), which enacts, "that if any person shall assist any prisoner to attempt his escape from any gaol, though no escape be actually made, if such prisoner were then attainted or convicted of treason, or felony, (except petty larceny), or lawfully committed to or detained in any gaol for treason or felony, (except petty larceny), expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer (b), he shall be guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years: and if such prisoner were then convicted of, committed to, or detained in gaol for petty larceny, or any other crime not being treason or felony, expressed in the warrant of commitment or detainer, or was then in gaol upon any process for debt, damages, costs, or sum of money, amounting to 100*l.*, he shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be liable to fine and imprisonment."

Assisting escape from a constable, or from any boat carrying felons for transportation.

Sect. 3. "If any person shall assist any prisoner to attempt to escape from any constable, or other officer or person who shall have the lawful charge of him in order to carry him to gaol, by virtue of a warrant of commitment for treason or felony, (except petty larceny), expressed (b) on such warrant; or if any person shall assist any felon to attempt his escape from on board any boat, ship, or vessel, carrying felons for transportation, or from the contractor for the transportation of such felons, or his agents, or any other person to whom such felon shall have been lawfully delivered in order for transportation, he shall be guilty of felony, and be transported for seven years."

All prosecutions on this act to be commenced within a year after the offence committed.

Stat. 16 Geo 2, c. 31, does not extend to cases where an actual escape is made.

The stat. 16 Geo. II. c. 31, does not extend to cases where an actual escape is made, but must be confined to cases of an attempt, without effecting the escape itself. Mr. J. Buller, in delivering the opinion of the judges (O. B. June, 1726), observed, "The statute purports to be made for the further punishing of those persons who shall aid and assist persons attempting to escape, and makes the offence felony: it creates a new felony; but the offence of assisting a felon in making an actual escape was felony before, and therefore does not seem to fall within the view or intention of the legislature when they made this statute." (Rex v. Tilley and others, O. B. April Sess. 1795; 2 Leach, 662; see also Rex v. Burridge, 3 P. Wms. 439; 1 Hale, 621; Rex v. Young and Chissell, Winchester Lent Ass. 1801, cor. Le Blanc, J. Burn, J. 24 ed. 935).

(a) This act is not actually repealed by the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, infra; but its provisions are thereby, in many respects, altered

(b) This has been held to mean "clearly and plainly expressed," so that a case where the commitment is on suspicion only, is not within this act. Walker's case, 1 Leach, 97; Greenuff's case, 1 Leach, 363; and Gibbon's case, 1 Leach, 98, note (a), S. P.

It is a misdemeanor, indictable at common law, to aid a person to escape from custody, though he be confined under the remand of the commissioners for the relief of insolvent debtors, and not on any criminal charge. (Reg. v. Allan, 5 Jur. 296, N. P. C.)

Delivering instruments is within the act, though the prisoner has been pardoned of the offences of which he has been convicted, on condition of transportation. (Rex v. Shaw, R. & R. C. C. 526).

Conveying vizors &c into prisons to assist prisoners to escape.

The stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 43, enacts, that "If any person shall convey or cause to be conveyed into any prison to which this act shall extend, ("Gaols," Vol. III.), any mask, vizor, or other disguise, or any instrument or arms proper to facilitate the escape of any prisoners, and the same shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, to any prisoner in such prison, or to any other person there, for the use of any such prisoner, without the consent or privity of the keeper of such prison, every such person shall be deemed to have delivered such vizor or disguise, instrument or arms, with intent to aid and assist such prisoner to escape or attempt to escape; and if any person shall, by any means whatever, aid and assist any prisoner to escape, or in attempting to escape, from any prison, every person so offending, whether an escape be actually made or not, shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof, shall be transported beyond the seas, for any term not exceeding 14 years." See a similar provision, stat. 10 Geo. II. c. 31, s. 2. See the 44th section of the 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, as to the evidence and the trial and conviction of offenders. (Ante, 342).

Escheat. See post, "Forfeiture."

Estray.

And herein also of goods waived.

Estray, what.

ESTRAY is, where any horses, sheep, hogs, beasts, or swans, do come into a lordship, and are not owned by any man. (Kitch. 23).

Where any horses, sheep, hogs, beasts, or swans.] Bees and other creatures of a wild nature are not within this description; and therefore not to be reckoned amongst stray goods. Nevertheless it seemeth that a swarm of bees, of which the owner hath lost sight, and consequently can make out no property, may be seized for the use of the king, or of the lord of the manor; for it is a maxim of the common law, that such goods whereof no one can claim property do belong to the king; and that which the king hath he may grant to another, and consequently another may prescribe to have the same within such a precinct or lordship. And therefore it is said, that if any take honey or swarms of bees within the demesne of the lord, it is inquirable in the court baron. (Kitch. 114).

Swans.]—Swans that are unmarked and wild (being at large and abroad) may be seized by the sheriff for the use of the king, by his prerogative. (Dalt. Sher. 80).

Also swans marked and tame may be estrays. (Kitch. 86). But it seemeth that no other fowl can be estray. (Wood, b. 2, c. 2).

Do come into a lordship.]—That is, where the goods have no right to be, and therefore an estray cannot be in such place, where the party hath a right of common. (Dalt. Sher. 79).

And are not owned by any man.]—Whereupon (as hath been said) the property accrueth to the king; and the cattle of the king cannot be estrays, nor forfeited as such to the lord of the manor. (Kitch. 81).

Waif, what.

Waif is, where a felon in pursuit waiveth the goods; or where the felon, for fear of being apprehended, thinking that a pursuit was made, having them with him in his possession, fleeth, and waiveth, casting away, or goeth from the goods; in these cases they shall be said to be waived in law. But if he hath not the goods with him when he fleeth being pursued, or for fear to be apprehended, they are not waived nor forfeited, but the owner may take them when he will, without any fresh suit. (5 Rep. 109; Dalt. Sher. 78).

But if the thief in his flight waive them, there the goods are forfeited to the king or lord of the liberty by the common law, if the felon upon fresh suit were not attainted at the suit of the owner of the goods. And the reason why waif is given to the king, and that the party shall lose his property in such case, is for default in the owner, that he pursued not freshly to apprehend the felon; for it concerneth the public that crimes do not remain unpunished. Therefore the law hath imposed this penalty upon the owner, that if the thief by his industry and fresh suit be not attainted at his suit, in an appeal for the same felony, he shall lose for his default all his goods, which the thief at the time of his flight waived. But if the thief had them not with him when he fled, having peradventure hid them, there no default can be in the party; and therefore they shall not be forfeited, for if he maketh fresh suit after notice of the felony it sufficeth. (5 Rep. 109).

Seizure thereof by the lord.

Heretofore waifs and strays were the finder's, by the law of nature; and afterward, the king's by the law of nations. (Dalt. Sher. 79).

Thus, one, as a bailiff or servant to the sheriff, seized a horse as an estray to the king's use, and proclaimed him according to law, and after the year and day sold him, and the sheriff accounted for him in the exchequer. (Id. 80).

But now kings have granted this and such like prerogatives unto their subjects within their liberties; so that waifs and strays are in many places the lord's of the franchise where they are found. (Id. 79).

And therefore waived goods and estrays shall be seized by the officer of the king to the use of the king; or by the officer or bailiff of the lord, who hath such things by grant of the king, or by prescription, to the use of the lord. (Id. 80).

But if one have a waif, and it be taken out of his manor, he shall have trespass without seizing, and though he do not seize it. (Kitch. 81).

Proclaiming the goods seized.

It seemeth to be agreed that waifs and strays ought to be proclaimed in the two next market towns; and that if they be not proclaimed, the owner may take the stray goods again at any time. And it seemeth to be the general tenor of the old books, that they ought also to be proclaimed in the church: which course it seemeth best to follow; to the end that the owner, who in this case is no wrong doer, may have reasonable mean to come at his goods again; that is to say, that the goods be proclaimed at the least thrice, to wit, in the two market-towns next adjoining to the place where they strayed on the market-days respectively, and at the church-door on a Sunday, as the people come out of the church. (Kitch. 23, 81, 105; Dalt. Sher. 79. Brownlow v. Lambert, Cro. Eliz. 716).

How waifs or strays are to be kept.

And they ought to be wreathed; and to be put into some several ground in an open place, and not in any covert of wood, that the owner may have a view of them; for if they be in covert the property is not changed, though they be there a year and a day. (Kitch. 23).

An estray is not to be used in any manner, except in case of necessity, as to milk a cow or the like; but not to ride a horse, for within the year and day he hath not any property in him. (Bagshawe v. Goward, Cro. Jac. 147, 148).

In Oxley v. Watts (1 T. R. 12) it is determined, that an action of trespass lies for working a horse taken as an estray.

Owner claiming.

He who taketh an estray may keep it until he be satisfied for the finding, keeping, and proclaiming thereof. (Dalt. Sher. 79) (a).

But the owner (if it be within the year and day) may take it without telling any marks, or making any proof of property; but this may be done upon the trial, if contested. Henley v. Walsh, 2 Salk. 686; 11 Mod. 89, S. C.)

The lord ought to make a demand of what the amends should be; and then if the party think the demand unreasonable, he may tender sufficient amends; and if the lord shall not accept it, this shall be settled by the jury upon trial.

But it is sufficient in this case to tender amends generally, without expressing any certain sum. For there is a difference between this case and that of a tender of amends for trespass. In that of a trespass, if the defendant plead a tender of amends, he must show what he tendered; for he must tender a certain sum. And the law puts this difficulty upon him because he is the wrong-doer; but the owner of the stray (as hath been said) is no wrong-doer; and it is impossible he should know how long his beast hath been in the lord's custody, nor

(a) But if any other person finds and takes care of another's property, not being entitled to it as an estray (nor being saved at sea, or in other cases where the law of salvage applies), the owner may recover it or its value, without being obliged to pay the expenses of keeping. (Binstead v. Buck, 2 Bla. Rep. 1117; Nicholson v. Chapman, 2 H. Bla. 254).

Eves Droppers.

how much will make a proper satisfaction. (Henly v. Walsh, 2 Salk. 686; 11 Mod. 89, S. C.).

In the case of goods waived; the owner may seize them twenty years after, if the lord of the franchise nor the king seized before; but if they are seized, then they become forfeited to the king, or the lord of the liberty. (Kitch. 82).

And this forfeiture is not like a stray, where, though the lord may seize, yet the party who is the owner may retake them within the year and day; but here the true owner cannot seize his own goods, though upon fresh suit within the year and day. (1 Hale, 541).

But this is not an absolute loss of the owner's goods, but rather an expedient settled by law to drive the owner to convict the felon by prosecuting his appeal; and therefore if he make fresh suit, and prosecute his appeal, and the felon be thereupon convict or attaint, and the fresh suit be inquired and found by verdict or inquest of office, he shall have restitution of the goods so waived. (1 Hale, 541; Foxley's Case, 5 Rep. 109).

Property accruing to the lord, on not claiming.

Waifs and strays not claimed within the year and day are the lord's. (Kitch. 23, 80, 81).

For where the lord hath a beast a year and a day, and it be cried in the church and markets, the property is changed. (Kitch. 80).

That is to say, after he hath had the beast a year and day from the time of the proclamation, and not from the time of the seizure; for after the first proclamation it becometh an estray, but not sooner. Henly v. Welch, 11 Mod. 89; 2 Salk. 686, S. C.)

If the estray within the year estray out of the manor, the lord may chase back the estray, unless it be seized by another lord who hath estrays; but if it be seized by such other lord, then the first hath lost all possibility of his gaining the property, and the other lord ought to proclaim it de novo. (Finch, 177; Kitch. 81; Hutt. 67).

After seizure the lord shall be charged for trespass done by an estray. (Hutt 67).

And he shall have a replevin if a stranger take it. (Hutt. 67). Or trespass. (Winch. 68).

Estreat.

ESTREAT (extractum) is used for the true copy or note of some original writing or record, and especially of fines and amerciaments imposed in the rolls of a court, to be levied by the bailiff or other officer. When however it is applied to a recognizance, it signifies that the recognizance itself is extracted or taken out from among the other records and sent up to the Exchequer. (4 Black. Com. 253).

As to the estreating of fines, penalties, for forfeitures and recognizances, see Geo. IV. c. 46, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 37.

See further as to Estreats, post, "Fines and Forfeitures."

Eves Droppers.

EVES Droppers are such as listen under walls or windows, or the eves of houses, to hearken after discourse, and thereupon to frame slanderous and mischievous tales; are a common nuisance, and presentable at a court leet: or are indictable at the sessions, and are punishable by fine; and are to find sureties for their good behaviour. (4 Black. Com. 168).

And Dalton says that night-walkers, that eve-drop men's houses, or cast men's gates, carts, or the like, into ponds, or commit other outrages or misdemeanors in the night, or shall be suspected to be pilferers, or otherwise like to disturb the peace, or that be persons of ill behaviour, or of evil fame or report generally, or that shall keep company with any such, or with any other suspicious person in the night, are liable to find sureties for their good behaviour.

Eves-droppers are indictable at the sheriff's torn as well as other dangerous and suspicious persons. (2 Haw. c. 10, s. 59). And it seems that a magistrate may also compel such persons to find surety for their good behaviour. (1 Haw. c. 61, s. 4; see "Surety for Peace," Vol. V.)

Evidence.

Evidence, what.

EVIDENCE in legal understanding doth not only contain matters of record, as letters patent, fines, recoveries, inrolments, and the like, and writings under seal, as charters and deeds, and other writings without seal, as court rolls, accounts, and the like; but in a larger sense it containeth also the testimony of witnesses, and other proofs to be produced and given, for the finding of any issue joined between the parties. And it is called evidence, because thereby the point in issue is to be made evident to the jury. (1 Inst. 283).

Doctrine of, same in civil and criminal proceedings.

The law has laid down certain rules respecting the admissibility and effect of evidence, and the order in which it should be adduced: and in the application of these there is no difference between criminal and civil cases,—what may be received in the one case may be received in the other, and what is rejected in the one ought to be rejected in the other, by Abbott, C. J., in Rex v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 155, and per Parke, B., in Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 312. A fact must be established by the same evidence, whether it is to be followed by a criminal or a civil consequence. Lord Melville's case, 29 How. St. Tr. 763. And see Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297; Rex on pros. of Jackson v. Cator, 4 Esp. 136, 9, 144; 2 East's P. C. 993; Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201 n.; Rex v. Watson, 2 Stark. 155; 4 Bla. Com. 356; 1 Chit. C. L. 556).

I. What should be proved.

What must be proved.

Before inquiring into the nature and mode of proof, it will be expedient to ascertain what parts of the charge contained in an indictment or information should be proved.

(1). In General.

(1). In general.

Generally every fact stated on the face of the indictment or information, which enters into the substance of the offence charged, as also all facts not so stated, but which are necessary to constitute the offence charged, must be proved. (See 2 Leach, 594).

Surplusage.

Averments stated in the indictment, if wholly unconnected with the charge, may be considered as surplusage, and need not be proved, (Id.): and see further as to what is surplusage, 1 Chit. C. L. 294, post, "Indictment," Vol. III.

Divisible averments.

It is sufficient to prove so much of the indictment as shows the defendant to have been guilty of the substantive crime therein stated, though not the full extent charged on him. (See R. v. Hunt, 2 Camp. 513). Thus on an indictment charging the defendant with having done, and caused to be done, a particular act, it suffices to prove either. (Id., and see post, "Indictment," Vol. III.) So where a man was charged with publishing a libel against magistrates, with intent to defame those magistrates, and also with intent to bring the administration of justice into contempt, Bailey, J., held, that proof of his having published it with either of those intentions would support the indictment. (R. v. Evans, 3 Stark. 35). The offence however of which he is convicted must be of the same class with that with which he is charged. (R. v. Westbeer, 1 Leach, 14; 2 Str. 1133, S. C.) Thus on an indictment for felony, if a misdemeanor only be proved, the prisoner must be acquitted, but he may be found guilty of a felony of lesser atrocity, as on indictment for murder, he may be found guilty of manslaughter; on an indictment for breaking a house and stealing, he may be convicted of simple larceny. (Dick. Sess. 351). So, on an indictment for misdemeanor in assaulting a constable in the discharge of his duty, the defendant may be convicted of a common assault. (Id.) If a man be charged with an offence as principal in the first degree, evidence of his being principal in the second degree will support the indictment, and e contrà. (Fost. 351; 9 Co. 67 b; Plowd. 98; Reg. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886; 1 Hale, 122; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 35, &c.) On an indictment for killing a sheep, with the intent to steal the whole carcase (now provided against by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 25), proof of killing, with intent to steal a part, is sufficient to support the charge. (R. v. Williams, R. & M. C. C. R. 107).

1. What should be proved.

Generally speaking, the evidence adduced must be relevant and confined to the issue. Therefore the prosecutor cannot generally injure the character of the defendant by giving in evidence other crimes not laid to his charge in the indictment; but when such crimes are connected with, and have a direct tendency to establish the guilt of the defendant in the specific crime charged, then they may be admitted in evidence. Thus, in high treason, though by 7 & 8 Will. III. c. 3, s. 8, no evidence shall be admitted or given of any overt act not expressly charged in the indictment; yet this does not prevent overt acts not laid from being given in evidence, if they be direct proof of any of the overt acts which are laid. (R. v. Rookwood, 4 St. Tri. 661, 697; Holt, 683; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 134). In an indictment against persons for a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats, evidence was admitted of the defendants having made false representations to other tradesmen besides those named in the indictment. (R. v. Roberts, 1 Camp. 400. See R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 171). In R. v. Hunt and Others, (3 Barn. & Ald. 566), upon an indictment for conspiring and unlawfully meeting for the purpose of exciting disaffection and discontent among his Majesty's subjects at Manchester, it was holden that the previous conduct of a portion of the assembly, in training, &c., and in assaulting persons whom they called spies, was competent evidence as to the general character and intention of the meeting, although the effect of it as to each particular defendant was a distinct matter for the consideration of the jury. It was also holden, that it was competent to show, as against Hunt, (who, though a stranger except by political connexion, had been invited to preside as chairman at the meeting), that at a similar meeting in another place, holden for an object professedly similar, certain resolutions had been proposed by that person; it being in its nature a declaration of his sentiments and views on the particular subject of such meetings, and of the topics there discussed. But the court held, that evidence of the misconduct of the military and others, in the subsequent dispersion of the meeting, was properly refused by the judge at the trial as irrelevant, and having no bearing upon the intention and objects of the meeting; which intention and objects obviously existed previously to the alleged misconduct of the military, attempted to be given in evidence. So where persons who had formed part of a mob obtained money from a party by advising him to give money to the mob, and were indicted for this as a robbery, it was held, that the prosecutor, to show that this was not bonâ fide advice, might give evidence of demands of money made by the same mob at other places before and afterwards in the course of the day, if any of the prisoners were present on those occasions. (Rex v. Winkworth, 4 C. & P. 444; and see Rex v. Mogg, 4 C. & P. 364). In a case where the prosecutor, suspecting the prisoner, had put marked money into his till, and caused him to be watched, evidence was admitted of several visits to the till by the prisoner, of several inspections of the till consequent upon them, and of the several results of those inspections, that the money was each time reduced, though it was objected that this was proof of several felonies. (Rex v. Ellis, 6 B. & Cres. 145; 9 D. & R. 174, S. C.) So on the trial of a robbery effected by a threat of a revolting description, evidence of an attempt by the prisoner to obtain the money at another time was allowed. (Rex v. Egerton, there cited; and see Rex v. Wylie, 1 New Rep. 94). So where a number of articles are found in the prisoner's possession, the mere probability that he stole them at different times is no ground for requiring the prosecutor to confine his evidence to one of them, if they might have been stolen at once. (Rex v. Dunn, R. & M. C. C. 148; and see post, "Rape," Vol. V.) Where evidence is for one purpose properly applicable to the issue, it is no objection that it also incidentally tends to prove a particular fact respecting which it is not legal evidence. The jury, however, should be cautioned as to the purpose to which such evidence is to be applied. (See Willis v. Bernard, 8 Bing. 376).

Knowledge and intent.

Knowledge and Intent, when material, must be made out by the prosecutor. He cannot, of course, make them out by direct evidence, unless when they have been confessed; but both may be gathered from the conduct of the party, as shown in proof; and when the tendency of his actions is direct and manifest, he must always be presumed to have designed the result when he acted. (Dick. Sess. 353; Rex v. Philipps, 6 East, 464). On an indictment for murder, former attempts of the defendant to assassinate the deceased are admissible in evidence; so are former menaces of the defendant, or expressions of vindictive feeling towards the deceased, or, in fact, the existence of any motive likely to instigate him to the commission of the offence in question. (See Arch. C. L. 73). So on an indictment for uttering forged notes, or counterfeit coin, evidence of previous utterings of other notes, or coin, was admitted, though they were not charged on the record. (Rex v. Ball, R. & R. C. C. 132; 1 Camp. 324, S. C.; Rex v. Wylie, 1 New. Rep. 92, &c.) But, in another case, where the second uttering had been made the subject of a distinct indictment, evidence of such uttering was, in the discretion of the judge, refused. (Rex v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 633; Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 359. But see Rex v. Kirkwood, Lewin, C. C. 103). From the cases of Rex v. Taverner, (Carr. C. L. 195), and Rex v. Smith, (4 C. & P. 411), it should seem that in order to enable the prosecutor to give in evidence other utterings subsequent to that charged in the indictment, they must in some way be connected with the principal case, or the notes or bills must be of the same manufacture, and precisely similar. Indeed, even with regard to previous utterings of forged notes, it seems doubtful whether they can be given in evidence to show a guilty knowledge, when not of the same description and denomination with the note in question. Such evidence, however, has sometimes been received. (See Rex v. Millard, Russ. & Ry. 245; and Rex v. Kirkwood, Lewin, C. C. 103).

Where several offences charged.

On an indictment for felony, embracing a number of charges essentially distinct, the court will, in its discretion, quash the indictment, or compel the prosecutor to elect on which charge he will proceed. (Rex v. Jones, 2 Camp. 132; Rex v. Galloway, R. & M. C. C. 234, id. 146). But, on an indictment for misdemeanors, it is otherwise; and several distinct offences, when charged, may be proved. (See id. Rex v. Benfield, 2 Burr. 984; Rex v. Flower, post, "Indictment," (several counts in), Vol. III.)

1. What should be proved.

Matters of defence, which should more properly come from the defendant, need not be proved. As a branch of this rule, in indictments on statutes where an exception or proviso is mixed up with the description of the offence, the correct rule is, that in cases where the subject of such averment relates to the defendant personally, or is peculiarly within his knowledge, the negative is not to be proved by the prosecutor, but, on the contrary, the affirmative must be proved by the defendant, as matter of defence. But, on the other hand, if the subject of the averment do not relate personally to the defendant, or be not peculiarly within his knowledge, but, on the contrary, either relate personally to the prosecutor, or be peculiarly within his knowledge, or at least be as much within his knowledge as within the knowledge of the defendant, the prosecutor must prove the negative. (Arch. C. L. 70). Thus, informations upon the game laws must negative the defendant's qualification to kill game: but this negative need not be proved upon the part of the prosecution; on the contrary, the defendant must prove the affirmative of it as matter of defence. (Rex v. Turner, 5 M. & Sel. 206). So on an information for selling ale without a license, it lies on the defendant, who has been shown selling ale, to prove his license. (Rex v. Hanson, 5 M. & Sel. 209). On the other hand, upon an indictment on stat. 42 Geo. III., c. 107, s. 1, which made it felony to course deer in an enclosed ground, without the consent of the owner, it was held, that the deer were coursed without the consent of the owner, was necessary to be proved upon the part of the prosecution. (Rex v. Allen; Rex v. Argent; Rex v. Chamberlain, R. & M. C. C. R. 154; Rex v. Rogers, 2 Camp. 654; Arch. C. L. 70). The owner himself, however, need not be called; his non-consent might be inferred from other circumstances, or proved by his agents. (R. & M. C. C. R. 154).

Matters of defence.

Exceptions.

Matter peculiarly in defendant's knowledge.

Presumptions of law, and those facts which the courts ex officio take notice of without proof, need not be proved; (see Williams v. The E. I. Company, 3 East, 192; Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp. 10, 12; Banbury Peerage case, 2 Selw. N. P. 709). The court will not take judicial notice of the rules made by the Poor Law Commissioners for the government of a union under stat. 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 76, s. 15. (Reg. v. Dolgelly Union, 8 Ad. & E. 561; 3 Nev. & P. 542). Nor that a particular street is not in a certain county, although it may be generally known to be in another. (Humphreys v. Budd, 9 Dowl. 1000). And as to what facts the courts will take notice of, see 1 Chit. Plead. 196 to 264.

Presumptions of law and facts ex officio noticed.

Where any act is required to be done by one, the omission of which would make him guilty of a criminal neglect of duty, the law presumes the affirmative, and throws the burden of proving the negative on the party who insists on it. (Williams v. The E. I. Company, 3 East, 192; Evans v. Birch, 3 Camp. 10; R. v. Hawkins, 10 East, 216; R v. Twyning, 2 B. & Al. 386). Where a party has acted in a public capacity, it will be presumed he was duly appointed; and this, whether the effect of such presumption be to charge himself with some breach of duty, or to charge a third party with some offence towards him in that particular capacity. Thus, on an indictment for the murder of a constable in the execution of his duty, it is sufficient that he was known to act as a constable, and his appointment need not be produced. (R. v. Gordon, 1 Leach, 515; 1 East, P. C. 352, S. C.) And on an indictment against a letter carrier for embezzlement under 2 W. IV. c. 4, proof that he acted as a letter carrier will suffice, without producing his appointment. (R. v. Barrett, 6 C. & P. 124).

Negative, involving culpable omission.

The identity of the defendant must be established, and this is for a jury to decide on. (See 1 Chit. C. L. 558). The question of the defendant's guilt frequently also involves that of the identity of other parties, as in cases of forgery and bigamy. In the latter case it will not suffice to prove, by the testimony of a person present at the second marriage, that the female was married by the name mentioned in the indictment; it must be proved that such was her name. (R. v. Drake, Lewin, C. C. 25). In order to identify a person in court with one whom the witness has described, the attention of the witness may be directed to the person in court, and he may be asked whether that is the person of whom he has spoken. (R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. C. N. P. 128). Where an indictment charged that a person shot at one Harvey Garnett Phipps Tuckett, it was held that Tuckett's card could not be given in evidence against him on his trial to prove the name, as its contents were not shown to have been communicated to him. (Reg. v. Douglas, 1 Car. & M. 193).

Identity.

1. What should be proved.

(2). In Particular.

(2). In particular. Venue and place.

Venue and Place.]—The offence must in general be proved to have been committed in the county in which the defendant is indicted, unless in particular cases, where the legislature has by act of Parliament dispensed with it; and as to which, see post, "Indictment," (Venue in), Vol. III.

If the offence be not proved to have been committed in the county or other extent of the court's jurisdiction, the defendant must be acquitted. See, as to the evidence of publication of a libel in the county wherein defendant is indicted, post, "Libel," Vol. III.—also, "Forgery," Vol. III.—"Larceny," Vol. III.—"Treason," Vol. VI.

It is in no case, not even in treason or murder, in general necessary to prove that the offence was committed at the precise village, parish, or place laid in the indictment; but it suffices to prove that it happened anywhere within the proper county. (See 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84). In a late case, where an indictment for robbery stated that it was in a field near the king's highway, and the robbery was not proved to be near any highway, it was considered sufficient. (R. v. Wardle, R. & R. C. C. 9).

There are, however, some exceptions to this rule, as, where the place is the essence of the crime, as in indictments for burglary, or for not repairing, or any other nuisance to a highway. (2 Hall, 179, 244; 4 Bla. Com. 306: 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 84; and see "Game," (Night Poaching), Vol. III.)

So, where the place stated is so stated as matter of local description and not as venue merely, it must be proved as stated.

So, if the indictment be on a particular statute, which gives the penalty to the poor of the parish in which the offence was committed, the offence must be proved to have been committed in the parish stated in the indictment.

It was formerly thought that in indictments for treason or felony, if there be no such place within the county as that alleged in the indictment, the defendant must be acquitted according to the 9 Hen. V. st. 1, c. 1, which was supposed to declare such an indictment void; but that the disproof lies with the defendant. In a late case, however, where the prisoner was indicted for setting fire to a stack of beans, at Normanton in the Wold, and it appeared, that though there was a hamlet, there was no parish of that name, nor any parish of the name of Normanton; it was held, that the offence having nothing of locality in it, the fact of there being no such place in the county, was matter only for plea in abatement. (R. v. Woodward, R. & M., C. C. 313; and see R. & M., C. N. P. 433. Post, "Indictment," Vol. III.)

Time.

Time.]—It is in no case necessary to prove the precise day, or even year, laid in the indictment, except where the particular time enters into the essence of the offence. (See per Lawrence, J., Purcell v. Mc Namara, 9 East, Rep. 162; and see 2 Inst. 218; Holt, 301; 2 Hawk. c. 23, s. 88). As in an indictment for burglary, though it is necessary to prove that it took place in the night-time, yet it is not necessary to prove strictly that it took place at the hour or day stated in the indictment. (2 East's

P. C. 513). And where a statute, without altering the nature of the offence, provides, that if committed after a certain day it may be tried in the county where the party is apprehended, and may be laid as committed in that county, it is no objection that the day laid in the indictment is previous to the specified day, if the offence was not actually committed till after it. (Rex v. Treharne, R. & M., C. C. 298).

1. What should be proved.

So in an indictment for setting fire to a barn, stating it was set fire to in the night-time, it is not necessary to prove it was so, for there was no necessity for the averment that the offence was committed in the night. (2 East's P. C. 1021, 1035).

An overt act, or acts of treason, may be proved to have been committed on a day different from that stated in the indictment. (Fost. 8, 9; 1 East's P. C. 125).

In cases where the day is stated as matter of description, as in describing the date of a deed or other written instrument, the variance would be fatal, unless in the case of indictments for misdemeanor, when the indictment may be amended for such a defect under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 15. (Ante, "Amendment," Vol. I. See Coxon v. Lyon, 2 Camp. 307, n.; Freeman v. Jacob, 4 Camp. 209; Green v. Rennett, 1 T. R. 656).

Where there are several offences, and they are described as having been committed on such a day and divers days and times afterwards, evidence cannot, it seems, be admitted to prove more than one offence prior to the day named. (B. N. P. 86; 1 Saund. 24, n.; 1 Stark. C. N. P. 351). And if a person be charged with a burglary and stealing the goods, the prosecutor, on failing to prove that these facts were committed on the day laid in the indictment, cannot be admitted to prove that a distinct larceny was committed on a prior day. (2 Leach, 708).

Name of prosecutor and third persons.

Name of Prosecutor and third Persons.]—A variance in proof between the real name of a prosecutor or third party and that stated in the indictment will be fatal, unless such name can be rejected as a surplusage. (R. & M. C. C. 1; 2 East's P. C. 593; 2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 72. See the question raised in R. v. Messingham, R. & M. C. C. 257). But if the name of the prosecutor be that by which he is usually known, it will suffice. (R. v. Norton, R. & R. 510). And in a late case where the prisoner was indicted for stealing the goods of Richard Pratt, and it appeared his name was Richard Jeremiah Pratt, but that he was equally well known by the name of Richard Pratt, the indictment was held sufficient. (Rex v. ——, 6 C. & P. 408). See the mode of stating names, &c., post, "Indictment," Vol. III. In an indictment for stealing, to the amount of 40*s.*, in the dwelling-house of A. B., under the repealed act, 12 Anne, c. 7, the defendant was acquitted of the capital part of the charge when not strictly proved to have been the house of A. B., and found guilty of the simple larceny. (Leach, 339, n. a, 252).

If a party be described as a person to the jurors unknown, and it appear in evidence that his name was known at the time of finding the bill of indictment, the defendant will be acquitted. (See Rex v. Walker, 3 Camp. 264; Holt's C. N. P. 595).

Written instruments.

Written Instruments]—A written instrument set out in the indictment must be proved as alleged, or a variance will be fatal, unless allowed to be amended under the provisions of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 15, (ante, "Amendment," Vol. I.) which allows amendments in the courts at Westminster, and Oyer and Terminer, on variances in proofs of written and printed instruments in misdemeanors. (See various instances as to what are variances in setting out written instruments, post, "Indictment," Vol. III.—"Libel," Vol. III.—"Forgery," Vol. III.—"Perjury," Vol. V.)

Goods, &c.

Goods, &c.]—In an indictment for an offence relating to personal property, the evidence must correspond with the description of the goods in the indictment; as, in larceny, an indictment for stealing a pair of shoes cannot be supported by evidence of a larceny of a pair of boots. (Archb. C. L. 66). And this will be the case even when the goods are described in the indictment with unnecessary particularity, unless the unnecessary part of the description can be rejected, as surplusage. (R. v. Edward, R. & R. 497). So on an indictment on 15 Geo. II. c. 34, and 14 Geo. II. c. 6, (which made it a felony to steal any ox, cow, or heifer), charging defendant with stealing a cow, proof of its being a heifer will not suffice; for the statute having mentioned both cow and heifer, proved that the words were not considered by the legislature as synonymous. (R. v. Cooke, 2 East's P. C. 617; Leach, 123; and see R. v. Loom, R. & M. C. C. 160; R. v. Puddefoot, id. 247; R. v. Beaney, R. & R. C. C. 416; R. v. Welland, id. 494. See post, "Indictment," Vol. III.)

2. Degree and kind of proof.

Number.

A variance in the number of the goods, if such precise number stated do not constitute the essence of the offence, is immaterial.

Sums.

Sums]—It is in general unnecessary to prove the precise sum laid in the indictment, unless the precise sum forms the essence of the offence, or is stated as matter of description. Thus in an indictment for extortion, or taking a greater brokerage than is allowed by act of parliament, it is not necessary to prove the taking of the precise sum laid. R. v. Gilham, 6 T. R. 265; Grimwood v. Barrit, id. 462; Pope v. Foster, 4 T. R. 590). Where the value of property is essential to constitute an offence, it must be proved to have been sufficient for that purpose. (See post, "Indictment," Vol. III.)

II. Degree and kind of Proof.

And herein of,—1. Best Evidence;—2. Secondary Evidence;—3. Presumptive evidence;—4. Hearsay Evidence;—5. Dying Declarations;—6. Confessions;—7. Opinions;—8. Evidence of Character.

(1). Best Evidence.

(1). The best evidence is required.

It is a general rule that the best evidence must be given of which the nature of the thing is capable. (Gilb. Ev. 13; Bull. N. P. 293).

The true meaning of this rule is, not that the courts of law require the strongest possible assurance of the matter in question, but that no evidence shall be given, which from the nature of the thing supposes still greater evidence behind in the party's possession or power; for such evidence is altogether insufficient and proves nothing, but carries with it a presumption contrary to the intention for which it is produced. Thus if a party offer a copy of a deed or will, where he has it in his power to produce the original, this raises a presumption, that there is something in the deed or will, which, if produced, would make against the party; and therefore the copy in such a case is not evidence. But if he prove the original deed or will to be in the hands of the adverse party, who refuses to produce it, although he has received a regular notice for that purpose, or in the hands of a person privileged from producing it, and who insists on his privilege (Marston v. Downes, 6 C. & P. 381), or if he prove that the original has been lost or destroyed without his default, no such presumption can reasonably be made, and a copy will be admitted (a), because then such copy is the best evidence that can be produced. (Bull. N. P. 293; 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed. 218. See also, per Lord Tenterden, the Queen's Case, 2 B. & B. 286; R. v. Radwen, 8 B. & Cres. 708; Williams v. The East India Company, 3 East, 193, 201; R. v. Stoke Golding, 1 B. & Al. 173; R. v. Chadwick, 6 C. & P. 181). This rule, that the best evidence must be produced, precludes a witness from refreshing his memory with a copy of the instrument, which might itself be used for refreshing his memory. See Burton v. Plummer, 2 Adol. & Ellis, 341; Rex v. St. Martin's Leicester, id. 215).

(a) In the case of the Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, (2 T. R. 201, n.), it was solemnly decided in the Court of Exchequer, that there is no difference in this respect between criminal and civil cases; that in both parol evidence may be given of the contents of a paper in the defendant's possession, on his refusing to produce it after notice for that purpose. And see 1 Leach, 300 (n).

2. Degree and kind of proof.

Although the best evidence is thus requisite, yet the strongest possible assurance of a fact, or, in other words, the greatest quantity of existing proof, is not so. Thus, for example, if a deed be attested by several subscribing witnesses, the execution may be proved by one of them; or if none of those witnesses can be produced, proof of the signature of one witness will be sufficient; for the proof is, as far as it goes, complete, and not inferior in its kind to any that can be produced. (1 Phill. Evid. 220; Stark. Evid. Part III. 391. See Wright v. Doe d. Tatham, 3 Nev. & Man. 268; 1 Adol. & Ellis, 3, S. C.)

And this rule as to the best evidence does not apply, unless the evidence proposed be in its general nature of an inferior degree to that for which it is sought to be substituted: and upon this principle, the supposed writer of an instrument need not be called to prove he wrote it: the evidence of another person who can speak to his handwriting will suffice. (Stark. Evid. Part III. 391; Liebman v. Pooley, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 167; 1 Chit. C. L. 567 a). And it seems that similar evidence will be admitted to prove that it is not the handwriting of a particular person without calling that individual himself. (R. v. Hughes, 2 East's P. C. 1002; Bank Prosecutions, R. & M. C. C. 380).

Admissions by parties to the suit.

The party's own admission or declaration also will sometimes supersede the necessity of having other evidence: (see "Confession," Vol. I.) unless where a statute expressly requires other evidence. And such admissions or declarations though verbal are always admissible in evidence against the party, though they relate to the contents of a deed or other written instrument not produced. (Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664; Newhall v. Holt, 6 M. & W. 662; Howard v. Smith, 3 Scott, N. R. 574).

Parol evidence when allowed to prove a fact which may be proved by written evidence.

Parol evidence is in general esteemed inferior in its nature to written evidence; consequently where there is written evidence it must be first resorted to. (Brewer v. Palmer, 8 Esp. 213; Doe v. Griffiths, 6 Bing. 533). Very nice questions have indeed arisen as to whether parol evidence is admissible to prove a fact which may be evidenced by a written instrument. It is clearly admissible in some cases, as where the narrative of a fact to be proved has been committed to writing, it may yet be proved by parol evidence. Thus a receipt for money will not exclude parol evidence of the payment. (Rambert v. Cohen, 4 Esp. 213.) So a parol admission of the fact of a debt may be given in evidence, notwithstanding the promise to pay is in writing. (Singleton v. Barrett, 2 Cr. & J. 369). So where the fact to be proved was, that a certain person occupied land as tenant, so as to gain a settlement by 13 & 14 Car. II., it was held, that although there was a written contract, the fact might be proved by parol. (R. v. Inhabitants of Holy Trinity, 7 B. & C. 611). So although there exists a deed of partnership, yet the fact of partnership may be proved by the acts of the parties. (Alderson v. Clay, 1 Star. 405). So the entry in the parish register is not the only evidence of the fact of marriage, but it may be proved by persons who were present and witnessed the ceremony, or by general reputation. (Evans v. Morgan, 2 C. & J. 453). The inscription on a monument may be proved by parol. (Doe v. Cole, 6 C. & P. 359). So the inscriptions and devices on banners displayed at a public meeting may be proved by parol, and it is not necessary to produce the banners themselves. (R. v. Hunt,

2. Degree and kind of proof.

3 B. & A. 566). And resolutions passed at a public meeting may be proved by parol, although it should appear that those resolutions were read from a written or printed paper. (Id. 568).

In Hunt v. Allewyn (1 M. & P. 433), it was held, in an action for not accounting for the produce of a bill delivered to defendant to get discounted, that the bill need not be produced, and that plaintiff might give parol evidence of its contents. And in an action for shooting a dog, brought against the owner of a plantation and his gamekeepers, it appeared that, in the plantation in which the dog was shot, there was fixed on a pole a board, on which was painted, "All dogs found trespassing in this plantation will be shot," it was held, that a copy of that which was painted on the board might be given in evidence without notice to produce the original board. (Bartholomew v. Stephens, 8 Car. & P. 726).

A witness called to prove the terms of a verbal agreement stated, that he was in company with the plaintiff and defendant when it was entered into, and referred to an entry which he made a few hours afterwards to refresh his memory. This entry was made by him from a paper written in pencil by the plaintiff during the interview between the parties, and read by him to the defendant, as embodying the terms of their agreement. The defendant assented to it; but he neither signed, nor was asked to sign it, nor was it shown to him; and it was held, therefore, not necessary to produce this paper as constituting the real agreement. (Tyrwhitt v. Lambert, 3 Per. & D. 676; 10 Ad. & E. 470, S. C.; and see Hope v. West, 7 Scott, 876).

In R. v. Hunt and Bartholomew v. Stephens, above cited, perhaps it was considered that the parol evidence was, under the circumstances, as original and primary in its nature as the evidence, the production of, and notice to produce which, was dispensed with. (And see Phil. on Ev. 169).

When not allowed.

The general rule, however, is the one above stated, that where there is written testimony, it must be resorted to before verbal testimony. And in a late settlement case, where the respondents, in order to show that the pauper was not the sole tenant, attempted to prove by parol evidence, that the premises were let to the pauper and two other persons, but the witness, on cross-examination, having stated that the letting was by a written instrument, the Court of King's Bench held it could be only proved by that instrument. (R. v. Rawden, 8 B. & Cres. 708). Now by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 67, s. 2, a settlement by renting a tenement can only be acquired when the same has been bonâ fide rented for a year, at 10*l.* a year; and in Rex v. Merthyr Tidvil (1 B. & Adol. 29), which was a case of a settlement under this act, it was held, that such a renting can only appear by reference to the agreement with the landlord, and could not therefore be proved by parol, where the contract was in writing, and might have been produced. The case of R. v. Holy Trinity Kingston-upon-Hull (7 B. & C. 611) was cited in support of the position that parol evidence was admissible. Sed per Bayley, J.—'This case is clearly distinguishable from R. v. The Inhabitants of Holy Trinity, the facts of which took place before the passing of the statutes 59 Geo. III. c. 50, and 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, and when the proofs necessary for establishing this kind of settlement were, that a tenancy subsisted, and that the value of the tenement was 10*l.* a year. At that time the terms of the agreement were immaterial, except as a test of value; and when proved, they did not preclude the sessions from determining for or against the settlement. R. v. The Inhabitants of Holy Trinity decided this only, that where the terms of the tenancy were not material, the fact of tenancy might be proved without the terms. But under 6 Geo. IV. c. 57, they are essential, for this act requires the tenement to be bonâ fide rented for the term of a year, at 10*l.* a year; and it is therefore necessary to know what was the rent contracted for, which cannot be proved without reference to the agreement itself. That having been in writing, the general rule of evidence prevails, and the order is therefore bad.' In Strother v. Barr (2 M. & P. 207; 5 Bing. 136, S. C.), the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas were equally divided in opinion on a question of this kind. (See also R. v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Al. 588; M. & M. 257: Davis v. Reynolds, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 115). Again, where a charitable society entered in their book a resolution with regard to the employment of a secretary, and the plaintiff afterwards engaged with them as such, on the terms specified in the book which was kept by him, it was held, in an action for work and labour, that he was bound to produce the book containing the resolution. (Whitford v. Futin, 10 Bing. 395; 4 Moo. & S. 166, S. C.) Where, in ejectment, the plaintiff's witness proved an acknowledgment by the defendant, that he held under T., and stated that he, the witness, had drawn an agreement touching the premises between the plaintiff and T., it was held that the plaintiff was bound to produce the writing. (Fenn v. Griffith, 6 Bing. 533; see 1 Nev. & M. 10). And in Doe v. Harvey (8 Bing. 239), it was held, that where a party holds land under a written agreement, parol evidence cannot be received of the fact under whom he came into possession. In Jones v. Tarlton (1 Dowl. N. S. 625; 9 M. & W. 675, S. C.), it was held, that the contents of a notice hung up in a steam-packet office cannot, if moveable, be given in evidence without a notice to produce the original, aliter, if the notice be fixed to the freehold; and Parke, B., in delivering judgment, says, "According to ordinary rules of law, the notice itself should have been produced. The exceptions to the rule are cases in which the material on which the document is written is not easily removed, as in the case of things fixed in the ground, or to the freehold; for the law does not expect a man to break up his freehold for the purpose of bringing a notice into court; but that ground of exception will not apply to this case, for there could be no difficulty or inconvenience in removing the board from the nail on which it was hung."

2. Degree and kind of proof.

In Bucher v. Jarratt (3 B. & P. 143), it is said, that though the contents of a written instrument cannot be proved by parol, evidence of its general character may.

If oral evidence of an agreement be given at a trial, the party desirous of excluding it may ask the witness in cross-examination whether it was not in writing; and a party may, on cross-examination, inquire as to the subject of a writing, in order to show that parol evidence is inadmissible. (Curtis v. Greathead, 1 A. & E. 167). But there can be no doubt that a party may, by keeping out of view, if he can, a written instrument, make out by parol testimony a primâ facie case without it, and then it lies on the opposite party to rebut the case so made out. (Per Bailey, J., R. v. The Inhabitants of Rawden, 8 B. & Cres. 710).

And under such circumstances the defendant will not be allowed to give an unstamped written contract in evidence, for the purpose of nonsuiting the plaintiff. (Fielder v. Ray, 6 Bing. 332; Reid v. Deere, 7 B. & C. 266; R. v. Padstow, 4 B. & Ad. 208). And where a plaintiff closes his case without its appearing that there is any written contract relating to the subject matter of the action, the defendant, if he means to set up that there is such a contract, must produce it properly stamped, so as to be receivable in evidence; and it makes no difference that the plaintiff has had notice to produce the document. (Magnay v. Knight, 2 Scott, N. R. 64; 1 Man. & G. 944). And if a defendant who has had notice to produce a written document on the trial, refuses to produce it in the course of the plaintiff's case, and the plaintiff gives secondary evidence, the defendant cannot afterwards put the document in evidence as part of his own case. (Doe d. Thompson v. Hodson, 4 Per. & D. 142; 12 Ad. & Ell. 135).

Best evidence dispensed with by particular statutes.

Particular statutes sometimes dispense with the best evidence. Several statutory provisions to this effect will be found under titles "Excise and Customs," post,—"Stage Coaches," Vol. V.;—"Newspaper," Vol. V.;—

When the copy of a document (the document itself not being evidence at common law) is made evidence by act of parliament, a copy must be produced; the original is not made admissible evidence by implication. (Burdon v. Rickets, 2 Camp. 121, n.; sed vide R. v. The Inhabitants of Warley, 6 T. R. 534).

(2). Secondary Evidence.

(2) Secondary evidence.

To admit of secondary evidence, it must be first shown that all the proper sources from which the primary or best evidence can be procured are exhausted. And it is an established rule, that where there are duplicate originals, all the originals must be accounted for before secondary evidence can be given of any one. (Per Parke, B., in Alwin v. Furnival, 1 Cr. M. & R. 292).

It has been said, that if the best evidence cannot be produced, that then the best secondary evidence must be so. Thus, if an original deed be lost, the counterpart may be read; and if there is no counterpart, then a copy; and if there be no copy, then parol evidence may be admitted. (See Villiers v. Villiers, 2 Atk. 71; B. N. P. 254). But the better opinion seems to be, that there are no degrees of secondary evidence; and where a party is entitled to give secondary evidence at all, he may give any species within his power. (Doe v. Ross, 7 M. & W. 102; 8 Dowl. 389, S. C.; and see Brown v. Woodman, 6 C. & P. 206). But if the party giving such evidence appears to have better secondary evidence in his power, which he does not produce, that is a fact to go to the jury; from which they might sometimes presume that the evidence kept back would be adverse to the party withholding it. (Id. 106, per Lord Abinger, C. B.)

Where there are two instruments executed as parts of a deed, one of these parts is more authentic and satisfactory evidence of the contents of the other parts than any other draft or copy. It is prepared with more care than any other copy; and the party who produces it, and against whom it is used, by taking and keeping it as a part of the deed, admits its accuracy. The courts have, therefore, always required that, if one part of a deed be lost, and another part be in existence, it must be produced, or shown to be in the hands of the opposite party; and then on his refusing to produce, on notice, a copy may be received. (See per Best, C. J., Munn v. Godbold, 3 Bing. 295; and see R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128).

Where the originals of any papers are public documents, as the Journals of Parliament, records, proceedings of a court of justice, or of entries in court rolls, or in public books or registers examined, copies may, for public convenience, be always received as evidence (a). (Man v. Carey, 3 Salk. 155; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 78). Thus, a copy of an entry in the books of the Stamp Office, of payment of legacy duty, was held to be sufficient evidence of the fact of such payment; but the copy must be proved by affidavit of a person who has examined it. A copy signed by the comptroller of stamp duties is not sufficient. (Harrison v. Berwell, 4 Jur. 245—V. C.)

To make a copy of a record admissible in evidence, it is not enough that it was held by witness while another read the original to him.

(a) This doctrine would seem not to apply to the case of every official memorandum, and perhaps not to every species of public record; but it appears to embrace the proceedings of all courts, whether superior or inferior, and whether of record or not. It will be seen that the like documents may sometimes be proved by office copy, or copy by authorized officer. (Vide Phil. on Ev. 452 (1)).

There must be a change of hands, or the witness must himself read the copy with the original. (Slane Peerage, 5 Cl. & F. 23).

2. Degree and kind of proof

Notice to produce.

Notice to produce.]—In general, when the best written evidence is in possession of the opposite party, he or his attorney must be served with a notice to produce it, and the service of such notice must be proved before secondary evidence thereof is admissible. (Attorney-General v. Le Merchant, 2 T. R. 201, n.)

When necessary or not.

There are five descriptions of cases, where a notice to produce is not necessary; first, where the instrument produced and that to be proved are duplicate originals. (Burleigh v. Stibbs, 5 T. R. 465; Roe v. Davis, 7 East, 363; Bowman v. Manzelman, 2 Camp. 315; Colling v. Treweek, 6 B. & C. 398; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 130; R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & A. 566; Bartholomew v. Stephens, 8 C. & P. 728; R. v. Moors, 6 East, 412; Phillipson v. Chase, 2 Camp. 110). Secondly, where the instrument to be proved is a notice to quit (2 B. & P. 41), or a notice of dishonour of a bill. (Kine v. Beaumont, 3 B. & B. 288; Colling v. Treweek, 6 B. & C. 398; Ackland v. Pearce, 2 Camp. 601; Roberts v. Bradshaw, 1 Stark. 28; Langdow v. Hulls, 5 Esp. 157.) Notice of action to magistrate, and demand of copy of warrant from constable. (2 B. & P. 39). This last rule is founded, apparently, upon the convenience of general practice. Thirdly, where, from the nature of the proceeding, the opposite party must be aware that he is charged with the possession of the instrument, as in an indictment for stealing, or in an action of trover for a bill or bond, &c. (R. v. Aicles, 1 Leach, 330; R. v. Moors, 6 East, 421; R. v. Ellins, R. & R. C. C. 188; R. v. Hunt, 3 B. & Al. 566; Colling v. Treweek, 6 B. & C. 398). Fourthly, where the opposite party has procured the possession of the instrument by fraud, as where he has received it after the commencement of the action, from a witness called for the purpose of producing it under a subpœna duces tecum. (Leeds v. Cook, 4 Esp. 256). And, fifthly, where the notice is fixed to the realty. (Jones v. Tarleton, 9 M. & W. 675; ante, 365). In these cases secondary evidence of the instrument may be given, although no notice to produce be served.

Form of.

A parol notice will suffice, but it is better to give a written one. (Smith v. Young, 1 Camp. 440). The notice must specify the instrument, with a particularity sufficient to inform the opposite party which he is called on to produce. (See France v. Lucy, R. & M. C. N. P. 341; Jones v. Edwards, M'C. & Y. 139). In an action for work and labour, a notice to produce "all accounts relating to the matters in question in this cause," is sufficient to let in secondary evidence of an account of work done, given by the plaintiff to the defendant without specifying it by date or otherwise. (Rogers v. Custance, 2 M. & Rob. 179). Whether the notice to admit contains a saving of all just exceptions or not, the opposite party is entitled to rely on any valid objection to the documents mentioned in the notice. (Sharpe v. Lamb, 3 Per. & D. 454).

Time of service.

The notice must be proved to have been served a reasonable time before the time the party is required to produce the instrument. Such must depend on the circumstances of each case. When the commission day was the 15th of the month, and the prisoner who was in gaol on charge of arson, was on the 18th served with notice to produce his policy of insurance, his residence being ten miles from the assize town, such notice was at the trial, which came on on the 20th, it was held too late. The notice should be served before the commission-day, in cases where the party does not reside at the assize town. (R. v. Elliscombe, 5 C. & P. 522; 1 M. & Rob. 260, S. C. See Doe d. Wartney v. Grey. 1 Stark. N. P. C. 283; R. & M. C. N. P. 327; id. 47).

A notice to produce a letter from the defendant to the plaintiff, served on the plaintiff's attorney at a quarter before nine on the night before the trial, is too late. (Holt v. Miers, 9 Car. & P. 191).

2. Degree and kind of proof.

A notice to produce served on the party himself a week before the trial is in sufficient time, although he has employed an attorney in the cause. (Hughes v. Budd, 8 Dowl. P. C. 315).

If a notice to produce has been duly served on a party in the cause, that is not invalidated by a subsequent bad service of notice on the attorney. Service of a notice to produce on a Sunday is bad. (Ib.)

A cause was tried at the assizes on a Monday, the commission day being on the Thursday before. A paper was called for under a notice to produce, which was served on the Saturday before the trial. The attornies on whom the notice to produce was served, and also the party who was their client, lived in the assize town. Such service of the notice to produce was held not too late, and the question in such cases is, whether, under all the circumstances, reasonable notice has been given. (Firkin v. Edwards, 9 Car. & P. 478). In a town cause, service of a notice to produce a paper that would be in the hands of the opposite attorney at 8 p. m. on the evening before the trial, at his office, on one of his clerks, who had the management of the case, was held not too late; and the paper not being produced, secondary evidence was allowed to be given of its contents. (Gibbons v. Powell, 9 Car. & P. 634).

Where none of the parties lived in the assize town the plaintiff's attorney served the defendant's attorney, in the assize town, on the commission day, with notice to produce a paper, and offered the expenses of going to fetch it; and the defendant's attorney said, that that was of no use, as the paper was not in existence. The plaintiff was permitted on the trial to give secondary evidence of the contents of the paper, as the statement of the defendant's attorney, that the paper was not in existence, got rid of any objection as to the lateness of the service of the notice to produce. (Foster v. Pointer, 9 Car. & P. 718).

Notice to produce letters was served four days before the trial. The letters had been written to a partner in New South Wales; but proceedings having taken place in Chancery in respect of the subject-matter of the letters six years before the trial, the court considered they must be presumed to have been sent back from New South Wales, and that the notice was therefore sufficient to let in secondary evidence. (Sturge v. Buchannan, 2 Per. & D. 673; 10 Ad. & Ell. 598).

It is said that neither party will be allowed to inquire into the contents of an instrument, merely because the opposite party has the original in court at the time of the trial, and that the opposite party may object to secondary evidence of its contents, on account of his not having had notice to produce it. (1 Phill. Evid. 425; 1 Stark. Evid. 362; Roscoe, 3.)

Although a judge's order has been made on the plaintiff to admit a copy of a letter from himself to the defendant, and the plaintiff has also had notice to produce the original, the copy cannot be read, unless evidence is given of the existence of the original. (Sharpe v. Lamb, 3 Per. & D. 454; 11 Ad. & E. 805).

Existence of original in possession of opposite party.

After proof of the service of the notice to produce, the party must give some evidence of the opposite party's possession of the instrument required to be produced before secondary evidence can be given of it. Slight evidence of such possession will suffice, where the instrument belongs exclusively to the party possessing it. (See Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp. 502).

In an action against the directors of an intended company, evidence, (in order to let in secondary evidence of their minute-books, called for under a notice to produce), that, four months before the trial, the late secretary had the books in a desk at the office of the company, and that he then gave up the key of the desk to the manager of the company, who acted for the directors—was held sufficient. (Bell v. Francis, 9 Car. & P. 66).

And a document deposited in a court of equity by a party to a suit there, and scheduled in his answer, but which remains with an officer of that court after an order to deliver it to the party, is sufficiently in the control and power of such party to let in secondary evidence after notice to produce, and non-production thereof by the party. (Bush v. Peacock, 2 M. & Rob. 162).

(2). Degree and kind of Proof.

Loss of instrument.

Loss of Instrument.]—Where the written instrument containing the best evidence is proved to have been lost or destroyed, secondary evidence thereof will be admitted in criminal as well as in civil proceedings. (R. v. Chadwick, 6 C. & P. 181). Thus upon a bill against two obligors in a bond, which had been destroyed by mistake, a correspondence by one obligor, stating the destruction of the bond, and that it was by mistake, is admissible evidence against the other obligor. (Crosse v. Bedingfield, 5 Jur. 836). The steward of a manor proved, that, where a surrender was by power of attorney, the practice was, to keep the power of attorney within the court-rolls. The power in question, which was for a surrender in 1814, could not be found either with the court-rolls or any where in the office in which the court-rolls had been kept ever since 1814, both by the present steward and his predecessor, who was steward in 1814, and was therefore allowed to be proved by secondary evidence (Doe d. Counsell v. Capperton, 9 Car. & P. 112). To prove the warrant of distress made by the mayor of a borough under 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 76, for the non-payment of borough rates, the high constable of the borough, who had been served with a subpœna duces tecum, was called; and having stated that he had deposited the warrant in his office, that he had searched for it but could not find it; that he did not know what had become of it; and that the town-clerk had access to his office, secondary evidence was permitted to be given of its contents. (Fernley v. Worthington, 1 Man. & G. 491). In an action brought by a corporation, it appeared that the defendant had presented a petition to the Vice-Chancellor to allow the production of the corporation books which had been deposited in the Master's office on the present trial, which petition was opposed by the present plaintiffs, and dismissed with costs. Under these circumstances, the defendant was allowed to give parol evidence of the contents of the books. (Ludlow (Mayor, &c.) v. Charlton, 9 Car. & P. 242; and see Reg. v. Inhabs. of Pembridge, 1 Car. & M. 157).

What search for sufficient.

But it must previously be shewn that diligent search and inquiries have been made after the instrument sought to be proved; and such search and inquiries must be shewn to have been made in those places, and of those persons, where some account of the instrument most probably could be procured. The degree of diligence to be used in searching for a deed must depend on the importance of the deed, and the particular circumstances of the case. (Gully v. Bishop of Exeter, 4 Bing. 290). Where the loss or destruction of the instrument may almost be presumed, very slight evidence of its destruction or loss will suffice. (Per Abbott, C. J., Brewster v. Sewell, 3 B. & Al. 296. See Rex v. East Farleigh, 6 D. & R. 153). In an action for maliciously, and without probable cause, charging plaintiff with an assault before a magistrate, the magistrate proved that the depositions taken before him were reduced into writing, and that he delivered them, at the court of quarter sessions, to the clerk of the peace or his deputy. The clerk of the peace stated, that a bill of indictment for the assault was preferred, and that the grand jury returned ignoramus, and that it was usual, in such case, to throw away or destroy the depositions; that he had searched among his papers, and could not find them: it was held, that parol evidence of their contents was admissible, and that it was not necessary to call the deputy clerk of the peace to shew that the original depositions were not in his possession, inasmuch as it was his duty, if he had received them, to have delivered them to his principal; and not being in his custody, it was to be presumed that they were lost or destroyed. (Freeman v. Arkell, 2 B. & C. 494; 2 D. & R. 669, S. C.) Where it appeared that an indenture of apprenticeship, twenty-four years old, the expenses of which the overseers of a parish had paid, was sent to those overseers, and was not to be found in the parish chest, it was held that it might be presumed to be lost, and that secondary evidence of its contents was admissible. (R. v. Stourbridge, 1 M. & R. M. C. 297; 8 B. & C. 96; 2 M. & Ry. 43, S. C.) The question of diligent search is, it seems, for a jury. (Bampton v. Paulin, 4 Bing. 264). Where the publisher of a paper, in which a libel had appeared, stated that he believed the original was either destroyed or lost, having been thrown aside as useless, this was held sufficient to let in secondary evidence. (Rex v. Johnson, 7 East, 66). Where on the second trial of a cause, a witness stated that he had on the argument for the new trial handed a document to one of the learned judges, and had not since seen it or had been able to find it, secondary evidence was received of its contents, without any search for it having been made at the judge's chambers, the presumption being that the judge had returned it to the party. (Deacon v. Fuller, 6 C. & P. 74). Where, in a settlement case, it was proved that one part of an indenture had been executed, that the pauper and master were both dead at the time of the trial, and that an inquiry for it had been made of the pauper shortly before his death, who said that the indenture had been given up to him after the expiration of the apprenticeship, and that he had burnt it, and that an inquiry had also been made of the daughter and sole executrix of the master, who said she knew nothing about it; it was held that a sufficient inquiry had been made to render secondary evidence of the contents admissible. (Rex v. Morton, 4 M. & Sel. 48). Where, however, it appeared that there were two parts of an indenture of apprenticeship, one of which had been destroyed, and the other delivered to A. B., to whom the pauper had been assigned, and that application had been made to A. B. (but who was not called), who said she could not find the indenture, and did not know where it was, the search was held not sufficient. (R. v. Castleton, 6 T. R. 236).

A party objecting to the production of a copy, on account of due search not having been made for the original, must make the objection at the time of the trial distinctly on that ground; if he does not, the court will not afterwards entertain it. (William v. Wilcox, 8 Ad. & E. 314).

What copy sufficient.

With respect to what copy is sufficient, it must be one proved to have been examined with the original, and to be a true copy. A rough draft will do. (R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128). In Waller v. Horsfall, (1 Camp. 503), it is said a copy of the original is good, but not a copy from the original. To make a copy of a record admissible in evidence, it is not enough that it was held by witness while another read the original to him. There must be a change of hands, or the witness must himself read the copy with the original. (Slane Peerage, 5 Cl. & F. 23). A copy of an entry in the books of the Stamp Office of payment of legacy duty, is sufficient evidence of the fact of such payment; but the copy must be proved by affidavit of a person who has examined it. A copy signed by the Comptroller of Stamp Duties is not sufficient. (Harrison v. Berwell, 4 Jur. 245). An examined copy of an entry in the Middlesex registry of deeds is, it seems, secondary evidence of the deed of which it purports to be the registry. (Collins v. Maule, 8 Car. & P. 502; Reg. v. Inhab. of Pembridge, 1 Car. & M. 157). In Batavia, charter parties are entered into by the instrument being written in the book of a notary, (he being a public officer according to the Dutch law which prevails in Batavia), and there signed by the parties. The notary makes copies, which he signs and seals, and which the principal officer of the government of Java signs upon proof of their being executed by the notary. Then one copy is delivered to each party. In the courts of Java, in order to prove the charter party, it is necessary to produce the notary's book, but this book is never allowed to be taken out of Java; and in Dutch courts out of Java faith is given to the above copies as to an original. In English courts however such copies are not receivable either as originals or as secondary evidence of the charter party, or at all events, not without proof that they were made at the time of entering into the original charter party, and in the presence of the parties. (Brown v. Thornton, 6 Ad. & E. 185; 1 Nev. & Per. 339, S. C.) A commission to examine witnesses was directed to the judges of the Chamber of Commerce at Hamburgh. The evidence having been returned as an extract from the records of the Court, was considered inadmissible, as it purported to be a copy, and was not the examination itself. (Clay v. Stevenson, 2 Nev. & Per. 189; 7 Ad. & E. 185, S. C.) In an action for bribery at a borough election, an examined copy of the precept to the returning officer, taken from the original at the crown office, is sufficient evidence of the precept. (Webb v. Smith, 4 Bing. N. C. 373; 6 Scott, 147). A copy taken by a copying machine is not evidence without notice to produce the original. (Nodin v. Murray, 3 Camp. 228; and see R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 129). When possession has gone along with a deed for many years, the original of which is lost or destroyed, an old copy or abstract may be given in evidence, although not proved to be true, because it may be impossible to give better evidence. (B. N. P. 254).

Parol evidence in contradiction or explanation of written evidence.

Parol Evidence, when admissible when there is Written Evidence.]—We have already seen that parol evidence, being inferior to written evidence, cannot, in general, be received instead of it; ante, 362. Besides this, parol evidence cannot in general be adduced in contradiction to the written evidence, although, indeed, it tend to shew the real intention of the parties, (5 Co. 26); nor can it be adduced to show the invariable usage of trade, (1 Phillips, Evid. 539; Cutter v. Powell, 6 T. R. 320), or custom of the country, (Webb v. Plummer, 2 B. & Al. 746), in violation of the particular terms of the written instrument. (Chit. jun. Contr. 22).

Evidence may be received to explain deeds or instruments where there is a latent ambiguity, but not where there is a patent ambiguity. By a latent ambiguity is intended, that which does not appear upon the face of the instrument, where every thing seems right and clear; but, the meaning having been rendered uncertain by parol proof of some fact, the law permits the removal of the doubt by the like evidence. (Peake's Ev. 112). By a patent ambiguity is meant that which is apparent on the face of the instrument. (See Stark. Ev. Part IV. 1000).

Where there was a devise to her cousin I. C., and there were two of that name, evidence was admitted to show which of the two was meant, for the ambiguity was latent. (Peake's Ev. 112; Doe d. Morgan v. Morgan, 1 C. & M. 235).

So where a fine is levied of the manor of D., the conusor having two manors of that name, evidence may be given to show which was meant. (Peake's Ev. 113).

So where from the terms of the deed its intent as to its nature is equivocal; for instance, whether it is to enure as a contract of apprenticeship, or only as an agreement to be a mere servant, evidence is admissible to show the intent of the parties, and that some act was done further than that stated in the deed, though forming a part of the same transaction. (Rex v. Laindon, 8 T. R. 379; 1 Phill. Ev. 544).

In articles of agreement between the bankrupt and the petitioners, reciting that the bankrupt had agreed to give to them a mortgage on "his freehold estates at Iver," and to execute a good and effectual mortgage to the petitioners of "all his lands, tenements, and hereditaments, at or near Iver aforesaid:" the intent of the bankrupt to give a general charge upon copyhold, as well as freehold property, was

(2). Parol.

In contradiction or explanation of written evidence allowed to be explained by other written memoranda of agreement. (Ex parte Glyn, re Medley, 1 Mon., D. & D. 29).

Devise to J. A., the grandson of my brother, in fee, charged with 100*l.* to each and every of the brothers and sisters of J. A. After it had been shown that the brother of the testatrix had two grandsons named J. A., the one with several brothers and sisters, and the other with only two brothers and one sister, the evidence was admitted of a declaration by the testatrix, some months after making her will, that she had devised the property in question to the J. A. who had only two brothers and one sister. (Doe v. Allen, 4 Per. & D. 220). In another case, on a devise to M. B., widow, for life, and her three daughters, Mary, Elizabeth, and Ann, in fee, an illegitimate daughter, named Elizabeth, having claimed as being the only Elizabeth answering the description at the time of the will being made, as the legitimate daughter, Elizabeth, had been dead six years previously, parol evidence was admitted to shew that the testator intended his legitimate daughter as devisee, and that he did not know of her death. (Doe d. Thomas v. Beynon, 4 Per. & D. 193).

Where a testator devised lands to his son, John H., for life; and from his decease, to the testator's grandson, John H., eldest son of the said John H., for life; and on his decease, to the first son of the body of his said grandson, John H., in tail male, with other remainders over. At the time of making the will, the testator's son, John H., had been twice married: by his first wife he had one son, Simon; by his second wife an eldest son, John, and other younger children, sons and daughters, evidence of the instructions given by the testator for his will, and of his declarations, was held inadmissible to show which of these two grandsons was intended by the descriptions of the will. (Doe d. Hiscocks v. Hiscocks, 5 Mee. & W. 363).

Parol evidence is admissible to show that a written contract, purporting to be made between A. and B., as seller and buyer, was in fact made by B., not on his own account, but as agent for a third person, so as to charge such third person as principal; (Wilson v. Hart, 7 Taunt. 295; 1 Moore, 45, S. C.; 1 Phill. Ev. 542); but such evidence would not be received for the purpose of discharging B. from the liability he incurred by entering into a written contract in his own name. (Higgins v. Senior, 8 M. & W. 834).

Parol evidence cannot be admitted to contradict the terms of a deed; as in case of a lease to show that the lessee is to pay a given sum to a ground landlord, the lease only stipulating for payment of a sum certain to the lessor. (Peake's Ev. 122).

So the acknowledgment in a deed of the receipt of money is conclusive evidence as between the parties to it of such receipt. (Baker v. Dewey, 1 B. & C. 704; Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141; Flinn v. Callow, 1 M. & G. 589). But in a subsequent case it has been held, that it may be rebutted by evidence of some subsequent and distinct circumstance; as, for instance, if a cheque were given at the executing of the instrument, and it were dishonoured on presentment. (Deverell v. Whitmarsh, 5 Jur. 963; and see Doe d. Salt v. Carr, 1 Car. & M. 123).

Where a contract must be in writing by statute, parol evidence cannot be received to waive or vary any of its terms. But if it be valid without writing, it may, though written, be altered or waived before breach by a subsequent parol agreement. (Goss v. Lord Nugent, 5 B. & Ad. 58; Marshall v. Lynn, 6 M. & W. 109; Stead v. Dawber, 10 Ad. & Ell. 57). Nor is parol evidence admissible to alter the legal effect of a written instrument; (Greaves v. Ashlin, 3 Camp. 426; Macdougall v. Robertson, 1 M. & P. 147); as, if no time is mentioned in an agreement as to when it is to take effect, the law declares that it shall take effect immediately, and parol evidence is not receivable to shew the contrary. (Williams v. Jones, 5 B. & C. 108; 8 D. & R. 548, S. C.)

It seems doubtful, where no consideration is expressed in an instrument, whether a consideration may be proved. (See Mildmay's case, 1 Rep. 176 a; 1 Ves. 128; Villers v. Beamont, Dyer, 146 a; Rex v. Inhabitants of Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474, aff.; Morley v. Boothby, 3 Bing. 112; Lees v. Whitcomb, 5 Bing. 34, sembl. neg.) In a settlement case, where the deed of conveyance stated the consideration of the purchase to be 20*l.*, parol evidence was admitted to shew that the consideration was in fact 30*l.* (Rex v. Scammonden, 3 T. R. 474; Rex v. Cheadle, 3 B. & Adol. 833).

(3). Presumptive.

Parol evidence of usage or custom is frequently admissible to explain the meaning of the parties, when not definitively expressed on the face of the written instrument; (Palm. 211; Wigglesworth v. Dallison, Dougl. 201; Webb v. Plummer, 2 B. & Al. 746); and, especially in the construction of mercantile contracts, parol evidence may be admitted to show the sense in which, according to the usage and custom of merchants, the contract was made. (See Jeffries v. Legandra, 2 Salk. 443; Lethulier's case, id.; Park, Ins. 416; Whitlock v. Underwood, 2 B. & C. 160). In an action upon a sold note, in the following terms—"Sold to Mr. W. S., eighteen pockets Kent hops, viz., ten pockets Burton East Kent, eight pockets Springall Goodhurst, at 100*s.*;" parol evidence is admissible either to supply the term "cwt.," or to shew that the term "pocket" was intended to mean cwt. (Spicer v. Cooper, 1 Gale & D. 52). But parol evidence of the course of dealing is not admissible to show that a sale was on credit where the written contract is silent upon that point. (Ford v. Yates, 2 Scott, N. R. 645). So in the construction of ancient charters and deeds, &c., their construction may be asserted by parol evidence of usage. (2 Inst. 282; Rex v. Varlo, Cowp. 248; Chad v. Tilsed, 2 B. & B. 406; Attorney-General v. Parker, 3 Atk. 576; Weld v. Hornby, 7 East, 199; Withnell v. Gartham, 6 T. R. 398).

As to when parol evidence is admissible to shew the contents of, or to add to, depositions, see post, 408.

Parol evidence is always admissible to prove a fraud. (See B. N. P. 173; Dobell v. Stevens, 3 B. & C. 623; 5 D. & R. 490, S. C.; Doe d. Small v. Allen, 8 T. R. 147; 2 P. Wms. 203; Hill v. Manchester Water Works Company, 2 B. & Adol. 544).

(3). Presumptive Evidence.

(3) Presumptive evidence.

Many times juries are much induced to rely upon presumptions, whereof there are three sorts; violent, probable, and light or temerary. Violent presumption many times amounts to full proof; as if one be run through the body with a sword in a house, whereof he instantly dieth, and a man is seen to come out of that house with a bloody sword, and no other man was at that time in the house. Probable presumption moveth little; but light or temerary presumption moveth not at all. (1 Inst. 6; 3 Blac. Com. 371; Gilb. Evid. 157).

On an indictment for larceny, proof that a part of the stolen goods have been found upon the person of the prisoner, or in his house or possession, is presumptive evidence against him of his having stolen them, so as to call upon him for his defence; and may be sufficient to warrant a conviction, if no facts appear in evidence to repel that presumption. The goods are sometimes found in the prisoner's house before his apprehension; frequently found afterwards; and there can be no objection to proof of their being found at one time or the other. This kind of evidence is frequently strengthened materially by other circumstances, as by proof that about the time of the offence the prisoner was near the spot from which the goods were taken, or that he gave some false account respecting the goods on being charged with the crime, or endeavoured to conceal them, or perhaps tried to prevent an inspection, or by some other proof of suspicious circumstance in his behaviour. On the other hand, the inference, arising from the mere fact of possession, will be much weakened, if any considerable time has elapsed between the loss of the property and the finding of it again, (see 2 C. & P. 459), or if the property was from its nature likely to pass in the interval through many hands; especially where the prisoner betrayed no appearance of guilt at the time of his apprehension. (1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 168, 169; see 2 East's P. C. 656, 657).

Where the knowledge of the defendant of the nature of his conduct is the point in issue, as where he is charged with uttering a forged note, knowing it to be forged, evidence of his having committed a series of acts of the same description may be received as presumptive of knowledge. (Rex v. Ball, 1 Camp. 324; 2 Leach, 983, 987; Rex v. Wylie, 1 New Rep. 92; Rex v. Hough, Russ. & R. C. C. 120, 132, 245; R. & M. C. C. 148).

So it is of a charter of feoffment, if all the witnesses to the deed be dead (as no man can keep his witnesses alive, and time weareth out all men), then violent presumption, which stands for a proof, is continual and quiet possession. Also the deed may receive credit from a comparing of seals, writing, and the like. (1 Inst. 6. See Doe Wilkins v. Cleveland, Marquis, 9 B. & Cres. 864).

Primâ facie, it must be presumed that the books of a corporation, which existed before the Municipal Reform Act, are in possession of the new corporation which succeeded them under that act; but if it be shewn that the old corporation, before their dissolution, deposited them with a banker, and that from his hands they passed into the Master's office of the court of Chancery, this rebuts the presumption. (Ludlow (Mayor, &c.) v. Charlton, 9 Car. & P. 242).

Where no acts of ownership have been exercised by the party beneficially interested in an estate devised in trust, a reconveyance by the trustees cannot be presumed. (Doe d. Rees v. Williams, 1 Jur. 755).

As to the presumption of rights of way, see "Highways," Vol. III.)

The death of a party will be presumed, if he has not been heard of for seven years or more. But there is no legal presumption as to the time of his death. (Doe Knight v. Nepean, 5 B. & Adol. 86; S. C. in error, 2 M. & W. 894; Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 84; Doe Lloyd v. Deakin, 4 B. & Al. 433). And after the lapse of even a much shorter period, the law will not presume the person to be alive if the effect of such presumption is to render a third party guilty of an illegal act. Thus where a woman married a second time, her first husband having left the country only twelve months previously, she will not on that account be presumed to have been guilty of bigamy. (Rex v. Twyning, 2 B. & Al. 386). In a late case it was held, that after one hundred years, the death of a party without issue would be presumed. (Doe d. Oldham v. Wolley, 8 B. & Cres. 22). Proof that a person sailed in a ship, bound for the West Indies, two or three years ago, and that the ship has not since been heard of, is presumptive evidence that the person is dead; but the time of the death, if material, must depend on the circumstances of the case. (See Watson v. King, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 121; Doe Knight v. Nepean, 5 B. & Adol, 86; S. C. in error, 2 M. & W. 894; and see Sillick v. Boothe, 5 Jur. 1151, Id. 958).

Twenty years' regular usage, uncontradicted and unexplained, is cogent evidence for a jury to presume, that a custom for a steward of the manor to nominate a jury to serve on the court leet, at the election of the mayor of a borough, is an immemorial custom. (Rex v. Joliffe, 3 D. & R. 240; 2 B. & C. 54, S. C.)

In trover for goods, where the defence was, a purchase in market overt in the city of London, the court presumed, after verdict (no question having been made of it at the trial), that one of the parties to the sale was a freeman of the city. (Lyons v. Depass, 3 Per. & D. 177; 9 Car. & P. 68).

(4). Hearsay Evidence.

(4). Hearsay evidence.

In general, that which another asserts must be by oath in a court of justice; and no one will be permitted to come into such court, and say, upon his oath, that he heard such a one declare certain facts to have occurred; but he who makes the declaration must himself repeat it upon his oath. And this is that which is termed hearsay evidence, viz. the deposing on oath, that certain facts exist, which facts are only known to the deponent by the relation of some other person. (See 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 229; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 46; Bull. N. P. 294; Stark. Evid. Part I. 40—47; Roscoe, 15; per Bayley, J., in Spargo v. Brown, 9 B. & Cres. 938).

(4). Hearsay.

In the Queen's case it was held, that if, upon the trial of an indictment, it appear upon cross-examination of one of the witnesses for the prosecution, that J. S. was employed by the prosecutor for the purpose of procuring and examining evidence and witnesses in support of the indictment, the defendant cannot give evidence of J. S.'s having offered a bribe to a certain person to induce him to give evidence touching the matter of the indictment, unless such person have been examined as a witness. (The Queen's Case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 302).

Hearsay pedigree, births, marriages, &c.

Pedigree, Births, Marriages, &c.]—On inquiring into the truth of facts which happened a long time ago, the courts have varied from the strict rules of evidence applicable to modern facts of the same description, on account of the great difficulty of proving those remote facts in the ordinary manner, by living witnesses. On this principle, hearsay and reputation (which latter is the hearsay of those who may be supposed to have known the fact handed down from one to another) have been admitted as evidence in cases of pedigree. (Per Le Blanc., J., in Highman v. Ridgway, 10 East, 120).

Thus declarations of deceased members of the family are admissible evidence to prove relationship; as, who was a person's grandfather, or whom he married, or how many children he had, or as to the time of a marriage or of the birth of a child, and the like, of which it cannot be reasonably presumed that better evidence is to be procured. (1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 238). And the declarations of a deceased relative are admissible, notwithstanding that if he was alive he would stand in pari jure with the party on whose behalf such evidence is tendered, and have the same right to recover. (Doe Tilman v. Turner, R. & M. C. N. P. 141).

So hearsay declarations on a question of pedigree are admissible to prove the identity of the party. (Reg. v. St. Mildred's, Canterbury, 2 Jurist, 46, Q. B.) But the declarations of an illegitimate member of a family respecting his illegitimate brothers, are not admissible as reputation. (Doe d. Bamford v. Barton, 2 M. & Rob. 28).

Declarations of servants and intimate acquaintances are not admissible evidence in questions of pedigree. (Johnson v. Lawson and another, 2 Bing. 86; 9 B. Moore, 183, S. C.; 1 Phill. Evid. 240, 7 ed.)

Nor is hearsay evidence by a pauper of the declarations of his deceased putative father, as to the birth-place of the pauper admissible. (Rex v. Erith, 8 East, 539; see Roscoe, 15).

A written memorandum by a deceased man-midwife, stating that he had delivered a woman of a child on a certain day, and referring to his ledger, in which a charge for his attendance was marked as paid, was thought by the Court of King's Bench to have been properly received in evidence, upon an issue as to the child's age. This entry was made by a person who, so far from having an interest to make it, had an interest the other way: for it appeared distinctly, from other evidence, that the work charged was actually done; and the discharge in the book repels the claim which he would otherwise have had. (Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 109, 110; see Whitnash v. Gifford, 8 B. & C. 556; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 256).

It is no objection to the admissibility of an entry by which a deceased steward charges himself, that the balance of the account is in favour of the steward. (Williams v. Graves, 8 Car. & P. 593).

On a question, whether a testator at the time of making his will was of full age, a written memorandum by his deceased father, stating the time of his birth, has been admitted to be good evidence. (Herbert v. Tuckall, T. Raym. 84, cited in Brune v. Rawlins, 7 East, 290).

And the declarations of a testator are admissible, when a will is disputed on account of fraud, circumvention, or forgery. (Doe d. Ellis v. Hardy, 1 M. & Rob. 525).

And the declarations of deceased persons, as to whether they were married, or whether the person in question was born before or after marriage, are evidence. (Stevens v. Moss, 2 Cowp. 591; Doe Northey v. Harvey, R. & M. C. N. P. 297).

Declarations made after a controversy or suit has arisen, with regard to the point in question, are inadmissible. (Berkeley Peerage case, 4 Camp. 401; 2 Selw. N. P. 712).

Declarations in the family descriptions upon monuments or gravestones, in Bibles and registry books, recitals in family deeds, engravings on rings, old pedigrees hung up in a family mansion, and the like (in which it is improbable that a description would be suffered to continue if erroneous), are all of them admissible, upon the principle that they are the natural effusions of a party who must know the truth, and who speaks upon an occasion when his mind stands in an even position, without any temptation to exceed or fall short of the truth. 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 239).

Right of way, &c.

Ownership of Way, Estate, &c.]—In questions about a right of way, reputation, i. e. what old people deceased have said upon the subject, is good evidence. (Bull. N. P. 295). And see post, 377, "Public Rights of Way."

Ownership of estate.

Whether a particular piece of land be parcel of an estate may be proved by declarations made by a deceased tenant while in possession. (Bull. N. P. 295.) A declaration by the owner or occupier of adjoining land, that his neighbour's land extends to such a spot, accompanying an act of forbearance to go beyond the spot for that reason, (or without such act, if he speaks against his interest), is evidence that the land extends so far. (Sir T. Stanley v. White, 14 East, 332, 339; 1 Phill. Evid. 163, 245). And the declaration of a deceased occupier of land, that he rented it under a certain person, is evidence of that person's seisin. (Uncle v. Watson, 4 Taunt. 16; Doe d. Baggalley v. Jones, 1 Camp. 367; Doe Human v. Pettett, 5 B. & Al. 225; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 258). But entries by a third person, deceased, in his books, of receipts of rent from his tenant for a particular estate, are not admissible to prove the identity of the land, in a cause between two others. (Outram v. Morewood, 5 T. R. 121; and see further as to this, post, 378). Where the question was, whether a slip of land between some old enclosures and the highway vested in the lord of the manor or the owner of the adjoining freehold, it was held, that evidence might be received of acts of ownership by the lord of the manor on similar slips of land not adjoining his own freehold in various parts of the manor. (Doe Barrett v. Kemp, 7 Bing. 332. See Woolway v. Rowe, 1 Ad. & Ell. 114).

In ejectment by parish officers to recover a cottage, entries in the books of a deceased tradesman of charges for the building of the cottage, which are there stated to have been paid by the lord of the manor, are not admissible in evidence on the part of the defendant. Doe d. Haden v. Burton, 9 Car. & P. 254.

Customs.

In cases of custom, reputation by deceased persons, as to the right, may be proved; but not to prove that they, the deceased persons, had said that they had seen certain facts take place, which amounted to an exercise of the right. (R. v. Ereswell, 3 T. R. 707).

Settlements.

Settlements.]—The deathbed declarations of paupers respecting their settlements are, it seems, evidence; and sometimes the general declarations of deceased paupers are evidence. (R. v. Bury, Cald. 481; vide R. v. Ereswell, 3 T. R. 707).

The owner of a house let to a pauper, having died before an appeal against a removal, grounded on a settlement by tenancy, was heard, it was made a question whether a declaration made by him during the time the pauper occupied the house, that he had let it to him, and that another person had duly guaranteed the rent, could be received. (R. v. Chediston, 6 D. & R. 269; 4 B. & C. 230, S. C.)

(4). Hearsay.

Hearsay evidence, from a wife, of the declarations of her husband, living abroad, respecting his settlement, are admissible when supported by slight circumstances. (R. v. Wareham, Cald. 141). So declarations of a husband to his wife, respecting his settlement, seem, after his death, to be admissible evidence; but if they refer to a written instrument, they cannot be received unless previous inquiry is shown to have been made after it. (R. v. St. Sepulchre, Cald. 547). A pauper's statement of what he has heard and believes as to the place of his birth, is within the rule excluding hearsay evidence, and insufficient to support an order for his removal. (Reg. v. Lydeard St. Lawrence (Inhabs.), 1 Gale & D. 191; S. P., Reg. v. Ecclesall Bierlow (Inhabs.), 1 Gale & D. 160).

In an appeal, the respondents, in order to prove the fact of the delivery to them of a certificate given by the appellants, acknowledging the pauper to be their settled inhabitant, produced an old book from their own parish chest, in which was an entry of that fact in the handwriting of a former parish officer; it was held that such evidence was inadmissible. (Rex v. Debenham, 2 B. & Al. 185).

Public or general rights.

Public or general Rights.]—A general right may be proved by traditionary evidence; a particular fact cannot. (Per Ld. Kenyon, C. J., in Outram v. Morewood, 5 T. R. 123).

A right of ferry is a matter in which the public are interested, and as to which, therefore, reputation is evidence. (Pim v. Curell, 6 Mee. & W. 234).

A document drawn up at a meeting of the inhabitants of a township, and signed by them under a resolution to resist the repairs of a road, is evidence of reputation. (Barraclough v. Johnson, 3 Nev. & Per. 233; 8 Ad. & E. 99; S. C.) On an indictment for obstructing a highway to which defendant pleaded not guilty, a witness stated, that about forty years ago a deceased occupier of land over which the road passed, planted a willow near the road. The witness was then asked what the occupier said when he planted the willow. The witness answered, that the occupier said that he planted the willow to shew where the boundary of the road was when he was a boy. It was held, that the statement of the occupier was not receivable in evidence, on the ground that it was evidence of reputation, or as a declaration accompanying an act done, or as a declaration against the interest of the party making it. (Reg. v. Bliss, 2 Nev. & Per. 464; 7 Ad. & E. 550, S. C. See "Highway," Vol. III.)

Upon a question of boundary between two parishes and manors, whether a certain common was within the parish and manor of H. or the parish of B. and manor of M., evidence was admitted of what old persons, then dead, had said concerning the boundaries, though not as to particular facts or transactions. And this, though the old persons were parishioners, and claimed rights of common on the waste, which would be enlarged by their several declarations; there not appearing any dispute at the time respecting the right of such old persons. (Nicholls v. Parker, 14 East, 331, n.; Barnes v. Mawson, 1 M. & Sel. 81). But not so as to a boundary between two estates. (Clothier v. Chapman, 14 East, 331, n.) But where, on an issue as to the boundary of a tenement, evidence has been given that the boundary in question is the same with the boundary of a certain hamlet, evidence of reputation as to the boundary of that hamlet is then receivable as proof of a fact relevant to the issue. (Thomas v. Jenkins, 1 Nev. & Per. 587).

Where in trespass the question was whether certain land was in the parish of A. or parish of B., the land in B. being tithe-free, it was held that ancient leases granted by the ancestor of the landlord, in which the land was described as being in parish B., were admissible as evidence of reputation that the land was in that parish. Old rates made by the parish officers of B. on the occupiers of the land in question were also produced; and an account, containing an overseer's account, in which, against the sum for which the occupier of that land had been assessed, there were crosses made, were produced: it was held that these were evidence that the sums assessed had been paid by the tenants. (Plaxton v. Dare, 10 B. & Cres. 17).

Perambulations are evidence of the extent of a particular parish or manor. (Woolway v. Rowe, 1 Ad. & Ell. 114; Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & Sel. 687; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 284). On a question whether certain land be part of the plaintiff's estate, or waste of the manor, a perambulation of such manor by the lord, including the land in question, is evidence, as showing an assertion of ownership by the lord, though it be not proved that any person on behalf of the plaintiff was present at the perambulation or knew of it. (Woolway v. Rowe, 1 Ad. & Ell. 114).

Before a customary right can be proved by evidence of reputation, a foundation must be laid by showing acts of ownership, and then the evidence of reputation becomes admissible; such evidence being confined to what old persons, who were in a situation to know what these rights are, have been heard to say concerning them. (Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & Sel. 687; Peake's Evid. 15). Reputation is not evidence on an indictment against an individual for not repairing a bridge, ratione tenuræ. (R. v. Antrobus, 6 C. & P. 790).

Declarations as to boundaries or customs, &c., made post litem motam, are not admissible as evidence of reputation. (R. v. Cotton, 3 Camp. 444; 11 Price, 180; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 250).

Hearsay of persons having no interest to misrepresent.

Where Party has no Interest to misrepresent.]—In many cases, the declarations of deceased persons upon a fact which they were competent to know, and who have had no interest to misrepresent, or whose interest was to represent the other way, have been admitted in evidence; thus, if the obligee of a bond indorse on the back of it the payment of interest by the obligor, this will be evidence for the executors of the obligee to rebut the presumption of payment of the bond more than 20 years old. (Gleadow v. Atkin, 1 C. & M. 410; and see Searle v. Lord Barrington, 2 Stra. 826).

Entries by a deceased rector, or vicar, as to the receipt of ecclesiastical dues, are admissible for his successor, for he had no interest to misstate the fact. (2 Gwill. 529; 4 Price, 218). So, entries made by a deceased collector of rates, charging himself with the receipt of money, and made by him in the public books of his office, are admissible against his surety, to prove his receipt. (Goss v. Watlington, 3 B. & B. 132). And in Middleton v. Melton (10 B. & Cress. 317) it was held, that an entry made by a deceased collector of taxes, in a private book kept by him for his own convenience, whereby he charged himself with the receipt of sums of money, was evidence against a surety of the fact of the receipt of such money in an action on a bond conditioned for the due payment of the taxes by the collector, although the parties by whom the money had been paid were alive, and might have been called as witnesses; and that upon the general principle that the entry was to the prejudice of the party who made it. (And see Whitnash v. Gifford, 8 B. & Cres. 556; Gow, 227; Doe Smith v. Cartwright, R. & M. C. N. P. 62; Roscoe, 18, 19; Doe d. Sturt v. Mobbs, 1 Car. & M. 1).

To prove soil and freehold the entries made by a former steward of the manor in his day-book, of receipts of sums of money for trespasses committed upon the place in question, were held to be good evidence, as the steward thereby charged himself with the receipt of money; and these entries may either be in his handwriting, or in a book signed in his handwriting. And the rule is, that if a steward's entry be sufficient to charge himself, it is admissible evidence. (Barry v. Bebbington, 4

T. R. 514; Doe d. Badenham v. Colcombe, 1 Car. & M. 155). To make such entries by an agent evidence, it is not necessary they should be made by the agent if signed by him. (Doe d. Litchfield, Earl, v. Stacey, 6 C. & P. 139).

(4). Hearsay.

To prove the fact of a surrender of an interest in an estate, the books of the attorney, since deceased, who had made an entry of having prepared the writings, and of the charge for the same, as due to himself, and then an entry that they were paid, were admitted in evidence and afterwards agreed by the court to be so. (Warren d. Webb v. Greenville, 2 Str. 1129).

So, to prove the real time of executing a lease to have been different from its actual date, an attorney's entry of charges by himself for making the lease, and of payment of those charges, was admitted as good evidence; (Doe d. Reece v. Robson, 15 East, 33); and see the case of the surgeon, ante, 375).

This proceeds upon the ground that there was a total absence of interest in the persons making the entry to pervert the fact, and at the same time a competency in them to know it. And Bayley, J., said, it had long been an established principle of evidence, that if a party, who has a knowledge of the fact, make an entry of it, whereby he charges himself, or discharges another upon whom he would otherwise have a claim, such entry is admissible evidence of the fact, because it is against his own interest. (Doe Lessee of Reece v. Robson, 15 East, 35).

A party cannot make evidence for himself.

"The general rule," said Lord Hardwicke, (in the case of Glynn v. The Bank of England, 2 Ves. 43), "is, that a man cannot make evidence for himself. What he writes or says for himself cannot be evidence of his right, and consequently cannot be for his representative claiming in his right and place. I will not say" (added Lord Hardwicke) "how length of time may vary it; but otherwise it cannot be any more than for himself." (1 Phill. Ev. 241, 242; R. v. Debenham, 2 B. & Al. 185).

A man's book of accounts is no evidence for the owner of the book, though it is for the adverse party; for his book cannot be of better credit than his oath, which would not serve in his own case. (Tr. per Pais, 348). As to shop books in action for goods sold, &c., see 7 Jac. I. c. 12; B. N. P. 282.

Hearsay, when part of the transaction.

When Hearsay part of the Transaction itself.]—When hearsay is introduced, not as a medium of proof, in order to establish a distinct fact, but as being in itself a part of the transaction in question, it is then admissible; for, to exclude it, might be to exclude the only evidence of which the nature of the case is capable. (Rosc. 17; B. N. P. 40; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 46). As the declarations of a party of the extent of the hurt received by him from an assault made immediately on his receiving it, or in answer to the inquiries of a medical man. (See Thompson v. Trevanion, Skin. 402; Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 193; Hoare v. Allen, 3 Esp. 276; Rex v. Foster, 6 C. & P. 325). In Lord Gordon's case, the declarations of the mob were held admissible in evidence. (21 How. St. Tr. 542).

Titles of office.

Official Situations, &c.]—If, upon collateral issue, it is to be proved that such an one was justice of the peace, baronet, or the like, common reputation is sufficient proof, without showing the commission or letters patent of the creation. (Tr. per Pais, 347).

And in the case of justices of the peace, peace officers, constables, &c., it is sufficient to prove that they acted in those characters, without producing their appointments. (So determined by all the Judges in the case of the Gordons, tried for murder in 1789, 1 Leach, 581; R. v. Shelley, 1 Leach, 381, n.; Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366). And this, although they acted under a special authority, derived from a local act or otherwise. (Butler v. Ford, 1 C. & M. 662).

And in an indictment for disobeying a justice's order for diverting a road, it was held unnecessary to produce the commission of the peace to prove the persons to be magistrates who signed the order. (Per Hotham, B., R. v. ——, Kingston Lent Ass. 1801, 1 Nol. R. L. 598). And where an affidavit was sworn before a person who acted as a commissioner for taking affidavits, it was held sufficient. (R. v. Howard, 1 M. & Rob. 187).

So at the trial of an officer on an information for defrauding government by false returns of musters, it was held sufficient to prove that he acted in the character mentioned in the information, without proving the commission from the king. (R. v. Gardiner, 2 Camp 513). And where a person who acted as a letter-carrier was indicted for embezzlement, under 2 Will. IV. c. 4, the production of his appointment was held to be unnecessary. (R. v. Barrett, 6 C. & P. 124).

And in general, where a party assumes a particular character, proof of that fact will suffice, as against that party. (See Bevan v. Williams, 3 T. R. 635, n.)

5. Dying Declarations.

(5) Dying declarations.

The Dying Declarations of a person who expects to die, respecting the circumstances under which he received a mortal injury, are constantly admitted in criminal prosecutions, where the death is the subject of criminal inquiry, though the accused was not present when they were made, and had no opportunity for cross-examination. (See 1 Phill. Ev. 223; 1 Stark. Ev. 101). And this either against or in favour of the party charged with the death. (Rex v. Scaife, 1 M. & Rob. 551). For it is considered, that when an individual is in constant expectation of immediate death, all temptations to falsehood, either of interest, hope, or fear will be removed, and the awful nature of his situation may be presumed to impress him as strongly with the necessity of a strict adherence to truth as the most solemn obligation of an oath administered in a court of justice. (1 Leach, 502; 1 Gilb. Evid. 280; 1 Chit. C. L. 568, 9). To enable these testimonies to be given in evidence, they must be made when the party is not only in actual danger of death, but when he is aware of the circumstances in which he is placed, and impressed with a sense of speedy dissolution. (1 Leach, 503; 1 East, P. C. 353). But it is not necessary to prove expressions implying apprehensions of immediate danger, if it be clear the party does not expect to survive the injury. (R. v. Bonner, 6 C. & P. 386). And this may be collected from the general circumstances of his condition. (Id.) As where the party was a member of the Romish church, and had confessed, been absolved, and received extreme unction before making the declaration. (R. v. Minton, 1 M'Nally, 386).

A boy between ten and eleven years of age was mortally wounded, and died the next day. On the evening of the day on which he was wounded, he was told by a surgeon that he could not recover. The boy made no reply, but appeared dejected. It appeared, from his answers to questions put to him, that he was aware that he would be punished hereafter if he said what was not true; a declaration made by him at this time was therefore held receivable in evidence on the trial of a person for killing him, as being a declaration in articulo mortis. (Reg. v. Perkins, 9 Car. & P. 395).

But in a case of murder, it appeared that, two days before the death of the deceased, the surgeon told her that she was in a very precarious state; and that, on the day before her death, when she had become much worse, she said to the surgeon that she found herself growing worse, and that she had been in hopes she would have got better, but as she was getting worse she thought it her duty to mention what had taken place. Immediately after this she made a statement, which was considered not receivable in evidence as a declaration in articulo mortis, as it did not sufficiently appear that, at the making of it, the deceased was without hope of recovery. (Reg. v. Megson, 9 Car. & P. 418).

In R. v. Mosley (Ry. & M. C. C. R. 97), it was held, that the declarations of the deceased, made on the day he was wounded, and when he believed he should not recover, were evidence, although he did not die till eleven days after, and although the surgeon did not think his case hopeless, and continued to tell him so till the day of his death. In one case, where the party, being confined to his bed, said to his surgeon, "I am afraid, doctor, I shall never recover;" and in another, where the surgeon having said, "You are in great danger;" the party replied, "I fear I am;" declarations subsequently made were admitted. (R. v. Craven, Lewin, C. C. 77; R. v. Simpson, Lewin, C. C. 78). In R. v. Christie (Car. C. L. 232, O. B. 1821), the deceased asked his surgeon if the wound was necessarily mortal; and on being told that recovery was just possible, and that there had been an instance where a person had recovered after such a wound, he said, "I am satisfied;" and after this he made a statement. This statement was held by Abbott, C. J., and Park, J., to be inadmissible as a declaration in articulo mortis, as it did not appear that the deceased thought himself at the point of death; for being told that the wound was not necessarily mortal, he might still have had a hope of recovery. And where the only evidence of the dying man being aware of his situation consisted in his saying "he should never recover," it was held insufficient. (R. v. Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. 631).

The declarations are only admissible where the death is the subject of the charge, and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration. Thus in a case, where the prisoner was indicted for administering savin to a woman pregnant, but not quick with child, with intent to procure abortion; the woman was dead, and, for the prosecution, evidence of her dying declaration upon the subject was tendered. The learned judge rejected the evidence, observing, that although the declaration might relate to the cause of the death, still such declarations were admissible in those cases alone where the death of the party was the subject of inquiry. (R. v. Hutchinson, 2 B. & C. 608). So in R. v. Mead (2 B. & C. 605; 4 D. & R. 120, S. C.), defendant having been convicted of perjury, a rule nisi for a new trial was obtained; whilst that was pending, the defendant Mead shot the prosecutor Law; and on shewing cause against the rule, an affidavit was tendered of the dying declaration of the latter, as to the transaction out of which the prosecution for perjury arose. The Court held, that it could not be read; for dying declarations are admissible only where the death is the subject of the charge, and the circumstances of the death are the subject of the declaration. So in trials for robbery, the dying declarations of the party robbed are rejected. (Per Bayley and Best, JJ. 1822, 1 Phill. Ev. 225; R. v. Lloyd, 4 C. & P. 233).

In Wright v. Littler, (3 Burr, 1244), however, the declarations of subscribing witnesses, confessing the forgery of a deed, were admitted; and see Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, (6 East, 195); but in Doe d. Sutton v. Ridgway, 4 B. & Al. 54, Abbott, C. J., says, that the cases cited (viz. those of the deceased persons, in cases of murder or manslaughter, or subscribing witnesses to deeds, confessing the deeds to be forged) are the only exceptions to the general rule of not receiving evidence unless upon oath, and with the opportunity of a cross-examination; and Bayley, J., observes, that the declarations admitted in the case of Aveson v. Kinnaird, (6 East, 188), were a part of the res gestæ.

The dying party must, at the time of making the declarations, to render them admissible, have an idea of a future state; therefore the declarations of a dying child, only of four years of age, have been held inadmissible. (R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 598).

Nothing can be evidence in a declaration in articulo mortis that would not be so if the party were sworn. Therefore, any thing the murdered person, in articulo mortis, says as to facts, is receivable, but not what he says as matter of opinion. (R. v. Sellers, O. B. 1796, Car. C. L. 233).

If the declaration of the deceased, at the time of his making it, be reduced into writing, the written document must be given in evidence, and no parol testimony respecting its contents can be admitted. (Vin. Ab. Evid. 38, A. b.) And if a declaration in articulo mortis be taken down in writing, and signed by the party making it, the judge will neither receive a copy of the paper in evidence, nor will he receive parol evidence of the declaration. (R. v. Gay, 7 C. & P. 230). But where the dying person repeated his declaration three several times in the course of the same day, the fact of its having been committed to writing in the presence of a magistrate, on the second occasion, will not, it seems, exclude parol evidence of the others, where it is not in the power of the prosecutor at the trial to give that which has been committed to writing in evidence. (R. v. Reason, 1 Str. 500; 16 How. St. Tr. S. C.) And on one occasion in Ireland, in a case where the depositions of the individual were made at a time when he thought himself dying, taken down by a magistrate, and not in the presence of the prisoner, it being objected at the trial that these depositions were not pursuant to the stat. 10 Car. c. 1, (Irish), the magistrate was sworn and gave parol evidence of the declarations of the deceased. (R. v. Callaghan, 1 M'Nally, 385).

The dying declaration of a criminal at the scaffold will not be thus admissible; because his oath could no longer have been received in a court of justice after his blood is corrupted. (1 Leach, 337; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 51).

The court are to decide as to the admissibility of the declaration. (1 Leach, 504; R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 532; R. v. Van Butchell, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 629).

6. Confessions.

(6). Confessions.

We have already seen how far the confessions of the party himself are evidence against him. (Tit. "Confession," Vol. I.)

---

7. Opinions of Witnesses.

(7). Opinions.

Opinions.]—Upon questions of skill and judgment, the opinions of competent judges are admissible in evidence; but in general mere matter of opinion is not so. Thus, on a trial where the defence is insanity, a witness of medical skill may be asked, whether such and such appearances, proved by other witnesses, are, in his judgment, symptoms of insanity, (R. v. Wright, R. & R. C. 456); but it is questionable if he can be asked, whether, from other testimony given, the act with which the prisoner is charged is, in his opinion, an act of insanity, for this is the very point to be decided by the jury. (Id.) A physician, who has not seen the particular patient, may, after hearing the evidence of others, be called to prove, on oath, the general effects of the disease described by them, and its probable consequences in the particular case. (Peake's Evid. 208; and see Roscoe, 77).

---

8. Evidence of Character.

(8) Evidence of character.

In trials for felony and high treason, and in trials also for misdemeanors (where the direct object of the prosecution is to punish the offence), the prisoner is always permitted to call witnesses to his general character; and in every case of doubt proof of good character will be entitled to great weight. The inquiry as to the prisoner's general character ought manifestly to bear some analogy and reference to the nature of the charge against him. On a charge of stealing, it would be irrelevant and absurd to inquire into the prisoner's loyalty or humanity; on a charge of high treason, it would be equally absurd to inquire into his honesty and punctuality in private dealings. Such evidence relates to principles of moral conduct, which, however they might operate on other occasions, would not be likely to operate on that which alone is the subject of inquiry; it would not afford the least presumption, that the prisoner might not have been tempted to commit the crime for which he is tried, and is therefore totally inapplicable to the point in question. The inquiry must also be as to the general character; for it is general character alone which can afford any test of general conduct, or raise a presumption that the person who had maintained a fair reputation down to a certain period would not then begin to act a dishonest, unworthy part. Proof of particular transactions in which the defendant may have been concerned is not admissible as evidence of his general good character. The best medium of proof of general character is, by showing how the person stands in general estimation; proof that he is reputed to be honest is evidence of his character for honesty, and the species of evidence most correctly resorted to in such inquiries. (1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 177).

(1). Public Documents.

This evidence is only admitted in prosecutions which subject a man to corporal punishment, and not in actions or informations for penalties, though founded on the fraudulent conduct of the defendant. (Peake's Evid. 7).

"The true line of distinction," Eyre, C. B., said, "is this: in a direct prosecution for a crime, such evidence is admissible; but where the prosecution is not directly for the crime, but for the penalty, as in this information, it is not." (Attorney-General v. Bowman, cited 2 Bos. & Pull. 532).

On the trial of an indictment for a rape, evidence is admissible on the part of the prisoner, that the woman bore a notoriously bad character for want of chastity and common decency, or that she had previously been criminally connected with the prisoner; but it cannot be shewn that she had a criminal connexion with other persons. (R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. C. C. 211; 1 Phill. Evid. 176, 7 ed.) And, on an indictment for an assault with intent to commit a rape, general evidence of the woman's bad character, previous to the supposed offence, is clearly admissible; but evidence of particular facts, to impeach her chastity, cannot be received in this case more than in the last, not even for the purpose of contradicting her answers in cross-examination. (R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. 243). Her answers to questions respecting particular facts, not involved in the issue, are conclusive. And if, on cross-examination, she admit her own misconduct in some earlier transactions, it would be proper, on re-examination, to inquire into her conduct subsequent to such transactions, for the purpose of restoring her credit. Other witnesses may also be called to shew that she has since retrieved her character. (Id. 1 Phill. Evid. 176, 7 ed.) And see further, post, "Rape," Vol. V.

III. Modes of Proof by Written Evidence.

The Modes of proving Facts are by, 1st, Written Evidence; and 2nd, Verbal Evidence by Witnesses. Modes of Proof.

Written Evidence may consist of public documents,—of records and proceedings in courts,—or of private documents. (1). Writte evidence.

(1). Public Documents.

Acts of Parliament.]—Acts of parliament relate either to the kingdom at large, when they are called general acts; or only to particular classes of men, or to certain individuals, in which case they are called private acts. (Bull. N. P. 222). Acts of Parliament.

Public acts are not the subject of proof in any court of justice; for Public acts.

(1). Public Documents.

being the law of the land, they are supposed to be known to every man. The printed statute-book is on all occasions referred to, not as an authentic copy of the statute itself (which is a record), but as hints of that which is supposed to be lodged in every man's mind already. (Gilb. 10).

Preamble of acts.

The preamble of a public act of Parliament, reciting that certain outrages had been committed in particular parts of the kingdom, is admissible in evidence, for the purpose of proving an introductory averment in an information for a libel, that outrages of that description had existed, because in judgment of law every subject is privy to the making of the statute. (R. v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532).

Private acts of Parliament, not concerning the public, are not considered as laws, but facts, and therefore must be proved like other records which concern private rights, by copies examined with the Parliament rolls; for the printed statutes are, in this respect, only private copies, and, consequently, no evidence of the fact. (Bull. N. P. 225). In most private acts a clause is inserted directing that the act shall be deemed and taken to be as a public act, or that a copy printed by the king's printer shall be admitted in evidence, which supersedes the necessity of evidence to prove, or special pleading to introduce them to the notice of a court of justice. (Beaumont v. Mountain, 10 Ring. 404; 4 M. & Sel. 117, S. C.; and see Woodward v. Cotton, 1 C. M. & R. 44). But the insertion of such a clause does not, it seems, put a private act on the same footing with a public general act, with regard to recitals contained in it. (Brett v. Beales, M. & M. 441).

Irish acts. 41 Geo. 3, c. 90.

By stat. 41 Geo. III. U. K. c. 90, s. 9, the statutes of England and of Great Britain, printed and published by the king's printer, shall be received as conclusive evidence of the several statutes in the courts of either kingdom. (See further, post, "Statutes," Vol. V.)

Journals of Parliament.

Journals of Parliament.]—The journals of the houses of Parliament may be proved by examined copies; but the printed journals are not evidence. (Lord Melville's case, 24 How. St. Tr. 603). In Jones v. Randall (Cowp. 17), it was held an unstamped copy of the minutes of the reversal of a judgment in the House of Lords, without more of the proceeding, was evidence of such reversal.

The journals are in general evidence of the facts therein stated. (Rex v. Franklin, 17 How. St. Tr. 617). But the resolutions of the house are not so. (Oates's case, 10 id. 1165—7).

Proclamations, &c.

Proclamations, Addresses, and Articles of War.]—These, as printed by the king's printer, are considered as sufficiently proving themselves by the mere production of a witness, who purchased them of such printer. (See Rex v. Withers, 5 T. R. 446; Bradley v. Arthur, 4 B. & Cres. 304; Attorney-General v. Theakstone, 8 Price, 89). A paper from the Secretary of State's office, transmitted by the British ambassador at a foreign court, and purporting to be a declaration of war by the government of that country against another foreign state, is admissible for the purpose of shewing the precise period of the commencement of the war. (Theluson v. Cosling, 4 Esp. 266). The recitals in a proclamation are evidence of the facts recited. (Rex v. Sutton, 4 M. & Sel. 532).

Gazette.

Gazette.]—The gazette printed and published by the king's printer, or by the authority of government, is evidence of all acts of state, and is sufficiently proved by the production by a witness who purchased it of such printer. (Rex v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436). But according to Rex v. Forsyth, (R. & R. C. C. 277), it seems not to be necessary to prove it was bought of the gazette printer, or where it came from.

It is evidence of all acts of state therein recited (id.), but not of any private matters respecting individuals (Rex v. Holt, 5 T. R. 436), as the appointment of an officer to a commission in the army (Kirwan v. Cock- burn, 5 Esp. 233; Rex v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513), or a grant of land, &c., (Rex v. Holt, 5 T. R. 443), or of a division of a parish into distinct parishes by an order in council. (Greenwood v. Wookam, 2 M. & Rob. 363).

1. Public documents, &c.

The Gazette is no evidence of a party having had notice of a private matter contained therein, unless it be proved that such party was in the habit of reading, or had actually read, the Gazette itself, or the like. (See Peake, 154, 155; Leeson v. Holt, 1 Stark. 186; Munn v. Baker, 2 Stark. 255; M. & M. 153: Rowley v. Horne, 3 Bing. 2; Harratt v. Wise, 9 B. & Cres. 712).

Almanacks.

Almanacks.]—The examination of an almanack, that such a day of the month was Sunday, was ruled to be sufficient; and that a trial of this by a jury is not necessary, although it is a matter of fact. (Page v. Fawcett, Cro. Eliz. 227). But the almanack should be annexed to the common prayer-book. (Brough v. Perkins, 6 Mod. 81; see tit. "Almanack," Vol. I.)

Parish register.

Parish, Non-parochial, and other Registers.]—The entry of the names and titles of persons in a church book, either for marriages or births, is evidence; but not conclusive of the marriage or birth of any persons, unless the identity of the person (by such entries intended) is fully proved, and also strengthened with circumstances, as cohabitation, the allowance of the parties themselves, and the like. (11 Vin. Abr. 89; Rex v. North Petherton, 5 B. & Cres. 508; 4 D. & R., M. C. 79, S. C.)

But a day-book from whence the register is made up was not allowed as evidence to contradict the latter in a question of legitimacy; for though it was insisted that one was the original entry, the other was the only register, and there cannot be two registers in one parish. (May v. May, 2 Str. 1073; Bull. N. P. 247). And in Doe v. Bray, (8 B. & Cres. 813), it was held, that an entry in the register-book, by the minister of the parish, of the baptism of a child which had taken place before he became minister, or had any connexion with the parish, and of which he received information from the parish clerk, was not admissible in evidence, nor was the private memorandum of the fact made by the clerk, who was present at the baptism.

A parish register, containing an entry of baptism as to the time of a child's birth, is not evidence of the age. (Wihen v. Law, 3 Stark. 63). Nor is the register of the christening of a child in a particular parish evidence, when not accompanied by other circumstances, that the child was born in the parish. (Rex v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508; 8 D. & R. 325; 4 D. & R., M. C. 79, S. C.; 12 Vin. Abr. 89, supra). If a marriage be proved by a person who was present, it is not necessary to prove the registration, or license, or banns. (Allison's case, R. & R. 109).

The entry may be proved by an examined copy from the entry in the register, or by production of the register itself. (B. N. P. 247). The attesting witness to the register need not be subpœnaed. (Dougl. 182).

We have just seen, that some evidence of identity of the parties, concerning whom the entry is made, must be given. This may be effected by calling the minister, clerk, or attesting witness, or any other person present on or immediately before or after the occasion, or by proving the handwriting of the party to the entry, if he signed it. (Dougl. 162).

By stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 146, s. 7, it is enacted, that copies of the register-books, verified by the officiating minister of the parish, shall be transmitted annually by the churchwardens, after they or one of them shall have signed the same, to the registrars of the diocese within which the church is situated. But quære, whether the bishop's transcipts, made before that act, can be used except as secondary evidence? (Walker v. Beauchamp, 6 C. & P. 552).

Non-parochial registers.

The proofs of births, deaths, and marriages, are now regulated by the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 86, s. 38, which enacts, that certified copies of entries, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the registrar-general's office, shall be evidence of the birth, death, or marriage to which they relate, without other proof of such entry. The entries of other registrars, besides the registrar-general, may be evidence under limitations, (ss. 22, 23, 28), and they and all rectors, &c. are bound to give certified copies, (s. 35), but it is not provided that such certificate shall be evidence without verification. The act 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 85, provides for the registration of marriages solemnized under that act, and is also incorporated with c. 86; and it enacts, that the provisions of the act c. 86 relating to the register of marriages, or certified copies thereof, shall extend to marriages under the act c. 85.

1. Public documents, &c.

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 92, certain non-parochial registers of births, marriages, and deaths, transferred to the registrar-general, are made admissible in evidence, either by producing them, or certified extracts from them, after previous notice to the opposite party. (See tit. "Register," Vol. V.)

Dissenters', &c. registers

The copy of a register of a dissenting chapel is not evidence to prove a marriage, birth, or death, as it is not a public document. (Newnham v. Raithby, 1 Phill. 315; Whittuck v. Waters, 4 C. & P. 375).

Foreign registers.

The copy of a register of a foreign chapel is not admissible to prove a marriage abroad. (Leader v. Barry, 1 Esp. 353). Neither is the copy of a register of baptism kept in the island of Guernsey. (Huet v. Le Mesurier, 1 Cox's Ca. 275; see Brown v. Thornton, 1 Nev. & Per. 339; 6 Ad. & E. 185, S. C.)

Other public books, &c.

Other Public Books, Entries, &c.]—Entries in public books are frequently evidence, and they are proveable either by production of the books themselves, or by examined copies of the entries. Thus entries in books of the Navy-office are sufficient evidence that a person of a particular name is dead, proving also the usage to return such persons dead, and the identity of the party. (Bull. N. P. 249; Wallace v. Cook, 5 Esp. 117; Rhode's case, 1 Leach, 24).

Excise.

Excise books, transcribed from the master's specimen papers, are evidence against him, without calling the officers who have transcribed them, as it is said, ex necessitate rei.

Customs, land tax, Bank, East India Company, &c.

(R. v. Grimwood, 1 Price, 369). So entries in the books of the custom-house, land-tax commissioners, Bank, East India Company, or South Sea Company, or the like, are evidence. (See Geery v. Hopkins, 2 Ld. Raym. 851, 7 Mod. 129, S. C.; R. v. King, 2 T. R. 234; Breton v. Cope, Peake, 30; Warriner v. Giles, 2 Stra. 954; Crew v. Saunders, Id. 1005; Edwards v. Vesey, Hardw. 128). But land-tax assessments are not evidence of seisin where it is shewn to be usual to retain the name of the deceased proprietors on the books till the estate is sold to a different family. (Doe v. Arkwright, 1 Nev. & Man. 731).

Lloyd's list.

So an entry in the book at Lloyd's has been admitted as evidence. (3 Esp. 242; Bain v. Case, 3 C. & P. 496. But see Freeman v. Baker, 5 C. & P. 475).

Poll-books.

So an entry in the poll-books at an election is evidence. (Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 424; Brocas v. Mayor and Aldermen of London, 1 Stra. 307).

Post-office marks.

Post-office marks in town or country, proved to be such, are evidence that the letters on which they are impressed were in the office to which those marks belong at the dates those marks specify. (R. v. Plumer, R. & R. C. C. 264; Fletcher v. Braddyll, 3 Stark. 64. See Warren v. Warren, 1 C., M. & R. 250). The mark of the double postage having been paid does not of itself prove the letter contained an inclosure. (R. v. Plumer, R. & R. 264). The post-mark may be contradicted by parol evidence of the real date of posting. (Stocken v. Collen, 7 M. & W. 515).

Heralds' Office.

Rolls or ancient books in the Heralds' Office are evidence to prove a pedigree; but an extract of a pedigree, proved to be taken out of records, shall not; because such extract is not the best evidence in the nature of the thing, as a copy of such records might be had. (Bull. N. P. 248; 3 Blac. Com. 105). The heralds' visitation books of counties are evidence on a question of pedigree. (Pitton v. Walker, 1 Stra. 162).

Duchy of Cornwall.

Documents affecting the possession or revenues of the duchy of Cornwall are public acts, and evidence of the rights of the Crown. (Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & Cres. 743).

1. Public entries, &c.

Ship's papers.

The copy of an official paper, containing an entry of the number of passengers on board a vessel, made in pursuance of an act of parliament by the captain, and deposited at the East India House, is admissible to prove the number and description of the persons on board the vessels. (Richardson v. Mellish, R. & M. C. N. P. 66; 2 Bing. 229, S. C.). So the log-book of a man-of-war is evidence to shew when a certain ship came under her convoy. (D'Israeli v. Jowett, 1 Esp. R. 427).

Clerk of peace books.

Entries in the books of the clerk of the peace of deputations (many years since granted to gamekeepers by the owner of a manor) are evidence to shew that the party there mentioned exercised the right of appointing gamekeepers, by applying to the clerk of the peace to get certificates, without production of the deputations themselves. (Hunt v. Andrews, 3 B. & Al. 341; Rushworth v. Craven, 1 M'C. & Y. 417).

Magistrate's clerk.

A minute-book, kept by the magistrate's clerk, is not evidence to shew who were appointed by the magistrates to be surveyors of the highways for the year 1812, without proof of search for the original appointment, under the hands and seals of the magistrates. (1 Car. & M. 157).

Master's office, Queen's Bench.

The book from the Master's office in the Queen's Bench is admissible to prove a person an attorney of that Court without production of the roll. (R. v. Crossley, 2 Esp. 524). So the books of the King's Bench and Fleet prisons are admissible to prove the dates of the commitment and discharge of prisoners; (R. v. Aickles, Leach, C. L. 436); but not the cause of the commitment, of which the commitment itself is the best evidence. (Salte v. Thomas, 3 B. & P. 188).

Fleet prison.

The books of the Fleet prison are not, as it seems, evidence to prove a marriage, for they are not made by public authority. (Reed v. Passer, Peake, 231; 1 Esp. 213, S. C.; Reed v. Passer, Peake, 233, n.; Roscoe, 93; sed vide Reed v. Passer, Peake, 231; 1 Esp. 197; 16 Ves. 49; Doe d. Davies v. Gatacre, 8 Car. & P. 578).

Corporation books.

Corporation books, so far as they concern the public government of a town, when publicly kept, and the entries made by a proper officer, are admissible as evidence of the facts contained therein. (Peake, 97; Marriage v. Lawrence, 3 B. & Al. 142; R. v. Mothersell, 1 Stra. 93; Brett v. Beales, 1 M. & M. 29). And corporation books are, it seems, in all cases, as between members of the corporation, admissible in evidence. (Mayor of London v. Mayor of Lynn, 1 Hen. Bla. 214, n.); though this seems contradicted by the recent case of Hill v. Manchester Water Works, (5 B. & Adol. 866). In a case of pedigree, an entry in the books of the Merchant Tailors' Company, that T. C. was admitted a freeman of that Company by the description of T. C., of S. street, son of J. C., deceased, is receivable in evidence, not only to prove the fact that T. C. was admitted a freeman, but that the Company received him by that description, and entries of admission to the freedom of the City of London are also evidence in like manner. (Collins v. Maule, 8 Car. & P. 502). If the books are ancient, it must be shewn that they came from the proper custody, as from a chest which has been always in the custody of the clerk of the corporation. (Mercers of Shrewsbury v. Hart, 1 C. & P. 114). It is not sufficient if they were brought from a chest found in the house of a former clerk after his death. (Id.) The entries may be proved by examined copies. (Brocas v. Mayor & Aldermen of London, 1 Stra. 308), or by the books themselves. If the entries do not relate to corporate acts, the contents must be proved by other means. (R. v. Gwyn, 1 Stra. 401).

When an instrument being a corporate act, and intended to be proved as such, is adduced in evidence, the seal of the corporation must be proved to be genuine by a witness acquainted with it; Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 307); but it is not necessary to call a witness who saw the seal fixed. (Id.) The seal of the corporation of London proves itself. (Doe d. Woodmass v. Mason, 1 Esp. 53).

1. Public entries, &c.

Public Documents.]—The voting papers given in at the election of councillors, under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, which, by section 35, the mayor is to cause to be kept in the town-clerk's office for six months after the election, are not such public documents as to prove themselves on production from the proper custody. Where, therefore, such papers, having been handed over by the mayor to the town-clerk, were by his clerk delivered over to the clerk of the succeeding town-clerk who produced them at the trial; it was held that the former town-clerk, also, should have been called to prove that the papers transmitted by him were the same which he had received from the mayor. (Reg. v. Ledgard, 3 Nev. & Per. 513; 8 Ad. & E. 535, S. C.).

Parish books.

Entries in parish books are sometimes evidence, as an entry in the parish register; as to which see ante, 385. On the trial of an indictment for the non-repair of highways, entries in an ancient parish book, produced by the churchwarden from the parish chest, were admitted as evidence, to shew who were surveyors of the highways in 1707. (Rex v. Inhabitants of Pembroke, 1 Car. & M. 157).

But on an issue raised upon an alleged immemorial custom for the parishioners of a parish to go through a particular house upon their perambulations of the parish boundaries, entries in the parish books, recording the fact, that the perambulations had taken a particular line, were not received evidence on such an issue. (Taylor v. Devey, 7 Ad. & E. 45).

Entries made by a medical officer in a book, which he is directed to keep by a rule under the hand and seal of the Poor Law Commissioners, of his visits to sick paupers, are not admissible in evidence for him as a public writing to prove that he paid such visits. Merrick v. Wakley, 3 Nev. & Per. 284; 8 Ad. & E. 170).

Apprentices.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 46, (ante, "Apprentice," Vol. I.), the particulars of parish indentures are directed to be entered in a book; which book shall be deemed sufficient evidence in courts of law, of the existence and particulars of such indentures, in case it shall be proved the originals are lost or destroyed.

Poor rates.

By 17 Geo. II. c. 38, s. 14, true copies of all rates and assessments, made for the relief of the poor, are to be entered in a book provided for that purpose by the churchwardens of every parish. (Post, "Poor," Vol. IV.)

Vestry books.

Entries in vestry books are sometimes evidence: thus an entry in a vestry book, stating that A. was duly elected treasurer of the parish at a vestry duly held in pursuance of notice, is evidence of such election. (R. v. Martin, 2 Camp. 100; and see Price v. Littlewood, 2 Camp. 288, ante, 385).

Inspection.

Though inspection of public books and writings is in general granted in civil cases, it is not so in criminal cases; where it would have the effect of making a defendant furnish evidence to criminate himself. R. v. Heyden, 1 W. Bla. 351; R. v. Dr. Purnell, id. 37; 1 Wils. 239, S. C.; R. v. Worsenham, 1 Lord Raym. 705; Reg. v. Mead, 2 Id. 927; R. v. Cornelius, 2 Stra. 1210. (See as to Inspection, post, "Inspection," Vol. III.)

Inscriptions.

Inscriptions on Tombs.]—Inscriptions on monuments and gravestones are frequently evidence of the truth of the facts stated in such inscriptions on questions of pedigree, subject to the common rules respecting proof of identity. (3 Bla. Com. 105. See Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 594; Berkeley Peerage Case, 4 Camp. 404; Herbert v. Tuckal, T. Raym. 84). But a pedigree, which purported to have been compiled from monumental inscriptions, family records, and history, was held not admissible in evidence, on the trial of a writ of right. (Davies v. Lowndes, 5 Bing. N. C. 161; 7 Scott, 22). It seems a copy of an inscription on a tombstone in the burial-ground of a Wesleyan chapel is not evidence of the death of a party, in a question not of pedigree. (Whittuck v. Waters, 4 P. & P. 375.)

1. Public entries, &c.

Public Surveys.—Surveys, taken on public occasions, are also evidence to ascertain the rights of individuals not named in them. Thus Doomsday book, which was a survey of the king's lands made in the time of William the Conqueror, is the only evidence to prove whether a manor is held in ancient demesne; that is, whether it was part of the socage tenure, in the hands of Edward the Confessor, or not; and so high is the credit of this book, that the inspection is made by the court. So if a question arise as to the extent of the ports, there lies in the Exchequer a particular survey which ascertains it: and in many instances, where a commission has been confined to a particular place, it has been received as admissible evidence; and even when the commission has been lost, the survey taken under it has been allowed as evidence. (Anon., Hob. 188; Gilb. Ev. 78; 1 Phill. Ev. 403, 7th ed).

Public surveys. Doomsday book.

But, to prove the extent and rights of a manor which had formerly been parcel of the duchy of Lancaster, a document produced from the duchy-office was tendered in evidence, purporting to be a survey of the manor made in 33 Eliz. while the manor belonged to the duchy, by the deputy-surveyor of the duchy, founded on the presentment of the tenants of the manor, at a court of survey, of which it appeared that Queen Elizabeth had paid the expenses, was held to be inadmissible, either as a document made under public authority, or as evidence of reputation. (Evans v. Taylor, 3 Nev. & Per. 174; 7 Ad. & E. 617).

Histories.]—Books and chronicles of public history are not admissible in order to prove particular facts or customs. But they are evidence to prove a matter relating to the kingdom at large, as being the best evidence of which the matter is capable. (B. N. P. 249; 1 Stark. Evid., Part II. p. 180). Camden's Britannia was rejected on the question, whether, by the custom of Droitwich, salt-pits could be sunk in any part of the town, or only in a certain place. (Stainer v. The Burgesses of Droitwitch, 1 Salk. 281; Skin. 623). So on a question, whether the Abbey de Sentibus was an inferior abbey or not, Dugdale's Monasticon was refused for evidence, because the original records might be had in the Augmentation Office. (Cited in Stainer v. Burgesses of Droitwich, 1 Salk. 281). And on the argument of a special case, the counsel for the defendants, with a view to illustrate and explain the object and intention of a provision in an old act of Parliament, proposed to read an extract from a printed book found in the Bodleian Library, dated 1706, and professing to contain the rules and regulations of the Company of Mine Adventurers of England; and also a document from the Rolls' Chapel, inrolled there as a deed of a partnership of the Million Bank, dated 1698. The plaintiff's counsel objecting—the court refused to permit them to be read. (Bank of England v. Anderson, 4 Scott, 83).

Histories

But in Neale v. Fry, (cited in 1 Salk. 282, and Bull. N. P. 249, as Neale v. Jay), in order to show that a deed was forged which bore date 1 Ph. & M., in which all the titles were given to Philip which he used after the surrender of Charles V., chronicles were admitted to shew that he did not take those titles upon him till six months after the date of the deed. And in the case of St. Catherine's Hospital, (1 Salk. 282), Lord Hale admitted Speed's Chronicles to prove a particular point of history in the time of Edward III. (Id.; and see Lord Brounker v. Sir R. Atkins, Skinn. 14).

The Year Books may be evidence to prove the course of the court. (R. v. St. Catherine's Hospital, 1 Salk. 282; 1 Stark. Ev. Part II. p. 181).

Dugdale's Baronage is not evidence to prove a descent. (Piercy's case, 2 Jon. 164; 1 Phill. Ev. 23, 7th ed.)

Ancient Maps.]—An ancient map will be received as evidence where Ancient maps.

1. Public entries, &c.

it has accompanied possession, and agreed with the boundaries as adjusted by ancient purchases. If two manors are in the hands of the same person, and a map is made by him, and afterwards one of the manors is conveyed to another person, and then, at a distant time, disputes arise as to the boundaries, the map so taken will be evidence: but if the person under whose direction the map was taken was possessed of only one manor, or a lord describes the boundaries of his waste, or the churchwardens cause a copperplate map to be made, wherein they describe land which an individual claims, to be a public highway, the map so taken is not evidence against the rights of persons not parties to the making of it. (Peake's Ev. 87, 95, and cases there cited).

In an action for breaking flood-gates, the defendant justified as lessee of a mill, which he held of the Bishop of W. For the defendant, old leases of the mill, granted by the Bishop of W., were produced from the bishop's registry, and read in evidence; but he was not permitted to put in an old map of the place in question, also brought from the Bishop of W.'s registry. (Wakeman v. West, 7 C. & P. 479).

Terriers, &c.

Terriers]—An old terrier, or survey of a manor, whether ecclesiastical or temporal, may be given in evidence when proved to have come from the proper repository; for there can be no other way of ascertaining the old tenures or boundaries. (Bull. N. P. 248; 1 Phill. Ev. 419; Rosc. 51).

A terrier of glebe is not evidence for the parson, unless signed by the churchwardens as well as the parson; nor these either, if they be of his nomination: and though it be signed by them, yet it seems to deserve very little credit, unless it be likewise signed by the substantial inhabitants. But, in all cases, it is certainly strong evidence against the parson. (Bull. N. P. 248).

An ecclesiastical terrier is evidence of the possessions of a church, if it has been regularly made and preserved in the proper repository. Ecclesiastical terriers are constantly received in questions of tithes: they are ecclesiastical records, made in perpetuam rei memoriam, and are as solemn instruments as any that can be produced on such subjects. (Drake v. Smyth, 5 Price, 380; 1 Phill. Ev. 419, 7th ed.)

Unless an ecclesiastical terrier be proved to have come from either the bishop's register office, (4 Gwill. 1406; 2 Anstr. 386), or the registry of the archdeacon of the diocese, (4 Gwill. 1450; 3 Anstr. 795), or from the church chest, (Armstrong v. Hewitt, 4 Price, 216), it cannot, in general, be admitted in evidence. A paper, therefore, purporting to be a terrier, found in the charter chest of a college, which had property in the parish, was thought to be inadmissible to disprove a modus. (4 Gwill. 1406).

Under particular circumstances, this rule respecting the custody of the terriers has been relaxed, and a terrier has been admitted, though not brought from one of the regular repositories, when the custody in another place has been satisfactorily explained. (1 Phill. Ev. 419). A terrier found in the registry of the dean and chapter of Lichfield has been admitted as evidence against a prebendary of Lichfield. (2 Anstr. 387).

Book of dean and chapter.

A book kept in the chapter house of the dean and chapter of Sarum, purporting to contain copies of leases granted by the dean and chapter, is, as a public book, evidence of those leases, for the purpose of reputation, without proof of possession under those leases. (Coombs v. Coether, M. & N. C. N. P. 398).

Rolls of manor.

Rolls of Manor, &c.]—The rolls of a court baron, or customary court, are evidence between the lord and his copyholders or tenants. (Gilb. 67). A book in which the steward of a manor entered the fines assessed, as well those paid as those unpaid held, not evidence for the lord of the manor to shew what fines had been paid, although the steward had received it from his predecessor, and it was accessible to all the tenants. (Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Caldecott, 7 Bing. 433). Ancient writings, though not properly court rolls, but found among them, and delivered down from steward to steward, purporting to be made ex assensu omnium tenentium, have been held to be good evidence, to prove the course of descent within a manor: and this, although not signed by any of the tenants. (Denn Goodwin v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466; 1 Phill. Evid. 417. See R. v. Thuscross, 1 Ad. & El. 126). A presentment in a manor book will not be rejected because part of it has been cut off, when there is no ground to suspect that the mutilation is fraudulent. (Evans v. Rees, 10 Ad. & El. 151. See post, 402). 2. Records, &c.

Ship's Register.]—By 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 55, s. 40, copies of oaths and declarations, and of extracts from the book of registry, shall be allowed and received as evidence upon every trial at law, without the production of the original or originals, and without the testimony or attendance of any collector or comptroller, or other person or persons acting for them respectively, in all cases as fully, and to all intents and purposes, as such original or originals, if produced by any collector or collectors, comptroller or comptrollers, or other person or persons acting for them, could or might legally be admitted or received in evidence. (See the enactment and cases, tit. "Ships," Vol. V. p. 1016). Ship's register.

2. Records and Proceedings in Courts.

Records.]—Records are the memorials of the proceedings of the legislature, and of the Queen's courts of justice, preserved in rolls of parchment; and they are considered of such authority that no evidence is allowed to contradict them. (1 Inst. 127 b; R. v. Hopper, 3 Price, 495; 1 Phill. Ev. 316). Thus, on an indictment for assisting the escape of a convict out of prison, if the record of the conviction is produced by the proper officer, evidence is not admissible to dispute the statement in the record, or to shew that it has never been filed among the records of the county, even although the indictment refer to it with a prout patet as remaining among these records. (Rex v. Shaw, Russ. & R. 526). (2). Records in general.

But records are only conclusive evidence, generally speaking, against those who are parties to them, or their privies, and not strangers. (See Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 How. St. Tr. 538). A judgment obtained by A., in an action of use and occupation against B. and C., is no evidence to charge B. in a subsequent action brought by A. against him alone for the use and occupation of the same premises for a subsequent period. (Christy v. Tancred, 9 M. & W. 438). In matters of general concern, as customs, tolls, public ways, &c. they are conclusive. (Rosc. 80). They are not evidence of matters coming collaterally in question, nor of any matter incidentally cognizable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the record. (20 How. St. Tr. 533).

Proof by Record itself, or Exemplification.]—When a record is the very gist of an issue in criminal cases, as in a plea of autrefois acquit or convict, it should be proved by production of the record itself, if it be a record of the same court in which the record is pleaded; or if a record of another court, by an exemplification under the great seal, which is of itself a record, and needs no further proof; (Gilb. Evid. 14; 10 Co. 93); or by an exemplification of it under the seal of the court, which needs no further proof. (Gilb. Evid. 19; Tooker v. Duke of Beaufort, Sayer, 297). Proof by record itself, or by exemplification.

The record of an inferior court, when the gist of the issue is proved by an exemplification of the record, certified under a writ of certiorari, issued by the superior court. (Tidd, 804).

In order to obtain an exemplification of a record of a concurrent superior court a certiorari should be issued by the cursitor, directed to the chief justice of the superior court, requiring him to certify the record to the Court of Chancery; and the record being thereupon certified, an exemplification of it under the great seal is then sent by mittimus to the court requiring the exemplification, to be there used; (Tidd, 804; Gilb. Evid. 14, 15); and the same practice should be observed to obtain an exemplication of the record of a superior court to be produced to an inferior one.

So, where the exemplification of the record of an inferior court is desired to be obtained for the purpose of evidence in a superior court, as the Queen's Bench, a certiorari should be sued out either with the cursitor, or with the proper officer of the Court of Queen's Bench, directed to the chief justice, judge, or officer of the inferior court, in whose custody the record is supposed to be, requiring him to certify the record to the Court of Queen's Bench; and thereupon an exemplification of the record, under the seal of the inferior court, will be transmitted to the Court of Queen's Bench, to be there used as evidence.

When an ancient document, purporting to be an exemplification, is produced from the proper place of deposit, but has not, at the time of its production, the great seal affixed, it is still to be presumed that it is an exemplification, and may be read in evidence as such. (Beverley (Mayor, &c.) v. Craven, 2 M. & Rob. 140).

An exemplification under the seal of the Exchequer is evidence of a commission issued out of that court respecting Crown lands. (Tooker v. Beaufort, Sayer, 297). So, an exemplification of a recovery under the seal of the great sessions of Wales and of Chester, for such seals prove themselves. (Olive v. Guin, 2 Sid. 145; Com. Dig. Ev. A. 2).

On indictments for subsequent offence.

On indictments for a subsequent felony, after a previous conviction for felony, the legislature has dispensed with the usual formal proofs of the former conviction, thus: By statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 11, upon an indictment for a subsequent felony, after a previous conviction for felony, a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, is, upon proof of identity, sufficient evidence of the first conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same. And see a similar provision in the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 40, as to certain misdemeanours, provided for by that act. (Post, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. V.) In these cases the mere production of the certified copy would suffice without further proof.

Examined copy.

Proof by examined Copy.]—When the record is not the gist of the issue, but is merely matter of inducement, as is most generally the case in criminal proceedings, it may be proved by an examined copy, or sometimes by an office copy. (Gilb. Evid. 26).

Record must be complete.

To make the copy sufficient the record must be complete, which is not so until delivered into court on parchment. Thus, to prove an allegation of an indictment having been found, it must be done by production of a caption regularly drawn up of record; and the minute-book kept by the clerk of the peace is no evidence of the finding of the bill, though no record be drawn up. (R. v. Smith, 8 B. & Cress. 341; and see R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572). But where no record was kept at sessions, but the proceedings were entered in a minute-book, such book is evidence. (R. v. Yeoveley, 8 Ad. & E. 806). The production of the bill with an indorsement upon it will not support an allegation that the jury found a true bill. (Porter v. Cooper, 6 C. & P. 354). Nor will the indictment with the finding of the jury indorsed upon it support a plea of autrefois convict. A record regularly made up must be produced. (R. v. Bowman, 6 C. & P. 101). So on an indictment for perjury, to prove that an appeal came on to be heard at sessions, it must be shewn that a record was regularly made upon parchment. (R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366; R. v. Smith, Id. 356). However, to prove a matter which occurred before the same court sitting under the same commission, the minutes of the court were received. (R. v. Tooke, 25 How. Str. 446).

2. Records, &c.

A minute-book from which an entry of the proceedings at sessions is made, and from which book the roll containing the record of such proceedings is subsequently made up, is not a record. (R. v. Bellamy, R. & M. 171).

So the judgment in paper signed by the master is not evidence, for it is not yet become permanent. (B. N. P. 228; and see Godefroy v. Jay, 1 M. & P. 236; 3 C. & P. 192, S. C.; Lee v. Meecock, 5 Esp. 177; Ayrey v. Davenport, 2 N. R. 474).

The sworn copy should contain the whole of the record, (B. N. P. 228; 3 Inst. 173), unless in cases provided for by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 30, relating to indictments for a subsequent offence, supra.

A copy of a copy is not evidence. (B. N. P. 226).

Copies of records are to be proved as other transcripts, by a witness who has compared the copy, line for line, with the original, or who has examined the copy, while another person read the original. (Reid v. Margison, 1 Camp. 470; Rolf v. Dart, 2 Taunt. 52). And it ought to appear that the original came from the proper place of deposit, or out of the hands of the officer in whose custody the records were kept. (Adamthwaite v. Synge, 1 Stark. N. P. 183; 4 Camp. 372, S. C.; 1 Phill. Ev. 366).

Where the original record is lost, then a copy vetustate temporis aut judiciariâ cognitione roborata, may be given in evidence. (Bull. N. P. 228).

Office copy.

Proof by Office Copy.]—An office copy is, in the same court and in the same cause, equivalent to a record; but in another court or in another cause it is not so; and in that case either the record itself, or an exemplification, or an examined copy, in case the record be not the gist of the issue, should be produced and proved. (Denn v. Fulford, 2 Burr. 1179).

Copy made by authorized office.

It is a general rule, that a copy authenticated by a person appointed for that purpose (viz. an office copy), is good evidence of the contents of the original, without any proof of its being an examined copy. (1 Phill. Evid. 367; see Doe d. Ash v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 390; B. N. P. 229).

But where the officer of the court is only intrusted with the custody of records, and is not authorized to make out a copy, he has no more authority for that purpose than a common person, and the copy must be regularly proved in a strict and regular mode. (1 Phill. Ev. 368).

The chirograph of a fine is evidence of the fine, the chirographer being appointed to make that copy; but it is not evidence of the proclamations, for of them the chirographer is not appointed to make a copy. (B. N. P. 229; Gilb. Ev. 23). The date of enrolment of a deed of bargain and sale indorsed by the clerk of the enrolments is conclusive evidence of the date. R. v. Hopper, 3 Price, 495; and see Kinnersley v. Orpe, 1 Dougl. 56; Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & Cres. 755).

A copy of the depositions of a witness taken at a judge's chambers, signed by the judge, and delivered out by his clerk, is admissible without proof of examination with the original. (Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 101).

Verdict and postea.

Verdict and Postea.]—No verdict shall be given in evidence as binding on a person unless he be a party or privy to it; because otherwise a man would be bound by a decision, who had not the liberty to cross-examine; and nothing can be more contrary to natural justice, than that any body should be injured by a determination which he or those under whom he claims was not at liberty to controvert. (B. N. P. 232; see Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Company, 2 C. M. & R. 133).

2. Records, &c.

But a right of ferry is a matter in which the public are interested, and as to which, therefore, a verdict or judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction touching the same right is evidence, although between other parties. (Pim v. Curell, 6 Mee. & W. 234; and see Brunel v. Thompson, 1 Car. & M. 34).

A verdict will not be admitted in evidence, without likewise producing a copy of the judgment founded upon it; because it may happen that the judgment was arrested upon a new trial granted. But this rule doth not hold in the case of a verdict on an issue directed out of Chancery, because it is not usual to enter up judgment in such case; and the decree of the Court of Chancery is equally proof that the verdict was satisfactory, and stands in force. (B. N. P. 234). And if it be required to prove merely that a certain trial was had, the nisi prius record, with the postea indorsed on it, and regularly stamped and marked, is sufficient evidence for that purpose. (Barnes, 449; Pitton v. Walter, 1 Stra. 162; and see Foster v. Compton, 2 Stark. 364, 5). Where the nisi prius record was produced, with the minute of the verdict indorsed thereon by the associate, it was held sufficient proof of the trial, though no postea was drawn up; the associate stating none could be so, as a motion was pending for a new trial. (R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572; M. & M. C. N. P. 315, S. C.; and see R. v. Smith, 8 B. & Cres. 341).

Inquisitions.

Inquisitions.]—On inquisitions of general concern, such as the return to the commission in Henry VIII.'s time, to inquire of the value of livings, the commission is a thing of such general notoriety, that it requires no proof. (B. N. P. 228; and see Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & Cres. 747). But, in general, on inquisitions of private matters, it is necessary to show that the inquiry has been made under proper authority, besides proving the return. (Vin. Ab. Ev. 42, A. b.). A copy of the judgment roll, containing an award of an elegit, and the return of the inquisition, is evidence of the elegit and inquisition. (Ramsbottom v. Buckhurst, 2 M. & Sel. 565). An inquisition post mortem is evidence, but not conclusive. (Earl Thanet v. Foster, T. Jones, 224).

The inquisition in general of a private matter affects only those persons who are parties or privies to it. But an inquisition of lunacy is evidence against third persons, though not conclusive. (Sergeson v. Sealey, 2 Atk. 412; Faulder Spr. v. Silk, 3 Camp. 126). And it is evidence on the trial of an indictment to shew the prisoner was insane at the time he committed the offence. (R. v. Bowler, 1 Phill. Ev. 356). As to the sheriff's inquisition to ascertain the ownership of property, see Latkow v. Earner, (2 H. Bla. 437); Glossop v. Pole, (3 M. & Sel. 175).

Writ.

Writ.]—Where a writ is the gist of the issue, which however is rarely the case in criminal proceedings, it must be returned into the court from whence it issued, and being then a record, should be proved by the record itself, or else, as is more usual, by an examined copy. (B. N. P. 234). But if the writ be matter of inducement merely, it is not necessary that it should be returned, or proved by an examined copy when not returned, (Gilb. Ev. 39); but the writ itself may be given in evidence.

If it has been returned, it should, in general, be proved by the record itself, or an examined copy. To entitle a party to go into secondary evidence of a writ after its return, it must be shewn that search has been made in the Treasury, and that subsequently to the return day the writ was in the possession of the opposite party, on whom notice to produce it has been served. (Edmonstone v. Plaisted, 4 Esp. 160). A copy of the judgment roll, containing an award of an elegit, and the return of the inquisition, is evidence of the elegit and inquisition. (Ramsbottom v. Buckhurst, 2 M. & Sel. 565). 2. Records, &c.

Affidavits.]—An affidavit, whether voluntary or not, is evidence as an admission on oath against the party who made it, (Gilb. Ev. 51, 56; 7 Taunt. 577); and though proved only to be signed by the party, it will operate in evidence as an admission by him. (Id.; B. N. P. 238). Affidavits.

In the case of an immediate extent on an inquisition to find debts, the jury may find the fact of a debt being due to the Crown on the sole evidence of an affidavit, that the debt is due. (Reg. v. Ryle, 9 M. & W. 227).

When filed of record in the superior courts, they should be proved by examined copies, or produced. Affidavits not so filed can be proved only by production of the affidavits themselves, and by parol evidence of their having been sworn. (Gilb Ev. 56; B. N. P. 238). Upon an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, the affidavit must in all cases be produced, whether filed or not, and it must be proved in the same manner as an answer to a bill in equity under the same circumstances. (Infra, B. N. P. 238).

Rules and Orders of Courts of Law.]—Rules of court are proved by office copies, (Selby v. Harris, 1 Ld. Raym. 745; Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 102; M'Neil v. Perchard, Id. 471, n.); it is not necessary to have them examined. A rule of court is evidence that the court have ordered as is therein stated; but it is not evidence of any matters in it which are the mere suggestions of the party who obtained it. (Woodroffe v. Williams, 6 Taunt. 19). A judge's order may be proved by the production of the order itself, or by an office copy of the rule by which it has been made a rule of court. (Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17). And where a court prints and circulates copies of its rules for the guidance of its officers, the production of one of those printed copies is good evidence, though not shewn to have been examined with the original which is kept under the seal of the court. (Daniel v. Robson, M. & M. 294). Rules and orders of courts of law.

Letters Patent.]—Letters patent should be proved by producing the letters patent themselves, or the exemplification of them under the great seal, which will be sufficient evidence without further proof. (1 Phill. Evid. 445). Letters patent.

Proceedings in Chancery.]—There are public matters that are not records, as transactions in Chancery and court roll: and of these copies may be given in evidence. (B. N. P. 234). Chancery proceedings.

The reason why the proceedings in Chancery are not records is this, because they are not the precedents of justice; for the judgment there is according to equity and good conscience, and not according to the laws and customs. And the reason why any record is of validity and authority is, because it is a memorial of what is the law of the nation: now Chancery proceedings are no memorials of the laws of England, because the chancellor is not bound to proceed according to the laws. (B. N. P. 234).

Bill.]—A bill in Chancery will not be evidence, except to shew that such a bill did exist, and that certain facts were in issue between the parties, in order to introduce the answer or the depositions of witnesses. (1 Phill. Evid. 341). It is not to be admitted as evidence in courts of law, to prove any facts either alleged or denied in the bill. (Case of the Banbury Peerage, 2 Selw. N. P. 685; Roscoe, 84). Bill.

On an indictment for perjury to an answer in Chancery to a bill before it was amended, to prove such bill it was held sufficient to put in the amended bill, and prove that the amendments were in the handwriting of a clerk in the Six Clerks' office, whose duty it would be to make them; but that it was not necessary to call the person who wrote the amendments. (Rex v. Laycock, 4 C. & P. 326).

Answer.

Answer.]—An answer in Chancery is good evidence against the defendant as an admission upon oath, and it must be taken together; therefore if, upon exceptions taken, a second answer has been put in, the defendant may insist on having that read, to explain what he swore in his first answer. (B. N. P. 237; Gilb. Evid. 50; Roscoe, 84). An answer will be evidence against all persons privy to the party making it, (16 East, 334); but the answer of a guardian is no evidence against an infant, nor is the answer of a trustee against the cestui que trust. (B. N. P. 237). Nor is an answer to a bill of foreclosure by a mortgagor who had twenty years before conveyed away his interest to a person who is no party to the mortgage or the proceedings in equity, admissible. (Gulley v. Exeter [Bishop], 2 M. & P. 266; 5 Bing. 171, S. C. See Ford v. Gray, Salk. 286). As to the answer of a co-defendant, see 3 P. Wms. 311; of a partner, Peake, 203; Rooth v. Quin, 7 Price, 198. And see Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. jun. 355; Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R. 347.

The answer may be proved by the production of the bill and answer, or of examined copies of them from the Six Clerks' office. (Gilb. Evid. 56; and see Hennell v. Lyon, 1 B. & Al. 182; Hodgkinson v. Willis, 3 Camp. 401). Even on the trial of an issue out of Chancery, office copies which had been used in the court of equity were considered inadmissible. (Burnand v. Nerot, 1 C. & P. 578). On an indictment for perjury in an answer, the answer itself must be produced, and it must be proved either that the party was sworn to it, or that the name subscribed to it is his handwriting, and that the name subscribed to the jurat is the name and handwriting of a master, or other person having authority for that purpose. (R. v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189; R. v. Benson, 2 Camp. 508). The identity of the parties should be proved. Such identity may be established by a witness who has seen the handwriting of the defendant to the original answers, though it is not produced in court. (Dartnall v. Howard, R. & M. C. N. P. 169). If the name and description of the defendant at law agree with the name and description of the party answering in equity, it is primâ facie evidence of identity. (Hennell v. Lyon, 1 B. & Al. 182; and see M. & M. 176).

The answer may be read without the bill, if the bill has been lost and the proper officer prove he cannot find it in the proper office. (Gilb. Evid. 55; and see Rowe v. Brenton, 8 B. & Cres. 765).

And if an answer in Chancery is produced in evidence, the party against whom it is produced is entitled to have the whole bill in Chancery read, as part of his adversary's case. (Pennell v. Meyer, 2 M. & Rob. 98; 8 Car. & P. 470, S. C.)

When the answer is offered in evidence merely as an admission of the party on oath, it will suffice to prove it by an examined copy, without proof of a decree or of the party's handwriting. (Dartmouth v. Roberts, 16 East, 334; and see Ewer v. Ambrose, 4 B. & Cres. 25; 6 D. & R. 127, S. C.; Highfield v. Peake, 1 M. & M. 109).

Depositions in Chancery.

Depositions in Chancery.]—Depositions in Chancery are admissible in evidence in an action in the same matters between the same parties or their privies, where the witness is dead, insane, or cannot be subpœnaed, or has fallen sick by the way. (B. N. P. 239; Gilb. Evid. 60). But the mere circumstance of a witness being too ill to attend the trial is not, it seems, sufficient ground for reading his deposition in Chancery (Doe v. Evans, 3 C. & P. 219, cor. Vaughan, B.) They are also admissible against strangers in questions of a public or general nature, as relating to customs or tolls, &c., (B. N. P. 239): so they are admissible when used to impeach the testimony of a witness who made the depositions. (Id. 240). When depositions are made before an answer put in, they are in general inadmissible, (B. N. P. 240); when otherwise, Cazenove v. Vaughan, (1 M. & Sel. 4). 2. Records, &c.

In order to prove the depositions, in general, the bill and answer must be first proved, and then the depositions must be produced and proved like other affidavits, not of record, proving the party's handwriting thereto, and that he was sworn, and that the name subscribed to the jurat is the name and handwriting of a Master, or other person having authority for that purpose. It should be proved that the party making the depositions is dead, insane, or cannot be found, or has fallen sick by the way. But it is not necessary to do this, or prove the bill and answer, if the depositions are offered in evidence as an admission merely, or to contradict a witness. (1 Phill. Evid. 375).

If the bill and answer are ancient and cannot be found, on proving that fact and due search, the production will be dispensed with. (Gilb. Evid. 64; 2 Price, 234, n.) And see Rowe v. Brenton, (8 B. & Cres. 765), where answers to interrogatories were allowed to be read, without producing the interrogatories, which could not be found. But generally depositions taken on interrogatories under a commission are not evidence without production of the commission, unless the depositions are of long standing. (Bayley v. Wylie, 6 Esp. 85).

As a general rule, it may be said, that in order to render depositions taken under any judicial proceedings evidence against a party, he must have had an opportunity to be present at the examination, and to cross-examine the witness. (Attorney-General v. Davison, 1 Mac. & Y. 160).

Decree.]—A decree in Chancery is evidence between the same parties or their privies. (B. N. P. 243). And on a trial touching the right of lands, decrees in Chancery between other parties concerning the same lands were held admissible in evidence to shew the character in which the possessor enjoyed the lands. (Davies & ux. v. Lowndes ten., 1 Bing. 606, N. S.) Decree.

So on the trial of a writ of right, decrees in Chancery, in causes between the tenant's father, and other persons not connected with the demandant, and to which proceedings the latter was neither party nor privy, were admitted for the purpose of shewing the character in which the tenant's father assumed and retained possession of the premises. (Davies dem. Lowndes ten., 7 Scott, 22; 5 Bing. N. C. 161.)

So on an issue as to the existence of an immemorial right of the deputy day-meters of the city of London to the exclusive right, by themselves and their servants, of measuring, shovelling, unloading, and delivering all oysters brought in any vessel for sale to the port of London, and to receive a reasonable compensation for so doing: a decree of a Court of Equity, in a cause between third parties, touching the same right, whereby an issue was directed to try whether certain sums were a reasonable recompense, was admitted in evidence. (Laybourn v. Crisp, 4 Mee. & W. 320; 8 Car. & P. 397). And it was also held, that the party producing the decree was not bound to put in the depositions in the cause, which were referred to (in the usual form) in the decree; but semble that the other party would be entitled to read the depositions as his evidence. (Ib.)

But interlocutory orders made in a suit between third parties touching the same right, and merely directing the continuance of a certain state of things pendente lite and not amounting to any final decree, are not admissible. (Pim v. Currell, 6 M. & W. 234).

The decree may be proved by an exemplification, or by a sworn copy, or when in paper by a decretal order, with proof of the bill and answer. (Trowel v. Castle, 1 Keb. 21; B. N. P. 244; 1 Phill. Evid. 373; Peake, Evid. 74; Rosc. 46). It seems, however, to be admissible in evidence, though it does not recite the bill and answer, and though no proof be adduced thereof, at least where it is given in evidence to prove an extrinsic collateral fact, (as that a decree was made), and not for the purpose of enabling the party to avail himself of its contents. (Blower v. Hollis, 1 C. & M. 393).

Order.

Order.]—The document delivered out by the registrar of the court of Chancery, as the order of the court, is the original order; and to make it evidence, it is not necessary that it should be compared with any book of the orders of the court. (Ludlow (Mayor) v. Charlton, 9 Car. & P. 242).

Proceedings in ecclesiastical courts.

Proceedings in Ecclesiastical Courts]—The sentences of ecclesiastical courts in matrimonial causes are in all cases evidence, and conclusive of the facts they therein establish, except in suits of jactitation. (Duchess of Kingston's case, 20 How. St. Tri. 538, 540, 543; Bunting's case, 4 Rep. 29 a.)

Depositions taken in an ecclesiastical court, in a cause within its jurisdiction, seem to be admissible in evidence upon the same footing as depositions in the Court of Chancery, the parties being the same, and having had an opportunity of cross-examining the deponents. (1 Phill. Evid. 359, 360). So a deposition taken in a cause between other parties will be admitted to be read, to contradict what the same witness swears at a trial. (B. N. P. 240).

The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence, in ecclesiastical courts, are proveable in the same manner as the proceedings in Chancery. (ante 395, 396; Gilb. Ev. 66, 67; Com. Dig. Ev. C. 3). In general to prove a sentence in such courts, the libel and answer should be produced. (Stedman v. Gooch, 1 Esp. 5). The minute-book of the Consistorial Court has been held sufficient evidence of a decree for alimony, without such decree being drawn up in form. (Houliston v. Smith, 2 C. & P. 25).

The practice of these courts is, it seems, proveable by parol evidence. (Beaurain v. Sir W. Scott, 3 Camp. 388).

Probate of a will.

Probate.]—The probate of a will, under the seal of the ecclesiastical court, is good evidence of its contents, where the will itself is of chattels, for there the probate is an original, taken by authority, and of a public nature; nor is the original will admissible for that purpose: but the probate of a will, devising real property, is not evidence of the contents of the will as to such property, even though the original is proved to be lost, the spiritual court having no power to authenticate such a devise, as far as it relates to land. (B. N. P. 245; 1 Phill. Evid. 325; Doe d. Ash v. Calvert, 2 Camp. 389; Hoe v. Nesthrope, 3 Salk. 154; 1 Ld. Raym. 154, S. C.; Pinney v. Pinney, 8 B. & C. 335). Nor is it admissible to prove declarations of the testator as reputation on a question of pedigree. (Doe d. Wild v. Ormerod, 1 M. & Rob. 466).

The mere production of the probate under the seal of the ecclesiastical court will suffice without further proof. (Kempton v. Cross, Rep. T. Hardw. 108).

An examined copy of the probate is evidence of the person there named being executor, as the probate is an original, taken by authority, and of a public nature, (Hoe v. Nelthrope, 3 Salk. 154; 1 Ld. Raym. 154, S. C.); but a copy of the will would not be evidence of that fact. (B. N. P. 246, supra).

It is not the practice in the ecclesiastical courts to grant a second probate if the first should be lost; but only to grant an exemplification from the record of the court, which exemplification will be evidence of the proof of the will. (Shepherd v. Shorthouse, 1 Str. 412).

The probate unrepealed is in general conclusive evidence of the facts whereof it is evidence: therefore the party shall not be permitted to allege that the will proved is not the last will and testament of the deceased. (Allen v. Dundas, 3 T. R. 125; Gilb. Evid. 73; Chichester

v. Philips, T. Raym. 404, 406). But he may give in evidence that the probate is forged, or that it was obtained by surprise, or revoked. (Gilb. Evid. 73, 74; Chichester v. Philips, T. Raym. 404; 2 Sid. 359). And in a late case an indictment for forging a will, probate of that will, though unrepealed, was held not conclusive evidence of its validity, so as to bar the prosecution. (Rex v. Buttery, R. & R. C. C. 342; Rex v. Gibson, id. 343); overruling Rex v. Vincent, (1 Str. 481). And the probate may be impeached, by showing that the ecclesiastical court had no jurisdiction, as that there were no bona notabilia within its jurisdiction, (B. N. P. 247); or that the supposed testator is alive. (Allen v. Dundas, 3 T. R. 130).

2. Records, &c.

To prove the probate revoked, an entry of the revocation in the book of the Prerogative Court is good evidence. (Ramsbottom's case, 1 Leach, C. C. 30, n. 3 ed.)

Letters of Administration.]—Such letters are evidence of the facts actually stated therein, but not of facts which can only be inferred therefrom, as the testator's death, &c. (Thomson v. Donaldson, 3 Esp. 63; 20 How. St. Tri. 533). The observations already made, ante, 56, as to a probate being conclusive evidence, will here apply.

Letters of administration.

The ecclesiastical court never grants an exemplification of letters of administration; but only a certificate that administration was granted. Such certificate, merely produced, would be of itself good evidence. So would the book of the ecclesiastical court wherein was entered the order for granting administration, (Kempton v. Cross, Rep. T. Hardw. 108; B. N. P. 246; Elden v. Keddell, 8 East, 187); and an examined copy of the act-book, stating the grant of letters of administration to the defendant, is proof of his being administrator, without notice to produce the letters. (Davis v. Williams, 13 East, 232.) The letters themselves would be good evidence. (Kempton v. Cross, R. T. Hardw. 108).

Proceedings in Admiralty Courts.]—The sentence of this court on a question of prize, over which it has exclusive jurisdiction, is conclusive of what is positively affirmed thereon; and being a proceeding in rem, binds all strangers as well as parties thereto. (Park Ins. 490; Stirling v. Vaughan, 2 Camp. 228; Fisher v. Ogle, 1 Camp. 418; Dougl. 574). But the sentence of such court is not conclusive as to the ground of condemnation, unless it be explicitly stated; it is not to be collected by inference, nor can it be left to uncertainty whether the vessel was condemned upon a ground which would be a good ground of condemnation by the law of nations, or on another which would only amount to a breach of the municipal regulations of the condemning country. (Dalgliesh v. Hodgson, 7 Bing. 495; 5 M. & P. 407, S. C.) So is such a sentence of a foreign admiralty court. (Hughes v. Cornelius, 2 Show. 232; Bolton v. Gladstone, 5 East, 160). And the sentence of an admiralty court sitting under a commission from a belligerent power in a neutral country, will not be recognised here. (Havelock v. Rockwood, 8 T. R. 268; Donaldson v. Thompson, 1 Camp. 429; Roscoe, 83).

Proceedings in Admiralty courts.

As to how far the libel, answer, and depositions are evidence, see ante, 54, 55, as to those proceedings in equity.

The libel, answer, depositions, and sentence, in the Admiralty Court, are proved in the same manner as the bill, answer, depositions, and decree, in a court of equity. (Com. Dig. Evid. 1, C., ante, 395, 396).

Proceedings in Foreign Courts.]—It seems that the sentence of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction, if evidence abroad, would be evidence here, on the same question and between the same parties. (See 1 Ves. 159; Burrows v. Jemino, 2 Stra. 733; Stafford v. Clark, 2 Bing. 380; Tarleton v. Tarleton, 4 M. & Sel. 20). The court will, in general, presume the sentence to be according to the justice of the case. (Arnott v. Redfern, 3 Bing. 353). But if it appears in the face of the proceedings, or it could be otherwise shewn, that the court had no jurisdiction, or that the sentence is founded on injustice, as where it appeared the defendant had never been summoned, the sentence would be inadmissible as evidence here. (Buchanan v. Rucker, 9 East, 192 ; 1 Camp. 63, S. C. ; Williams v. Lord Bagot, 3 B. & Cres. 786 ; Douglas assignee of Stein v. Forrest, 1 M. & P. 663 ; 4 Bing. 686, S. C. ; Cavan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. 525). And it does not seem that the sentence is in any case conclusive evidence here, not being a record in this country. (See Walker v. Witter, 2 Dougl. 1, 5 ; 2 H. Bla. 410 ; Harris v. Saunders, 4 B. & Cres. 411 ; Douglas assignee of Stein v. Forrest, 4 Bing. 686 ; 1 M. & P. 663 ; S. C.) : unless perhaps in the case of a sentence of a foreign admiralty court on a question of prize, supra. In Guinness v. Carroll, (1 B. & Adol. 459), it was made a question, but not decided, whether in an action on an Irish judgment, the grounds of such judgment are examinable by the courts here.

Proceedings in foreign courts and foreign laws.

2. Records, &c.

The certificate of a vice-consul has been compared to a foreign judgment, but it will not be admitted as evidence of the facts stated in it. (Waldron v. Coombe, 3 Taunt. 162).

The proceedings in a foreign court, whether in colonies belonging to this country or not, are to be proved by exemplifications under the seal of the court, if indeed it has a seal. The genuineness of the seal must be proved, (Henry v. Adey, 3 East, 221) ; and the seal must be used, though worn out. (Cavan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. 525). A copy signed by the clerk of the court would not be sufficient, even though it should be proved the court has no seal. (Appleton v. Lord Braybrook, 2 Stark. 6 ; 6 M. & Sel. 34, S. C.) If there be no seal ever used for the purpose of authenticating the proceedings of the court, then the proceedings must be proved by examined copies, (Appleton v. Lord Braybrook, 6 M. & Sel. 36) ; or distinct evidence should be given (if the fact) that the court has no seal, and verifies its judgments by the signature of the judge, proving such signature. (Alves v. Bunbury, 4 Camp. 28).

Irish records

Records of the courts in Ireland may be proved by examined copies, &c., in the same manner as the records in this country. Such copy must be examined with a record; and, where the witness produced to prove the copy stated that he examined it with a parchment roll shewn to him in a room over the four Courts at Dublin, without seeing from whence it was taken, or knowing the person who produced it to be an officer of the court, Lord Ellenborough refused to receive it in evidence. (Adamthwaite v. Synge, 4 Camp. 372 ; 1 Stark. 183, S. C.) An Irish judgment is no record here. (Harris v. Saunders, 4 B. & Cres. 411 ; 6 Dowl. & R. 471, S. C.)

Foreign law.

Foreign Laws.]—If an act done abroad be invalid by the law of the foreign country, it is so here ; (see Melan v. Duke de Fitzjames, 1 B. & P. 141 ; Pedder v. Mac Master, 8 T. R. 609 ; Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124) ; but not vice versâ. In a suit between parties resident in England, on a contract made by them in a foreign country, the contract is to be interpreted according to the foreign law, but the remedy must be taken according to the law here. (De la Vega v. Vianna, 1 B. & Adol. 284). Our courts here take no notice of the revenue laws of a foreign independent state, not belonging to our sovereign. (See James v. Catherwood, 3 Dow. & R. 190, and cases there cited ; Chit. on Bills, 7 ed. 57, n. e). Nor do they take notice of foreign penal laws. (Wolff v. Oxholm, 6 M. & Sel. 99).

The laws of a foreign country, if not written, may be proved by the parol evidence of witnesses of competent skill ; (sed vid. Boehtlincl v. Schneider, 3 Esp. 58) ; if written, a copy properly authenticated must be produced. (Clegg v. Levy, 3 Camp. 166 ; Millar v. Heinrick, 4 Camp. 155 ; per Gibbs, C. J., R. v. Picton, 20 How. St. Tr. 514, 424 ; Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178). The acts of state of a foreign government must be proved by copies examined with the public archives abroad ; a copy printed and published abroad by the authorized printer of the foreign government will not, it seems, be sufficient. (R. v. Holt, 1 Camp. 65, n.; 5 T. R. 436, S. C.) 2. Records, &c.

An instrument, purporting to be a divorce under the seal of the synagogue at Leghorn, is not admissible, without previous proof of the law of the country; but Lord Kenyon permitted the party divorced to give parol evidence of her divorce at Leghorn, according to the ceremony and custom of the Jews there. (Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, Peake, 17). Copies of entries from the books of a notary at Java, made and delivered out to the parties according to the law of that country, are not receivable in evidence in England. (Brown v. Thornton, 6 Ad. & Ell. 185.)

Proceedings in Inferior Courts.]—The judgment of an inferior court of record is as available, and conclusive in evidence for the same purposes, as a judgment of a superior court. The judgment of an inferior court, not of record, is equally available, save that it is not conclusive evidence, but may be controverted and avoided. (See Walker v. Witter, Dougl. 5). But the latter doctrine has been rendered somewhat doubtful by the cases of Moses v. Macferlan (2 Bur. 1009); Briscoe v. Stephens (2 Bing. 216); Aldridge v. Haines; (2 B. & Adol. 395; 1 Stark. Evid. 208; Roscoe, 86). And in Thompson v. Blackhurst (1 Nev. & M. 266), it was decided that the judgment of a county court is not conclusive. The existence of the facts necessary to the regularity of such a judgment is a question for the jury, although a motion made in the county court to set it aside for irregularity has been dismissed. (See Huxham v. Smith, 2 Camp. 19; Barnes v. Winkler, 2 C. & P. 345). Where it appears on the face of the proceedings that they have not been fair and regular, the judgment will not be available; as where it appeared the defendant had not been summoned, or the like; (Williams v. Lord Bagot, 3 B & Cres. 786); and the judgment may always be avoided by proof that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction, (Briscoe v. Stephens, 2 Bing. 213), or that defendant, a debtor, did not reside within the district. (Carratt v. Morley, 2 B. 18). Where a cause is removed after judgment against a defendant, such judgment is not evidence against him in the superior court. (Bollings v. Firby, 9 B. & C. 762). Proceedings in inferior courts. In general.

The judgment of commissioners of Excise, on an information for an offence against an Excise law, is conclusive as to all the world, being upon a proceeding in rem. (Fuller v. Fotch, Carth. 346; Roberts v. Fortune, Hay, &c., Harg. Law Tracts, 4468; 1 Phill. Evid. 355). So a judgment of commissioners of a court of requests. (Aldridge v. Haines, 2 B. & Adol. 395). The sentence of expulsion of a member of a college, by the master and fellows, is conclusive evidence of that fact, and cannot be impeached in a court of law. (R. v. Grundon, Cowp. 315; and see Philips v. Bury, 1 Lord Raym. 4; Comb. 265, S. C.; Harg. Law Tracts, 464).

In an action of trespass for levying poor-rate, the act was not permitted to impugn the appointing of overseers, there being no fraud. (Penny v. Slade, 5 Bing. N. C. 319).

The mere production of a diploma of doctor of physic, under the seal of one of the universities, is not of itself evidence to shew that the party therein named is entitled to that degree. (Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 303). But in a late case, a sealed instrument, purporting to be a diploma of the degree of doctor of medicine, in the University of St. Andrews, with proof that a person at St. Andrews, calling himself the university librarian, had shewn, as the university seal, in a room which he stated to be the university library, a seal corresponding to that on the instrument produced, and a written paper, purporting to be an act of the university conferring the degree, was held sufficient evidence that the party was entitled to the degree. (Collins v. Carnegie, 1 Ad. & Ell. 695).

Judgments, and the proceedings in a court baron, county court, or other inferior court, not of record, may be proved by producing the How proved.

2. Records, &c.

books in which they are entered; (1 C., M. & R. 277); and if not made up in form, the minutes of the proceedings will be evidence, or else an examined copy of such proceedings or minutes. (See Gilb. Evid. 74, 20; Com. Dig. Evid. (C. 1); Hennell v. Lyon, 1 B. & Al. 185; R. v. Smith, 8 B. & Cres. 343; Chandler v. Roberts, Peake, Evid. 80). But this rule does not extend to proceedings at quarter sessions on the Crown side, which is not an inferior court. (R. v. Smith, supra). In proving the judgment, evidence of the previous proceedings should be adduced. (Com. Dig. Evid. (C. 1); 2 W. Bla. 836; Thompson v. Blackhurst, 1 N. & M. 266).

Court baron rolls.

Court Baron Rolls.]—The rolls of a court baron are evidence; for they are the public rolls by which the inheritance of every tenant is to be preserved: and they are the rolls of the manor court, which was anciently a court of justice relating to all property within the district. (Bull. N. P. 247; Doe v. Hall, 16 East, 208).

The copy of the court roll of a manor, under the steward's hand, duly stamped, is good evidence; so is an examined copy of the court roll. (Doe v. Mee, 4 B. & Ad. 617). For where the original itself is evidence, the immediate copy thereof is also good evidence. (Skinner, 584; Hoe v. Nathorp, 1 Lord Raym. 154; Bull. N. P. 247; Gilb. 75). By the Stamp Act (55 Geo. III. c. 184) court rolls need not be stamped; but surrenders and admittances out of court, and copies of surrenders and admittances in, must be duly stamped. A surrender out of court may be proved by an unstamped copy. (Doe v. Mee, 4 B. & Ad. 617). But quære, if any examined copy requires a stamp to be evidence? for the copy mentioned in the act seems the copy delivered by the steward under sect. 33. The court rolls, containing a presentment of a surrender out of court, are evidence of the surrender, without producing the original stamped surrender. (Doe v. Olley, 12 A. & E. 481). And a court roll, stating that the surrender was by power of attorney, would be secondary evidence of the power of attorney, if the power of attorney cannot be found after a sufficient search. (Doe d. Counsell v. Caperton, 9 Car. & P. 112).

Bankruptcy Proceedings.]—The record of all fiats in bankruptcy, and of all proceedings under the same, heretofore entered of record under the stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, are removed into the Court of Bankruptcy, established by 1 & 2 Will. IV. c. 56, and are kept as records of that court; and all proceedings in bankruptcy and copies thereof, purporting to be sealed with the seal of that court, are to be received as evidence. (2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 114, s. 9). And by the stat. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 25, in the event of the death of any witness deposing to the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, under any fiat in bankruptcy, his deposition, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy, or a copy thereof purporting to be so sealed, shall in all cases be receivable in evidence of the matters therein contained. And by sect. 22 a copy of a declaration of insolvency, purporting to be certified by the secretary of bankrupts, or his clerk, as a true copy, shall be received in evidence of such declaration having been filed. Also, by the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 96, s. 37, any petition for protection from process under that act, and any proceeding in the matter of such petition, purporting to be signed by a commissioner of the Court of Bankruptcy, or a copy of such petition, or other proceeding purporting to be so signed, shall in all cases be receivable in evidence of such proceedings. But depositions before the commissioners may be given in evidence against the person who made them, by producing and proving them, as in the ordinary case of an affidavit, without having the proceedings recorded. Parol evidence cannot be given of what the bankrupt said at his examinations. It is required by the act to be in writing, and such writing only can be received. (R. v. Walters, 5 C. & P. 141; Jansen v. Wilson, 1 Dougl. 257). In an action by a bankrupt against his assignees to try the validity of the commission, it was held that the assignment having been lost before it had been entered of record according to the statute, secondary evidence of its contents might be given. (Giles v. Smith, 1 C., M. & R. 462. See Scott v. Thomas, 6 C. & P. 611). See the enactments, tit. "Bankrupt," Vol. I.

2. Records, &c.

Insolvency Proceedings.]—By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 46, a copy of any order under that act vesting the estate and effects of any prisoner in the provisional assignee, or of the appointment of the assignee or assignees of such estate and effects, made upon parchment, purporting to have the certificate of the provisional assignee, or his deputy appointed for that purpose, indorsed upon it, and sealed with the seal of the court, shall in all courts and places, and without further proof, be recognised and received as sufficient evidence of such order and appointment having been made, and of the title of the provisional and other assignee or assignees under the same. (See Delafield v. Freeman, 3 M. & P. 704; 6 Bing. 294; 4 C. & P. 67). And by the same stat., s. 105, a copy of the petition, schedule, order of adjudication, and other orders and proceedings, purporting to be signed by the officer having the custody of them, or his deputy, certifying the same to be a true copy, and sealed with the seal of the court, is admissible in the same manner, without further proof of the same. And by the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 116, s. 11, the like evidence of the appointment of assignees under that act shall be received as sufficient to prove such appointments as is received by the laws now in force relating to bankrupts. The original order of adjudication will still be evidence. (Northam v. Latouche, 3 M. & P. 646; 4 C. & P 140, S. C.; see Jones v. Nicholls, 3 M. & P. 12; but see Jefferey v. Robinson, 5 C. & P. 230, tit. "Insolvent," Vol. III.) From Nicholls v. Downes, (4 C. & P. 330, 332, note), it should seem that certified copies of the schedule &c. under the Insolvent Debtors Act are only evidence for the insolvent and for his creditors, because they are the only persons entitled by the act to claim them; and it should seem that, to make the contents of a schedule evidence against an insolvent debtor, some evidence of identity is necessary, and it will not be sufficient that the schedule purports to be the schedule of a person of the name of the insolvent. Certified copies of the vesting order and of the appointment of the assignees, bearing the seal of the court, and purporting to be signed by G. C., "deputy for the provisional assignee," are sufficient, in pursuance of sects 46 and 105 of stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110; and proof of the appointment of the deputy is not necessary. (Jackson v. Thompson, 2 Q. B. 887. See tit. "Insolvent," Vol. III.) The act is applicable to proceedings had under the former act of 1 Geo. IV. c. 119. (Doe d. Phillips v. Evans, 1 C. & M. 450). A paper, purporting to be a copy of the original discharge of an insolvent, and signed by the clerk of the proper officer of that court, with the impression of the seal affixed to it, is admissible in evidence to prove such discharge, without the production of the certificate thereof, or proof of its being an examined or attested copy. (Carpenter v. Waite, 3 Moore, 231; Neal v. Isaacs, 4 B. & C. 335; and see 3 Car. & P. 625). Such discharge could not be proved by parol evidence, or by an admission of the insolvent. (Scott v. Clare, 3 Camp. 236).

Insolvency proceedings.

Judgment of Quarter Sessions.]—A judgment by the quarter sessions, discharging an order of removal, (not for defect of form, but upon the merits), is conclusive as between the contending parishes, that the settlement of the pauper was not in the appellant parish at the time of the removal; but it is binding only on these parishes, not on a third parish. Nor is an order on an appeal respecting the settlement of it admissible on an appeal respecting the settlement of B., A.'s sister, though the point is the same in both appeals. (R. v. Knaptoft, 2 B. & C. 883). An order of removal executed, and not appealed against, is conclusive of the pauper's settlement at the time of the order, even as between third parishes who are not parties to that order. (Rex v. Corsham, 11 East, 388). And a judgment by the quarter sessions, confirming an order of removal, is conclusive upon the appellant parish as to all the world, and may be given in evidence against them by a third parish on any subsequent appeal. (1 Phill. Ev. 311, 312).

Judgment of quarter sessions in appeals.

2. Records, &c.

But though an order of sessions quashing an order of removal generally is conclusive evidence between the parties to the appeal, that, when the order of removal was made, the appellant parish was not bound to receive the pauper, it is only primâ facie evidence that the pauper was not settled in that parish, and therefore a subsequent cause of removal may be shewn. (R. v. Inhabitants of Wick St. Lawrence, 5 B. & Adol. 526).

The minute-book of a court of quarter sessions is not evidence of its proceedings; the record must be made up on parchment, and proved by an examined copy. (R. v. Thring, 5 C. & P. 507; R. v. Ward, 6 C. & P. 366; R. v. Smith, Id. 356; Porter v. Cooper, Id. 354; ante, 51). But where no record but the minute-book is kept by the sessions, such book is evidence. (R. v. Yeovelly, 8 Ad. & E. 806).

Convictions.

Convictions, &c.]—Convictions must be proved, like other records. (See ante, 391). In general they may be proved by examined copies. A copy of a conviction for killing game was agreed to be evidence in bar of an action brought for the same offence, and the defendant is entitled to such copy. (R. v. Midlam, 3 Burr. 1720; tit. "Conviction," Vol. I.) A copy may be obtained from the clerk of the peace. In prosecutions for second offences of a similar kind, the legislature has, in some instances of misdemeanours, as by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 40, made a copy of the former conviction, certified by the proper officer to be a true copy, good evidence of such conviction; (ante, 392; tit. "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. V.; and as to convictions for second felonies, ante, 392). In such cases the mere production of such a copy would suffice.

Effect of, in evidence.

A conviction in a court of criminal jurisdiction is conclusive evidence of the facts contained in it, if it comes collaterally in controversy in a court of civil jurisdiction; yet an acquittal in such court is no proof of the reverse. (Bull. N. P. 245).

But where the conviction has been procured on the evidence of the party who seeks to avail himself of it in a civil action, such conviction is inadmissible; and it even seems doubtful whether it is admissible when it has been procured entirely on the credence of others. (Hillyard v. Grantham, 2 Ves. 246; Gibson v. Macarty, R. T. Hardw. 311; Hathaway v. Barrow, 1 Camp. 151; Brook v. Carpenter, 3 Bing. 300). But the better opinion seems to be, that such a record is inadmissible as res inter alios, without reference to the witnesses on whose testimony the conviction was obtained. (Blakemore v. Glamorgan Canal Co., 2 C. M. & R. 139; Roscoe, 136). But where convictions operate in rem they are admissible in a suit inter alios, even though they were obtained on the evidence of the person who tenders them as proof. (Davis v. Nest, 6 C. & P. 167).

How far a protection to parties.

With respect to how far a conviction will protect the convicting magistrate, it is a general rule and principle of law, that, where justices of the peace have an authority given to them by an act of Parliament, and they appear to have acted within the jurisdiction so given, and to have done all that they are required by the act to do, in order to originate their jurisdiction, a conviction drawn up in due form, and remaining in force, is a protection in any action brought against them for the act so done. (Per Abbott, C. J., in Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & Cres. 652; and see Cave v. Mountain, 1 M. & G. 257; R. v. Bolton, 1 Q. B. 66). In trespass against magistrates for taking and detaining a vessel, a conviction by them, under the bum-boat act, is conclusive evidence that the vessel in question is a boat within the meaning of the act, and properly condemned. (Brittain v. Kinnaird, 4 Moore, 50; 1 B. & B. 432; Gow's C. N. P. 164, S. C.) So where, in trespass against two magistrates, it appeared that the defendants, upon the complaint of the surveyors of the highways, appointed for the whole parish, convicted the plaintiff of neglecting to do statute duty, and issued a warrant to levy the penalty under which the act complained of was done; it was held, the conviction being good on the face of it was a sufficient defence, and that the plaintiff could not, in this action, try the question whether the land which he occupied was exempt from the burden of repairing the roads in other parts of the parish. (Fawcett v. Fowlis, 7 B. & Cres. 394; 1 M. & R. 102, S. C.) So where, in trespass against two magistrates, for giving the plaintiff's landlord possession of a farm, as a deserted farm, the defendants produced in evidence a record of their proceedings, under the 11 Geo. II. c. 19, s. 16, which set forth all such circumstances as were necessary to give them jurisdiction, and by which it appeared that they had pursued the directions of the statute, it was held such record was not traversable, and was a conclusive answer to the action. (Basten v. Carew, 3 B. & Cres. 653; 5 D. & R. 558, S. C.; and see Strickland v. Ward, 7 T. R. 631; Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21; Anon. 1 B. & Adol. 382; Aldridge v. Haines, 2 B. & Adol. 395).

2. Records, &c.

Convictions.

On the other hand, where, upon the face of the conviction, it appears the magistrate has assumed a jurisdiction over a matter which is altogether out of his cognizance, or has been guilty of plain and manifest excess of his jurisdiction, the conviction will not protect him. See cases in Gow, C. N. P. 167. Where a person was convicted in four several convictions for exercising his ordinary calling on a Sunday, contrary to 29 Car. II. c. 7, it was held, that, as a man could only commit one offence under the statute on the same day, the three latter convictions were void; and it being an excess of jurisdiction, an action lay against the magistrate. (Crepps v. Durden, Cowp. 640; Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 21; and see Hill v. Bateman, 1 Stra. 710; Groome v. Forrester, 5 M. & Sel. 314; 1 Mac. & Y. 469; Rosc. 403; post, "Game," Vol. III.)

As to the mode of drawing up convictions, and the party's remedy when improperly drawn up, see ante, "Conviction," Vol. I.

Acquittal.

Acquittal.]—The acquittal of a party cannot afford evidence like a conviction, for it does not ascertain any precise fact, and may have proceeded merely on the ground that sufficient evidence was not produced. (1 Phill. Evid. 338; B. N. P. 245. See "Acquittal," Vol. I.)

An acquittal, where directly put in issue by the pleadings, should in general be proved by an examined copy of the record of acquittal, and that would be the correct mode of proving it in all cases where a record of acquittal has been formally drawn up as it ought to be.

Orders of justices.

Orders of Justices.]—Orders of magistrates do not, it seems, in general come within the above doctrine of evidence relative to convictions, and parol evidence is admissible to support or controvert them, where the party disputing them is no party to them. In Welsh v. Nash, (8 East, 402), Lord Ellenborough said, with regard to an order of justices for diverting a highway, that justices cannot make facts by their determination, in order to give themselves jurisdiction contrary to the truth of the case; and see Brittain v. Kinnaird, (1 B. & B. 439). In a late case, where an order of justices, requiring the stewards of a friendly society to re-admit A. B., who had been expelled, recited that it had appeared to the justices that the rules of the society had been enrolled at the quarter sessions; on the trial of an indictment against the stewards for disobeying the order, it was held the recital was no evidence of the enrolment of the rules; the defendants never having concurred in, or assented to, the order. (R. v. Gilkes, 8 B. & Cres. 439; see post, "Order," Vol. III.; R. v. Clayton, 3 East, 58; and see Gray v. Cookson, 16 East, 23, per Bayley, J.)

An order of sessions, upon an appeal between two parishes, respecting the settlement of pauper A., is not admissible on the trial of an appeal touching the settlement of B., his sister, another pauper, on a suggestion that the point at issue was precisely the same in both appeals. (R. v. Knaptoft, 4 D. & R. 469; 2 B. & C. 883, S. C.)

On the other hand, it seems that where the party disputing the order is a party thereto by his having obtained such order, or appeared to resist it, such order, unappealed against, is conclusive against him. (R.

2. Records, &c.

v. Hinxworth, and R. v. Caling, Cald. 42, 472). So, an order quashed is conclusive between the parties. (R. v. Leigh, id. 29).

In an action on 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31, against the hundred of B., for the felonious demolition of Nottingham Castle, by rioters, the plaintiff produced in evidence certain orders made by the justices at the quarter sessions for the county, in which the castle was described as being in that hundred. No proof was given that the justices who made those orders were resiants in the county :—Held, that the orders were admissible as evidence of reputation, for that the justices from the nature of their office must be presumed cognizant of the subject. (Duke of Newcastle v. Hundred of Broxtowe, 4 B. & Adol. 273).

Certificates of justices, &c.

Certificates of Justices, &c.]—The certificate of a justice of the peace as to a highway being in repair, has been received in evidence. (Rex v. Mawbey, T. R. 619).

The certificates of bishops with respect to marriage, general bastardy, excommunication, orders, and other the like matters, are received in evidence; (Co. Lit. 74; Rex v Mawbey, 6 T. R. 637; Rosc. 89; see Rex v. Bathwick, 2 B. & Adol. 639); so are the certificates of the judges in Wales respecting the practice of their courts. (Rex v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 638).

The certificate of a British consul abroad is not admissible as evidence here. (Waldron v. Coombe, 3 Taunt. 162; Exp Church, 1 D. & R. 324; ante, 400). The certificate from commissioners under the act for settling the debts of the army has been held conclusive evidence of the facts found therein. (Moody v. Thurston, 1 Stra. 481; Attorney-Gen. v. Davison, 1 Mac. & Y. 160). So has an old parish certificate. (Rex v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & Cres. 573; 1 M. & R. 472, S. C.; Rex v. Ryton, 5 T. R. 259; post, 417).

Depositions before magistrates.

Depositions &c. before Magistrates.]—The information and depositions of witnesses upon oath taken before magistrates in felonies and misdemeanors, when put into writing, and certified, and returned as directed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2, 3, (post, title "Examination," become evidence of the facts deposed to, upon the general principles before stated, the effect of the statute in rendering the evidence admissible being simply that of giving it the stamp of being taken in the course of a judicial proceeding.

But, in order to make such depositions evidence, it must be proved that the party deposing is either dead, insane, unable to travel, (1 Hale, 586; Rex v. Eriswell, 5 T. R. 710; Kel. 55; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 15; 1 Chit. C. L. 586), or kept away by the defendant's contrivance, (Kel. 55; Reg. v. Gutteridge, 9 Car. & P. 471), or that he cannot be found; (B. N. P. 239; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 18; sed vid. Kel. 55; 3 C. & P.); so that there is no possibility of obtaining his attendance. It is not sufficient to prove that the witness is too ill to attend the assizes, though this may be a good ground for postponing the trial. (Rex v. Savage, 5 C. & P. 143). But where the witness is bedridden, and there is no probability of his being able to attend, his depositions have been admitted. (Rex v. Hogg, 6 C. & P. 176). They could not, it seems, be read in the case of petit treason if the witness were living, even although he were unable to travel, or were kept out of the way by the prisoner, or by his procurement; for the stat. 5 & 6 Ed. VI., which extends to all treasons, requires that the witnesses, if living, shall be examined in person upon the trial, in open court. (Fost. 337). In order to make them evidence, they must also have been duly taken according to the requisitions of the statute; in the presence of the defendant, (Rex v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281; 1 Ld. Raym. 729, S. C.; 5 Mod. 183; 1 Leach, 502); on the oath of the accuser and witness, (1 Hale, 586; B. N. P. 242); and reduced into writing, (1 Leach, 309); and signed by the magistrate, (7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 3; Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 312). But where the depositions of a prosecutor and other witnesses are taken on the same sheet of paper, one signature by the magistrate at the end is sufficient. (Reg. v. Osborne, 8 Car. & P. 113). In such cases they will be admissible, although the witness was not at the time apprehensive of approaching dissolution. (1 Leach, 458). It is not necessary they should be signed by the witness. (Rex v. Fleming, 2 Leach, 996. Per Parke, B., in Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 312). Where the depositions were not wholly taken in the presence of the prisoner, but the witness afterwards in his presence was re-sworn, and the depositions repeated and signed, the judges held that they were, under these circumstances, admissible evidence, for the prisoner had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. (Rex v. Smith, R. & R. C. C. 339; Rex v. Smith, 2 Stark. 208: Holt, C. N. P. 614, S. C. But see Rex v. Forbes, Holt, 599). And where the testimony of a person, under apprehension of immediate dissolution, has been taken by a magistrate in the absence of the party indicted, though it cannot be read as an examination under the statute, it may be received as a dying declaration with the same degree of authority as if made to a private individual. (1 Leach, 361, 503; Rex v. Inhabitants of Eriswell, 3 T. R. 713. See Rex v. Callaghan, 1 M'Nally, 385). And the information of an accomplice, duly taken, may, in case of his death, be read in evidence against the prisoner, (1 Leach, 12), though it will not be conclusive, unless corroborated by other testimony. (Ib.) As to Dying Declarations, see ante, 380.

The depositions of a witness for the prosecution, who has gone to sea, cannot be read in evidence on the part of the prisoner, without consent on the part of the prosecutor; but with such consent they may be. (Reg. v. Hagan, 8 Car. & P. 167). But on trial of a case of felony, where the prosecutor is bed-ridden, and not likely to be ever able to attend the assizes, his deposition taken by the committing magistrate, in the presence of the prisoner, may be given in evidence. (1 Car. & M. 145).

Where an accomplice who could not read made a statement before the committing magistrate, and at the trial gave evidence falling very short of what he said before the magistrate, the judge allowed his deposition to be shewn to him, but would not allow the deposition to be read to him by the officer of the court, that the counsel for the prosecution might examine upon it. (Reg. v. Beardmore, 8 Car. & P. 260).

The reading, on the part of the prosecution, of the prisoner's statement, returned by the magistrate at the end of the depositions, does not give the prisoner the right to consider the depositions as in evidence on the part of the prosecution, though it appears that they were all taken before the statement was made; but if the prisoner wishes to have the whole or any particular part of the depositions read, he must read it as his evidence. (Rex v. Pearson, 7 Car. & P. 671).

The depositions taken before the magistrate against a prisoner cannot be read against him, where the witness has died since the examination, unless the depositions in cross-examination have been correctly taken and returned to the court. Depositions taken in cross-examination, at a subsequent time to those in chief, and not signed by the committing magistrates, are so irregular as to prevent the whole depositions from being read against a prisoner; and this, although both are proved by one of the committing magistrates to have been accurately taken. (Reg. v. France, 2 M. & Rob. 207).

In order to make the depositions evidence, they must be proved by the magistrate or his clerk, or otherwise to have been truly taken. (Anon. Kel. 55, Fost. 337; post, 408). A witness at the trial gave evidence, which was different from her deposition before the magistrates. The deposition was signed by a mark, which she denied to be hers. Neither the magistrate nor his clerk was at the trial; but a constable proved that he was at the examination, and heard her deposition read over to her, and saw her with a pen in her hand, but did not see her make her mark. He also proved the magistrate's signature; and after reading the deposition (which preceded his own which he had signed), he stated, that he believed that that was the deposition which was read over to the witness. This deposition was allowed to be read to the witness by the officer of the court, for the judge to examine her upon it. (Reg. v. Hallett, 9 Car. & P. 749).

2. Records, &c.

Depositions, &c.

And in a case affecting the life of a party, it is very desirable that a magistrate who took the depositions against the prisoner with his own hand should be called as a witness, before the depositions are read, to prove the correctness of what he took down; but it is not absolutely necessary, in point of law, that he should be called, and the depositions may be read on proof of his hand-writing. (Reg. v. Pikesley, 8 Car. & P. 124; Reg. v. Wilshaw, 1 Car. & M. 145).

They may be used by the defendant as well as against him. (2 St. Tri. 622, &c.; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22).

The depositions of a witness taken in a judicial proceeding, in the presence of the party there charged, are not admissible in another proceeding against that party, merely on the ground that he was present and had the opportunity of cross-examining. (Melon v. Andrews, M. & M. C. N. P. 336; see Rex v. Hollingshead, 4 C. & P. 242, note there; Rex v. Appleby, 3 Stark. 33). But the deposition of a witness since deceased is, when regularly taken under the statute, admissible on the trial of a different offence from that with which the prisoner was then charged, as where the deposition was taken on a charge of assault, and is given in evidence on a trial for murder. (Rex v. Smith, R. & R. 339; 1 Leach, 458. And see Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 309; 7 Dowl. 513).

In Rex v. Reed, M. & M. C. N. P. 403, it was held, that though the examination of a prisoner taken in writing is inadmissible by reason of irregularity, parol evidence of what he said at the time of the examination might be received. (Sed vid. Rex v. Hollingshead, 4 C. & P. 242, and note; see Phillips v. Wimburn, 4 C. & P. 273). In Rex v. Harris, (1 R. & M. C. C. 338), parol evidence was admitted to add to the written examination of the prisoner in a part which the magistrate did not hear, and the same rule would perhaps apply to depositions. (See per Parke, B., in Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 312. But see 1 Phill. Ev. 352; 2 Russ. 662).

If it be shewn that depositions were regularly returned by the magistrates to the proper officer, and it be proved by the latter that they cannot be found, after diligent search, the prisoner's counsel may cross-examine from copies of them, those copies being proved to be correct by the magistrates' clerk. (Reg. v. Shelburn, 9 Car. & P. 277).

A justice of the peace should not allow depositions to be framed in the words of a clause in the statute under which a party is committed. (Mill v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242).

Before coroners

Depositions before Coroners.]—The depositions taken before coroners on inquisitions, when put into writing, and certified and returned as required by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, (ante, "Coroner," p. 32), become evidence of the facts deposed to, under the same conditions as depositions before magistrates are evidence. It seems, however, that they differ from those taken before justices in this respect, that they are admissible though taken in the absence of the prisoner; because the coroner is an officer appointed on the behalf of the public, and will be presumed to have acted properly in all matters within his jurisdiction. (Rex v. Inhabitants of Erswell, 3 T. R. 713, 722; B. N. P. 242). But the justice and legality of this distinction have been questioned by text writers of high authority. (2 Stark. Ev. 278, 2nd edit.; 2 Russ. 661; ante, "Coroner," Vol. I.)

A coroner's jury, on the investigation of a case of homicide, returned a verdict "of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown." The coroner returned the deposition he had taken to the Central Criminal

2. Records, &c.

Court. On application by the counsel for a prisoner indicted for the murder of the same person, for a copy of such depositions, it was held, that although the coroner could not in such a case have been compelled to return them, under statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 4, yet that having done so, the judges had power, by their general power as a court of justice, to order a copy to be given if they thought it material to the interests of justice. (Rex v. Greenacre, 8 Car. & P. 32).

A. B., a witness on a coroner's inquest, made a deposition, in which she stated a conversation with the prisoner on their seeing a placard relating to the murder of the deceased, and also stated that she called the prisoner a murderer; and also that she slept with the prisoner, and that he beat her and gave her two black eyes. The prisoner made a statement before the coroner, which was taken down in the following form:—"Prisoner admits sleeping with witness, blacking her eyes, seeing the placard and his treating her, and her calling him a murderer." This statement of the prisoner, and also the deposition of A. B., were received in evidence against the prisoner on his trial for the murder, and it was held no objection in point of law to the receiving of the statement in evidence that it began "Prisoner admits," although that is a very improper way of taking down a prisoner's statement. (Reg. v. Roche & Blackney, 1 Car. & M. 341).

On prosecutions for leaving seamen abroad.

Depositions on Prosecutions for leaving Seamen abroad.]—By the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 30, depositions taken under commissions granted by the Court of King's Bench, for the examination of witnesses abroad, in prosecutions for leaving seamen behind in the colonies or elsewhere, are made evidence. (Post, "Seamen," &c. Vol. V.; "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. V.)

Depositions under mutiny act as to settlement.

Depositions under Mutiny Act as to Settlement.]—In the Mutiny Acts there is always inserted a clause rendering the examination of a non-commissioned officer or soldier, under certain circumstances, legal evidence to be received upon a question of settlement.

Such enactment usually is as follows: "That it shall and may be lawful for any justice of the peace for the county, town, or place where any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be quartered in that part of G. B. called England, in case such non-commissioned officer or private soldier have either wife or child or children, to cause such non-commissioned officer or soldier to be summoned before him, in the town or place where such non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be quartered, in order to make oath of the place of his last legal settlement (which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer); and such non-commissioned officer or private soldier as aforesaid is hereby directed to obey such summons, and to make oath accordingly; and such justice is hereby required to take the examination of such non-commissioned officer or soldier in writing, and to give an attested copy of the examination so taken before him to the person so examined, to be by him delivered to his commanding officer, in order to be produced when required; which said examination and such attested copy shall be at any time admitted in evidence, as to such last legal settlement, before any of H. M.'s justices of the peace, or at any general or quarter sessions of the peace; although such non-commissioned officer or soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom: Provided always, and in case any non-commissioned officer or private soldier shall be again summoned to make oath as aforesaid, then, on such examination or such attested copy thereof being produced by him, or by any other person on his behalf, such non-commissioned officer or soldier shall not be obliged to take any other or further oath with regard to his legal settlement, but shall leave a copy of such examination, or a copy of such attested copy of examination, if required."

This enactment is to be construed strictly; and therefore no other attested copy is legal evidence, while the original is in existence, except that given to the soldier. (Rex v. Clayton le Moors, 5 T. R. 706; 1 Phill. Evid. 358).

The original examination may be evidence, (Rex v. Worley, 6 T. R. 534); but it must be authenticated as being genuine by proof that the persons attesting are magistrates, or at least that the signatures are the hand-writing of those whose they purport to be, or the like. (Rex v. Bilton cum Harrowgate, 1 East, 13).

The examination of the soldier is to be received in evidence as to his settlement, though he be dead or absent from his country when the appeal as to such settlement is tried. (Rex v. Warminster, 3 B. & Al. 121).

In a late case, where an examination of a soldier taken before two magistrates was tendered in evidence to prove his settlement, but it did not appear by the examination itself, or by other proof, that the soldier, at the time when he was examined, was quartered in the place where the justices had jurisdiction, it was held not admissible. (R. v. All Saints, Southampton, 7 B. & Cres. 785; 1 M. & R. 663, S. C.)

Deposition of an infirm pauper as to his settlement, and report to petty sessions. 49 Geo. 3, c. 124.

Depositions of infirm Paupers as to Settlement.]—By stat. 49 Geo. III. c. 124, s. 4, it is enacted, That whenever it shall happen that any pauper is, by age, illness, or infirmity, unable to be brought up to the petty sessions to be examined as to his or her settlement, it shall be lawful for any one magistrate acting for the district where such pauper shall be, to take the examination of the said pauper, and to report the same to any other magistrate or magistrates acting for the said district, and for the said magistrates upon such report to adjudge the settlement of the said pauper, and make and suspend the order of removal, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if the said pauper had appeared before two magistrates. (Vide "Poor," Vol. IV).

Depositions of prisoners as to their settlements. 59 Geo. 3, c. 12.

Depositions of Prisoners as to Settlement.]—And by stat. 59 Geo. III. c. 12, s. 28, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to take in writing the examination on oath of any person having a wife or child, who shall be a prisoner in any gaol or house of correction, or in the custody of the keeper of any such gaol or house of correction, or who shall be in the custody of any constable or other peace officer, by virtue of any warrant of commitment, touching the place of his or her last legal settlement: and such examination shall be signed by such justice taking the same, and shall be received and admitted in evidence, as to such settlement, before any justices, for the purpose of any order of removal, so long only as the person so examined shall continue a prisoner. (Vide "Poor," Vol. IV).

Depositions after death of witness.

As observed by Mr. Phillips in his valuable treatise on Evidence, Vol. II. p. 71, the general rule, respecting the admissibility of depositions after the death of the witness, is, that they are not evidence, unless they have been taken judicially, and unless the party, whose interests would be affected by them, had an opportunity of being present and cross-examining the deponent. It is, therefore, now clearly established that the ex-parte examination of a pauper concerning his settlement, taken on oath before magistrates, is not admissible upon a question of settlement, as evidence against the appellant parish. (R. v. Nuneham Courtenay, 1 East, 373; R. v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54; R. v. Abergwilly, ib. 63). The objection against their admissibility is, not that the magistrates have no power to administer an oath, but that the examination is ex-parte, obtained at the instance of overseers, whose parish would be benefited by the removal, and behind the backs of the appellants, who received no notice of the proceeding, and had not the benefit of a cross-examination. (See R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 725). And there are no words (under which paupers in the statute 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12 are removed) expressly requiring the justices to take down any examination in writing. (1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 376).

3. Private writings, &c.

Examinations in Bastardy.]—It has been held, that where a pregnant woman died after examination taken under stat. 6 Geo. II. c. 31, but before an order of filiation, such examination is admissible in evidence on an application to the quarter sessions to make an order of filiation on the putative father; and that, if not contradicted, it ought to be considered as conclusive. (R. v. Ravenstone, 5 T. R. 373). It is to be observed, however, that in the case of R. v. Eriswell, (3 T. R. 707), where two justices had taken the examination of a pauper relative to his settlement, but did not remove him thereon, and he afterwards became insane, the judges of the Court of King's Bench were equally divided on the question, whether two other justices could remove his family on that examination. It may perhaps be a ground of distinction, that in the 13 & 14 Car. II. c. 12, s. 1, under which the latter examination was taken, the justices are merely empowered to remove, whereas the 6 Geo. II. c. 31, expressly directs the examination of the woman to be taken in writing upon oath, and renders it alone sufficient primâ facie evidence against the putative father, so far at least as to authorize and require the justices to commit the person so charged, until he gives security.

(3). Private Writings.

The next class of written evidence consists of private writings, as deeds, entries in private books, and other writings made by individuals, relating to themselves or others, in their own private capacity.

(3) Private writings.

We have already noticed the doctrine that the best evidence is required in all cases; also, that written evidence is superior to verbal evidence; such being the case, it is a general rule that, where a party, in making out his case, shews that any part of it rests on written testimony, as a deed, agreement, or other instrument of a private nature, he must produce and prove it. (Fenn v. Griffiths, 6 Bing. 533; Brewer v. Palmer, 3 Esp. 213). In some cases, however, as we have seen, as where the original is lost, or in the hands of the opposite party, who refuses after notice to produce it, secondary and sometimes parol evidence thereof is admissible. For those cases, and the course to be pursued therein, see ante.

We will now consider the mode of proving the execution of a deed, agreement, or other written instrument of a private nature.

Proof of Execution]—It is not absolutely necessary that the witness should see the deed or instrument absolutely executed; as if the obligor of a bond sign a bond, and then tell a certain person that he had signed it and sealed it, and bid him witness it, which he does—that is a sufficient proof of due execution of the bond. (Powell v. Blackett, 1 Esp. 97; Park v. Mears, 2 Bos. & Pull. 217; 1 Phill. Evid. 468). But this mode of attesting a deed was commented upon as careless and improper in Lloyd v. Freshfield, (2 C. & P. 325).

Proof of execution.

Proof of handwriting, when admissible, will afford presumptive evidence of the due execution. (Grellier v. Neale, Peake, 146; Adams v. Kerr, 1 Bos. & P. 361).

An attesting witness may refresh his memory as to the execution from seeing his own attestation. (Maugham v. Hubbard, 8 B. & Cres. 16; 2 M. & R. 5, S. C.)

Sealing is essential to a deed, but it is not material with what seal it is sealed. Any number of parties may use the same seal. (Com. Dig. Fait. A. 2). If there be twenty to seal one deed, and they all seal upon one piece of wax and with one seal, yet if they make distinct and several prints, this is a sufficient sealing, and the deed is good. (Shep. Touchst. c. 4, p. 55 ; 1 Phill. Ev. 7 ed. 467). But where a deed is executed under the authority of a power requiring it to be under the hands and seals of the parties, they must use separate seals. (Rex v. Austrey, 1 Phill. Ev. 453 ; 6 M. & Sel. 319, S. C.)

3. Private writings.

No particular form or ceremony is necessary as to the delivery of a deed. It will suffice if a party testifies his intention in any manner to deliver the deed into the possession of the other party. (1 Phill. Ev. 467 ; Thorogood's case, 9 Rep. 137 ; Com. Dig. Evidence [A. 3]).

When a party to a deed cannot write, and desires another person to write his name for him, who does so in his presence, this is a good execution by the party himself, and in such case the subscription of the name by the agent and his authority must be proved. (Rex v. Lognor, 4 B. & Adol. 647).

Identity.

Some evidence to identify the party who executed the instrument must be given. (B. N. P. 171 ; Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34). Proof of the party's signature proves only this fact, that the instrument in question was executed by a person in a certain name; it does not prove the other important fact, that the party who signed is that person. Slight evidence would be sufficient. Evidence that the party was present when the instrument was prepared by the subscribing witness will serve to connect him with the instrument. (Nelson v. Whittall, 1 B. & Al. 19 ; and see 1 C. & M. 515 ; 1 Phill. Evid. 466, 475). The place of residence of the party described in the instrument will frequently afford evidence of identity. (Mitchell v. Johnson, M. & M. 176 ; and see Whitelock v. Musgrove, 1 C. & M. 513). Though the attesting witness's personal attendance cannot be had, the proof of signature of such witness will not dispense with other proof of identity of the party executing. (Whitelock v. Musgrove, 1 C. & M. 511 ; and see the cases there collected. See Kay v. Brookman, 3 C. & P. 555 ; M. & M. 286, S. C. ; Page v. Mann, id. 79).

Where an attesting witness.

Where there is an attesting Witness.]—If the execution of the instrument was attested by a subscribing witness, he alone is competent to prove the execution, because he may be able to state the time of the execution, and some circumstances of the transaction, which may be material, and unknown to other persons. On an indictment, therefore, against an apprentice for enlisting himself in the army, all the judges held, that the indenture of apprenticeship could not be proved by the master, but that it was necessary to call one of the subscribing witnesses. (Rex v. Jones, 2 East, P. C. 822 ; 1 Leach, 174, S. C. ; see also Rex v. Harringworth, 4 M. & Sel. 350 ; 1 Phill. Evid. 346 ; Barnes v. Trompowsky, 7 T. R. 266). A notice, if attested, must be proved by the attesting witness. (See Doe v. Durnford, 2 M. & Sel. 62). So must a warrant or other instrument. (Higgs v. Dixon, 2 Stark. 180).

Attesting witness.

The subscribing witness must be called, even though the party has admitted the due execution of the instrument, unless where the execution is made an admission in the cause. (Fall v. Dunning, 4 East, 53 ; Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. 89 ; Milward v. Temple, 1 Camp. 375). To prove a deed, the attesting witness must be called, though it be an issue directed to try a question as to the date, and not the existence, of the deed. (Edinburgh v. Crundell, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 284). And even if the deed be cancelled, the subscribing witness must be called to prove the execution. (Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., in Breton v. Cope, Peake's Rep. 30 ; 1 Phill. Evid. 446, 447).

But the hand-writing in the register of a marriage may be proved without calling the attesting witness, where the object only is to identify the parties named in the register. (Wyatt v. Rochfort, 1 Jurist, 592.)

Subscribing witnesses are not essential to a deed. (Com. Dig. Fait. B. 4 ; Peake's Evid. 96).

Where there are two or more subscribing witnesses, it suffices to call one of them. (See Peake's Evid. 103; Doe d. Stutsbury v. Smith, 1 Esp. 391; Skin. 413; Holdfast d. Anstey v. Dowsing, 2 Stra. 1253). Or if all are dead, or their production dispensed with on other sufficient grounds, proof of the handwriting of one will suffice. (Adam v. Kerr, 1 B. & P. 360).

3. Private writings.

A subscribing witness to any instrument is compellable to give evidence respecting it; for the person, by subscribing his name, undertakes to give evidence at a proper time and in a proper manner. (Clarke v. Elwick, 10 Mod. 333; 1 Stra. 1, S. C.)

Where proof by attesting witness dispensed with.

If the subscribing witness be dead, it is sufficient to prove his handwriting; but it must also be proved that he is dead. (Anon. 12 Mod. 607; Nelson v. Whittal, 1 B. & Al. 19).

Illness is not a sufficient reason for dispensing with the attendance of a subscribing witness; such a relaxation of the rule has not yet been made, and it would obviously be liable to great abuse. (Harrison v. Blades, cor. Lord Ellenborough, C. J.; 3 Camp. 458; 1 Phill. Evid. 456; see Jones v. Brewer, 4 Taunt. 46. If the subscribing witness be blind, (Wood v. Drury, 1 Ld. Raym. 734; Pedler v. Paige, 1 M & Rob. 258) (a); or insane (Currie v. Child, 3 Camp. 283), he need not be called, after proving these facts and his handwriting. So, if he has absconded from his creditors, (Crosby v. Percy, 1 Taunt. 364; 1 Camp. 303, S. C.), or after a criminal charge, (Falmouth v. Roberts, 9 M. & W. 469), or if by some criminal act he, subsequently to the execution of the deed, become incompetent as a witness in a court of justice. (Jones v. Mason, 2 Stra. 833). So, if he become so by interest subsequently accrued by operation of law, (Buckley v. Smith, 2 Esp. 697; Godfrey v. Norris, 1 Stra. 34; Goss v. Tracy, 1 P. Wms. 289); but not by interest given to the witness by the party desirous to prove the execution, (Hovill v. Stephenson, 5 Bing. 493; Forrester v. Pigou, 1 M. & Sel. 9); or by interest at the time of the execution (Swire v. Bell, 5 T. R. 371); unless that was known to the party who requested the witness's attestation. (Honeywood v. Peacock, 3 Camp. 196) So if the witness denies all knowledge of his attestation or execution (Talbot v. Hodson, 7 Taunt. 251; Boxer v. Rabeth, Gow's C. N. P. 175; 2 Camp. 435), or where the name is fictitious (Fasset v. Brown, Peake, 23), or where he attested, not knowing what he was about (M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232), he need not be called on proving those facts.

If the attesting witness be out of the jurisdiction of the court, as not to be amenable to its process, as in Ireland or elsewhere, (Prince v. Blackburn, 2 East, 252; Hodnett v. Forman, 1 Stark. 90); or where he cannot be found after diligent inquiry, (Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183), his personal attendance may be dispensed with. And it is not necessary to shew that his absence is caused by collusion with the other party. (Willman v. Worrall, 8 Car. & P. 380). In a late case, where the subscribing witness to the acceptance of a bill of exchange was one of the acceptor's family, and could not be served with a subpœna in consequence of the conduct of that family, the bill was read without his evidence. (Hill v. Phillips, 5 C. & P. 356).

What inquiry for, sufficient.

Strict proof is required of diligent inquiry; and the sufficiency of the inquiry is a question for the jury. (Bampton v. Paulin, 4 Bing. 264). But where such due inquiry has been made, it will be no objection to the receipt of evidence of his handwriting, that a letter not disclosing his retreat had been received from him a few days before the trial.

(a) But see the case of Croak v. Freth, 8 Car. & P. 197, 2 M. & Rob. 262, in which Lord Abinger held, that if since the execution of a deed the subscribing witness to it has become blind, a party suing on the deed must, if non est factum be pleaded, still call the subscribing witness; and it is not enough to prove the handwriting of the parties executing the deed, and of the subscribing witness.

3. Private writings.

(Morgan v. Morgan, 9 Bing. 359; 2 M. & Scott, 491, S. C.) Where it was proved that a commission of bankruptcy had been taken out against the attesting witness, a bankrupt, to which he had never appeared, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said this was sufficient, as he would presume from his not surrendering, that he was out of the kingdom. (Wardell v. Fermor, 2 Camp. 282). A witness, on being subpœnaed, said he would not attend, and the trial was twice put off in consequence of his absence. Search was then made at the defendant's house and in the neighbourhood; and upon information at the defendant's, that the witness was gone to Margate, and inquiry made there without success; under these circumstances his personal attendance was not required. (Burt v. Walker, 4 B. & Al. 697). An ineffectual inquiry after an attesting witness to a bond, at the residence of the obligor and obligee, has been held sufficient. (Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183). So has an inquiry after witness at his usual place of residence, and information there that he has absconded. (Crosby v. Percy, 1 Camp. 303; sed vid. Pitt v. Griffith, 6 Moore, 538, which is to the contrary). So has an inquiry at the Admiralty, and information there, by the last report, that the witness was serving on board a ship. (Parker v. Hoskins, 2 Taunt. 223). So where the witness went abroad twenty years ago, and has never since been heard of. (Doe v. Johnson, 1 Phill. Evid. 453; ante, 374). So, proof by a father that his son, who had parted from him on bad terms, had enlisted in the 11th Dragoons, and that he had inquired at the War Office, and received for answer that the regiment had sailed for India, was held sufficient to let in evidence of his handwriting, as subscribing witness to an agreement. (Wyatt v. Bateman, 7 Car. & P. 586—Coleridge). And other circumstances, from which it may be fairly inferred he has left the kingdom, will suffice; as, where a witness expressed an intention of leaving the kingdom, having reason for so doing, to avoid a criminal prosecution, and his relations not having seen him since he expressed his intention of going. (Ray v. Brookman, 3 C. & P. 555; and see Evans v. Curtis, 2 C. & P. 296).

Where attesting witness does not attend.

As to the mode of proving the execution of the instrument, where the subscribing witness does not attend the trial, and such attendance is dispensed with, that will be effected simply by proving the handwriting of the attesting witness, as also the circumstances which are necessary to dispense with his attendance. There is no necessity for proving the handwriting of the party himself. Ray v. Brookman, 3 C. & P. 555; Nelson v. Whittall, 1 B. & Al. 19; Gough v. Cecil, Selw. N. P. 516, n.) But where there are two attesting witnesses, and one of them cannot be produced, being dead, &c., proof of the handwriting of the latter will not suffice, unless the production of the other also be dispensed with on similar grounds. (Cunliffe v. Sefton, 2 East, 183; M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232). Proof of the absent attesting witness's signature will suffice, though the party to the instrument executed only by his mark. (Mitchell v. Johnson, M. & M. C. N. P. 176; and see Page v. Man, id. 79; Doe d. Wheeldon v. Paul, 3 C. & P. 613). Some evidence of the identity of the absent subscribing witness should be given. As to the mode of proving the attesting witness's handwriting, see infra.

Where an instrument is proved by a copy, as secondary evidence, the attesting witness to the original need not be called. (Poole v. Warren, 8 Ad. & E. 582).

Where party refuses to produce an attested document

And if a party, after notice, refuses to produce a document which is proved to be in his possession, the opposite party may give secondary evidence of its contents, as in other cases, without calling the subscribing witness. (Cook v. Tanswell, 2 Moore, 513; 8 Taunt. 450; 1 Moore, 465, S. C.) And where the defendant, after notice, refused to produce the deed at the trial until an examined copy was tendered in evidence, when he then produced the original, it was held he could not insist on such original being proved by the attesting witness. (Jackson v. Allen, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 74).

3. Private writings.

Where there is no Attesting Witness, &c.]—In cases where there is no subscribing witness to the instrument, or where the subscribing witness has not any knowledge of the execution (which is the same thing as if there were no witness at all, Fitzgerald v. Elsee, 2 Camp. 635; Lemon v. Dean, ib. 636, n. per Le Blanc, J., in the case of a promissory note; Talbot v. Hodson, 7 Taunt. 251; ante, 413), or where the name of a fictitious person is inserted, (Fasset v. Brown, Peake's Rep. 23; ante, 413,) or where the attesting witness was interested at the time of the execution of the deed, or becomes so subsequently, and continues so at the time of the trial, (Swire v. Bell, 5 T. R. 371; ante, 413), or where the person who has put his name as subscribing witness did so without the knowledge or consent of the parties, (M'Craw v. Gentry, 3 Camp. 232; Wright v. Wakeford, 4 Taunt. 220; ante, 413), the execution may be proved by proving the handwriting of the party to the deed; or by any person present at the execution, though he is not indorsed as a witness. Com. Dig. tit. Evidence, B. 3.) or by proof of an admission of the party himself that he executed that deed.

Where no a testing witness.

Handwriting.]—In general, the witness, to prove a handwriting, should have gained his knowledge from having seen the party write; but under some circumstances that is not necessary; as where the handwriting to be proved is of a person residing abroad, evidence by a party who has frequently received letters from him in a course of correspondence would be admitted to prove it, though he had never seen him write. (Bull. N. P. 236).

Handwriting.

The mark of a person who cannot write, may also be proved by a person who has seen him make his mark, and is acquainted with it. (George v. Surrey, M. & M. 516).

It is not necessary that a witness should swear that the writing intended to be given in evidence is actually the handwriting of any particular individual; but his belief that it is such is sufficient.

Belief.

This belief must be founded upon rational grounds; either he must have seen the individual in question often write his name, or have received letters from him in the course of correspondence, not having actually seen him write, or the like.

Handwriting.

And if a witness, called to prove the handwriting of a paper, say that he believes it to be of the handwriting of the defendant from its contents, and from other circumstances, he may be asked what those circumstances are. (Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297).

But he is to form his opinion merely, and that only from looking at the handwriting in question; and in that case the opinion of the witness will, it seems, go as evidence to the jury, although he may have seen the party write his name but once. (Garrells v. Alexander, 4 Esp. 37; Burr v. Harper, Holt, N. P. C. 420; Willman v. Worrall, 8 Car. & P. 380). Unless indeed where it has been written in the witness's presence for the purpose of making him competent to give evidence in the suit. (Stranger v. Serle, 1 Esp. 14).

On an issue as to defendant's signature, witnesses were called for him, who deposed, that they knew his handwriting, and did not believe the signature to be his. Plaintiff proposed to ask each witness whether a paper, placed on the witness-box, was signed by defendant, purposing by such inquiry to test the knowledge of the witnesses by their agreement or disagreement; this was not allowed, the paper not being in evidence for any other purpose. The objection would not have been removed by independent proof that the paper proposed to be laid before the witnesses was in fact written by defendant. (Griffits v. Ivery, 11 Ad. & E. 322; and see Hughes v. Rogers, 8 M. & W. 123).

3. Private writings.

In a case where a witness who had never seen the defendant, but had corresponded with a person of the defendant's name living at Plymouth Dock, where defendant resided, and where, according to other evidence, there was no other person of that name, stated that the handwriting of certain letters was that of the person with whom he had corresponded, it was held, that this evidence was sufficient to admit the letters to be read against the defendant. (Harrington v. Fry, 2 Bing. 179; 9 Moore, 344, S. C.; 3 Stark. C. N. P. 90; R. & M. C. N. P. 90, S. C.; and see Tharpe v. Gisburne, 2 C. & P. 21; and R. v. Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213). In a late case, where a witness for the defendant stated that he had never seen the person in question write, but that his name was subscribed to an affidavit which had been used by the plaintiff, and that he had examined that signature so as to form an opinion, which enabled him to say it was genuine, Park, J. held this to be sufficient. (Smith v. Sainsbury, 5 C. & P. 196).

Mere opinion.

To prove the handwriting of a member of Parliament, the opinion of a clerk employed to inspect franks, who never had occasion to apply to the member to verify his handwriting, has been held insufficient. (Batchelor v. Honeywood, 2 Esp. R. 714).

Where the signature of an attesting witness to a will was in dispute, and the witness, who was alive, and called as a witness at the trial, admitted that certain specimens put into his hands were of his writing, and that signatures made to depositions in the Ecclesiastical Court were also his, an inspector at the Bank, skilled in handwriting, who had gained a knowledge of the witness's handwriting by inspection of these admitted specimens before the trial, was called to prove that the attestation to the will was not in the handwriting of the witness. The evidence was held to be admissible, per Lord Denman, C. J., and Williams, J.; inadmissible, per Patteson and Coleridge, Js. (Ib. Doe d. Mudd v. Suckermore, 2 Nev. & P. 16; 5 Ad. & Ell. 703).

Where a witness stated that he had merely seen the party subscribe his name to another instrument to which he was attesting witness, and was unable to form an opinion respecting the handwriting in question without examining such other instrument, it was held insufficient; for it was evident he could not speak to the handwriting except by comparison. (Filliter v. Minchin, Manning's Index, 131).

Similitude of hand.

It seems to be generally holden, since the reversal of the attainder of Algernon Sidney, that similitude of hands is not evidence in any criminal case, whether capital or not capital. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 15; R. v. Crosby, 1 Ld. Raym. 39; 12 Mod. 72, S. C.; 9 Howell's St. Tri. 817; 4 Esp. 37; Allport v. Meek, 4 C. & P. 267). Unless, perhaps, where the writing is so ancient that no witness can be found to prove it. (1 Phill. Evid. 492, 7 ed.; Macferson v. Thoytes, Peake, N. P. C. 20; B. N. P. 236; 8 Price, 652; R. & M. C. N. P. 143). As where a parson's book was produced to prove a modus, the parson having been long dead, a witness who had examined the parish books, in which was the same person's name, was permitted to swear to the similitude of the handwriting, for it was the best evidence for the nature of the thing, as the parish books were not in the plaintiff's power to produce. (B. N. P. 236). Or unless, perhaps, where there is already contradictory evidence of the fact as to the handwriting. (See Allesbrook v. Roach, 1 Esp. N. P. C. 352; Da Costa v. Pym, Peake's Evid.) If evidence by comparison be properly admitted in such cases to prove the genuineness of a signature, the same kind of evidence must also be admissible to prove that the signature is not genuine. (1 Phill. Evid. 492).

Evidence of handwriting by comparison is inadmissible, except either where the writing acknowledged to be genuine is already in evidence in the cause, or the disputed writing is an ancient document. These exceptions are of necessity. (Doe d. Perry v. Newton, 1 Nev. & Per. 1; 5 Ad. & El. 514).

3. Private writings.

The rule, however, as to comparison of handwriting, does not apply to the court or the jury, who may compare the handwriting of the document tendered with that of any other already properly in evidence in the cause. (Griffiths v. Williams, 1 Cr. & Jerv. 47; Solita v. Yarrow, 1 M. & Rob. 133). But it is not allowable to put in evidence a document unconnected with the case, though undoubtedly in the handwriting of the party, merely for the purpose of enabling the jury to make such a comparison. (R. v. Morgan, 1 M. & Rob. 134, n.; and see Griffiths v. Williams, 1 C. & J. 47; Allport v. Meek, 4 C. & P. 267; Hughes v. Rogers, 8 M. & W. 123).

Refreshing memory.

A witness who has seen a party write may refer to that writing to refresh and strengthen his recollection, and not merely for the purpose of comparison. (Burr v. Harper, Holt, C. N. P. 420; Maugham v. Hubbard, 8 B. & Cres. 16). See post, as to refreshing memory.

Imitated handwriting.

The best evidence to prove a signature or writing to be a forgery is to be derived from calling the party himself whose writing is alleged to have been forged, provided he be a competent witness. But this is not absolutely necessary, and the handwriting may be disproved by any person acquainted with the genuine handwriting. (R. v. Hughes, 2 East, P. C. 1002; 1 R. & M. C. C. 380).

Inspector of franks, &c.

Inspectors of franks, clerks of the post office, and other persons of skill, practised in examining handwriting and in detecting forgeries, have been in some cases allowed to give their opinion from their general knowledge of handwriting whether a particular specimen of handwriting is in a genuine or imitated character. (Goodtitle d. Revett v. Braham, 4 T. R. 497; R. v. Cator, 4 Esp. 117, 145; Kemp v. Mackrill, Sayer, 132; Stringer v. Searle, 1 Esp. N. P. C. 14; 1 Phill. Evid. 493).

But such evidence has been since rejected, and great doubts entertained as to its admissibility. (Gurney v. Langlands, 5 B. & Al. 330). At all events it should, in general, have but little weight. (Id. and see Doe d. Mudd v. Suckermore, 5 Ad. & Ell. 703, ante, 416; where the judges differed in opinion on the admissibility of such evidence, and the remarks on that case in Phil. Ev. 2, 266.

Proof of execution when not necessary.

Ancient deeds, &c.

Proof of Execution when dispensed with.]—If a deed be thirty years old, it may be given in evidence without any proof of the execution of it. However, there ought to be some account given of the deed, as to where it was found, &c.: and if there be any blemish in the deed, by rasure or interlineation, the deed ought to be proved, though it were above thirty years old, by the witnesses, if living, and if they be dead, by proving the hand of the witnesses, or at least one of them, and the hand of the party, in order to encounter the presumption arising from the blemishes of the deed; and this ought more especially to be done if the deed imports a fraud. (B. N. P. 255). There is no fixed rule upon this point, but a deed has often been allowed as evidence where it was but twenty-five years old. (12 Vin. Abr. 57). Other old writings besides deeds are also subject to this rule of evidence. (Fry v. Wood, Selw. N. P. 517, n.) Thus a certificate of the ordination of a clergyman in Ireland, signed by the archbishop of Tuam, and found among the papers of the clergyman after his death. (Rex v. Bathwick, 2 B. & Adol. 639). It has been held sufficient to produce a certificate of settlement thirty years old, without showing that it had been kept in the parish chest. (Rex v. Ryton, 5 T. R. 259; and see Rex v. Whitchurch, 7 B. & Cres. 573; 1 M. & R. 472, S. C.) Even though the attesting witness be alive, and capable of being produced, it seems unnecessary to call him where the deed is thirty years old. (Murch v. Collett, 2 Esp. 665; B. N. P. 255). In a late case, a will of thirty years old was allowed to be read as proved, although the testator had died within thirty years, and some of the subscribing witnesses were proved to be still living. (Doe v. Woolley, 8 B. & Cres. 22).

3. Private writings.

Where a deed enrolled (and of which enrolment was necessary) is given in evidence, it is not necessary to prove the execution of it by the subscribing witness; but it may be proved by the enrolment indorsed on it; or if the deed be lost, by an examined copy of the enrolment. (See ante, 392).

Execution of.

Where one deed or instrument is recited in another, proof of the second deed or instrument is deemed proof of the one recited, as against the parties to the second deed or instrument and their privies. (2 Bac. Ab. Evid. F.) So would be the recital in a deed of the payment of money conclusive proof at law of such payment as against the parties to it or their privies. Lampon v. Cork, 5 B. & Al. 606; 1 D. & R. 210, S. C.; Rowntree v. Jacob, 2 Taunt. 141. But see Deverell v. Whitmarsh, ante, 372).

Where a party producing a deed under a notice to produce claims a beneficial interest under it, it will not be necessary for the party calling for the deed to prove the execution of it. (Pearce v. Hooper, 3 Taunt. 62; Orr v. Morice, 3 B. & B. 139; 6 Moore, 347, S. C.) Thus in an action against the vendor of an estate to recover the deposit on a contract for the purchase, if the defendant on notice produce the contract, the plaintiff need not prove its execution. (Bradshaw v. Bennett, 1 M. & Rob. 143; 5 C. & P. 48). And it makes no difference that the party calling for the deed impugns its validity on the ground of fraud. (Carr v. Burdiss, 1 C. M. & R. 782). But where the party producing the deed does not claim any interest under it, the party calling for it must prove it in the regular way. (Id.; Gordon v. Secretan, 8 East, 548; overruling Rex v. Middlezoy, 2 T. R. 41. See Burnett v. Lynch, 5 B. & Cres. 589; 8 D. & R. 368, S. C.; Doe v. Heming, 6 B. & Cres. 28; 9 D. & R. 15, S. C.; Marin v. Palmer, 6 C. & P. 466).

In Vacher v. Cocks, 1 B. & Adol. 145, it was decided that a party, producing at the trial of a cause a deed which had been some months in his possession, is not excused from proving the execution because he received such deed from the adverse party, who formerly claimed a benefit under it.

Proof of execution is not necessary when the opposite party who produces the deed is a public officer, who in the discharge of his official duties was obliged to prepare such a deed and get it executed. (Scott v. Waithman, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 168).

It is not necessary to prove the execution of an instrument against the spoliator of, or wrongdoer as to it. Rex v. Ellins, R. & R. C. C. 188).

Entries in books, &c.

Entries in Books, &c.]—We have already seen how far entries by persons in private books and writings are admissible in evidence. (Ante, 378).

Stamps.

Stamps.]—It would exceed the limits and object of this work to enter into a full detail of the law relative to stamps: we shall notice only the leading principles relative to the admissibility of unstamped instruments, or other evidence in support of them. The amount of the stamp duties, and several legislative provisions respecting them, will be found post, title "Stamps," Vol. V. The rest of the law on this subject will be found in Chitty on Stamps; Impey on Stamps; Phill. Evid.; Roscoe's Evid. 95, &c.; Stark. Evid. title Stamp; Coventry on Stamps.

It may be laid down as a general rule, that whenever an instrument becomes in any way the direct subject of a prosecution, or it is sought to give to the instrument tendered in evidence the effect of a genuine one, it must have the proper stamp, because, by the stamp acts, without a stamp it cannot be read as a genuine instrument. Thus an agreement to assign an apprentice cannot, if unstamped, be received in evidence to prove a settlement, even after the expiration of the term of apprenticeship. Rex v. Bedford, 6 T. R. 452). Various other instances might also be cited.

If indeed a party can get through his case without giving the opposite party any opportunity of showing that there was a written instrument, if the latter wishes to avail himself of it, then he must produce it duly stamped (Rex v. Padstow, 4 B. & Adol. 208; Rex v. Rawden, 8 B. & C. 710; Reed v. Deere, 7 B. & Cres. 266; Chit. Stamp Laws, 43; ante, 365.

3. Private writings.

Stamps.

When a party is desirous of giving secondary evidence of an instrument which requires a stamp, which has been lost or destroyed, or in the custody of the opposite party, who has had notice to produce it, there must be positive or presumptive evidence that it was properly stamped. (1 Stark. Evid. 354, 3 id. 1379; Chit. Stamp Laws, 35). Where a party refuses to produce an instrument after notice to do so, it will be presumed as against him that it was properly stamped, until the contrary appear. (Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 35; 2 Stark. Evid. 80; and see Munn v. Godbold, 3 Bing. 292; ante, 365). Where an apprentice had regularly served under an indenture executed thirty years ago, and the parish in which the apprentice was settled under that indenture had relieved him for the last twelve years, it was held that the sessions had rightly presumed, that the indenture was duly stamped, although it was proved on the other side by the deputy registrar and comptroller of the apprentice indentures, that it did not appear that any such indenture had been stamped or enrolled. (Rex v. Long Buckby, 7 East, 45; 3 Stark. Evid. 1379). For the presumption of law is omnia rite esse acta; and against the negative evidence the parties below might reasonably set the possibility of an irregular entry in the return made to the office. (Id.)

Should, however, it appear by the examination or cross-examination of the party's witnesses, that the instrument was not properly stamped, then, although it has been lost, (Rex v. Castle Morton, 3 B. & Al. 588), or destroyed even fraudulently by the party who objects to the want of the stamp, no secondary evidence therefore can be admitted. (Rippiner v. Wright, 2 B. & Al. 478; 2 Stark. Evid. 80). For it is the duty of the parties to the instrument to take care that when it is executed it is properly stamped, and it is one of the risks attendant on an omission to do this, that if any accident happen to the instrument before the stamp is affixed, there is no remedy whatever on the instrument itself. (Id.)

For some collateral purposes, an unstamped instrument (though it requires a stamp) is admissible in evidence, as to defeat fraud, or prove an offence or crime. Thus, in support of an indictment for forgery, (Rex v. Hawkswood, 1 Leach, 257; East's P. C. 955, 6; Rex v. Gibson, 1 Taunt. 97; Chit. Stamp Laws. 53); or knowingly uttering a forged instrument, (Rex v. Reculist, 2 Leach, 703), it may be read in evidence, though unstamped. (See Rex v. Fowle, 4 C. & P. 592; Rex v. Smith, 5 C. & P. 201). And an unstamped check is admissible for the purpose of identifying other property stolen, in support of an indictment for larceny. (Rex v. Pooley, 3 B. & P. 316; R. & R. C. C. 31, S. C.)

In general, however, an unstamped instrument cannot be read in a criminal case, as evidence of the purpose for which it was intended. (3 Stark. Evid. 1382; Rex v. Hall, 3 Stark. 67, n.) Thus, in an indictment for setting fire to a house with intent to defraud an insurer, an unstamped policy is not admissible in evidence to prove the contract of insurance. (Rex v. Gibson, 1 Taunt. 95; Rex v. Gibson, R. & R. C. C. 138; 2 Leach, 1007). And upon an indictment against a clerk for embezzling his master's money, an unstamped receipt given by the servant to the debtor who paid him the money is not evidence against the prisoner. (Rex v. Hall, 3 Stark. 67). So, in a prosecution on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, (which made it a capital offence for any person employed in receiving letters to secrete any letter containing a bank note, or any warrant or draft for the payment of money), it was held not competent to the prosecutor to give in evidence any instrument of that description unstamped. (Rex v. Pooley, 3 B. & P. 311; 2 Leach, 900, 904; R. & R. C. C. 31, S. C.)

But for a collateral purpose such a writing may be produced in evidence; and, therefore, if the prisoner be indicted for stealing a letter in which it was folded, it may be brought forward to fix him with having purloined the letter. (Id.) And where the act requiring the stamp does not expressly prohibit the unstamped paper from being given in evidence, it may for collateral purposes be read, as in the case of a newspaper, which, though unstamped, may be read in evidence in support of an indictment for a libel in another newspaper to prove the defendant's malice; and Lord Kenyon said this is not the case of deeds and agreements, when the acts of Parliament expressly declare, that no such instrument shall be read in evidence until stamped, and though the publisher would be liable to a penalty for not getting the paper stamped before publication, yet it may be given in evidence. (R. v. Pearce, Peake's Ev 75, 76; Chit. Stamp Laws, 53, 4, 5).

The rule upon this subject seems to be, that where the indictment is founded on a written instrument, and the instrument itself is the crime, it is receivable in evidence without a stamp; but where the indictment is for an offence distinct from the instrument, and the instrument only introduced collaterally, it cannot be received unless it be properly stamped. (Rex v. Smyth, 5 C. & P. 202. See Chit. Stamp Laws, 55).

In some cases, as in the instance of an unstamped receipt, although the unstamped instrument is not admissible in evidence, it may, nevertheless, be shown the witness to refresh his memory, and enable him, from his recovered recollection, with more certainty to give his parol evidence. (See Maugham v. Hubbard, 8 B. & C. 14; 2 M. & R. 5, S. C.; Jacob v. Lindsay, 1 East, 460; 3 Stark. 3; Chit. Stamp Laws, 46, 47).

When a party gives in evidence an instrument unstamped, but which in general requires a stamp, and relies on some facts entitling the instrument to an exemption from the stamp duty, he should prove those facts; and the mere recital in the instrument of such facts will not in general suffice. Therefore, where an unstamped indenture of apprenticeship recited that a premium of 12*l.* had been paid by the parish officers, but added, that it was paid out of a charitable donation fund belonging to the parish, and the master being called, proved that the premium had been paid by the parish officers, who told him, at the time of paying it, that it was charity money; it was held, that the fact of payment being proved, the recital in the indenture, and the declaration of the parish officers, were not admissible in evidence, so as to bring the case within the exemption in the Stamp Act, and that the indenture, being unstamped, was void. (R. v. Skeffington, 1 B. & Al. 382). But if there had been no evidence but the deed and the declaration of the parish officer, and the fact of payment by him had not been proved by the master, it seems there would have been sufficient evidence that the money was paid out of the charity fund. (Id.)

Except, however, in the case of exemptions, it is incumbent on the party who relies on the objection, to show that the facts bring the case within the operation of the law requiring a stamp. (Waddington v. Francis, 5 Esp. R. 182; Lord Dudley v. Robins, 3 C. & P. 26).

Where an instrument is not required by law to be stamped within a particular time after its execution, the court, upon its being offered in evidence, will not inquire when the stamp was affixed, nor, if a penalty was incurred, whether the proper penalty was paid on the stamping. (Rex v. The Inhabitants of Preston, 5 B. & Adol 1028; and see Rex v. Inhabitants of Church Hulme, id. 1029; R. v. Chipping Norton, 5 B. & Al. 412. Vol. I. tit. "Apprentices").

(1). Number of Witnesses required.

What number of witnesses are required.

The common law does not require any certain number of witnesses for the trial of any crime whatsoever except in perjury. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 2).

And before a justice of the peace, in divers cases, one witness is sufficient to convict an offender; the same being directed by special statutes.

But by stat. 7 Will. III. c. 3, s. 2, in case of high treason, whereby corruption of blood shall be made, no person shall be attainted but upon the oaths of two witnesses, either both to the same overt act, or one of them to one, and the other of them to another overt act of the same treason. But in Gahagan's case, at the Old Bailey, Jan. sess. 1748, (1 Leach, 42), it was determined, that a conviction of high treason may be upon the evidence of one witness, in all cases where there is no corruption of blood. In misprision of treason there must be two witnesses, unless the defendant willingly and without violence confess the offence. (1 Edw. VI. c. 12, s. 22. See further, 1 Chit. C. L. 560).

On an indictment for perjury there must be two witnesses; one alone is not sufficient, because there is in that case only one oath against another. (Reg. v. Muscott, 10 Mod. 194; Rex v. Broughton, Stra. 1230). But if the assignment of perjury be directly proved by one witness, and strong circumstantial evidence be given by another, or be established by written documents, this would perhaps be sufficient, although it does appear as yet to have been so decided. However, in R. v. Mayhew, (6 C. & P. 315), an admission in writing by the defendant was, with the direct testimony of one witness, considered sufficient. Also, if the perjury consist in the defendant's having sworn contrary to what he had before sworn upon the same subject, this is not within the rule above mentioned; for the effect of the defendant's oath in the one case is neutralized by his oath in the other; and proof by one witness will therefore make the evidence against the defendant preponderate. (Arch. Cr. Plead. & Evid. 110; Rex v. Harris, 5 B. & Al. 929; n. a). And the defendant has been convicted on the mere proof of his having so sworn without the production of any witness to contradict either the one statement or the other; the jury being left to infer from the circumstances on which occasion the perjury was committed. (Anon. 5 B. & Al. 939, 940, n.; R. v. Knill, id. 929, n. See post, "Perjury," Vol. V.).

In those courts which proceed by the rules of the civil law, as the spiritual court and the courts of equity, two witnesses are generally required; and the reason why the civil law requires two witnesses is, because their trial is by witnesses, and not by a jury of twelve men. (1 Inst. 6 b.; Plowd. 12 a.)

By stat. 29 Ch. II. c. 3, s. 5, devises of land shall be attested by three witnesses at the least.

(2). Competency of Witnesses.

Competency of witnesses.

The exceptions to a witness are of two kinds; 1st, to his credit on account of facts, which do not at all disable him from being sworn, but yet may blemish the credibility of his testimony; and in such case the witness is to be allowed, but the credit of his testimony is left to the jury; 2d, to his competency on account of facts, which exclude him from giving his testimony; and of these exceptions the court is the judge. (2 Hale, 276, 277).

2. Witnesses' competency.

As to what will affect the credit of a witness, see post, 442.

How incompetency may arise.

The Incompetency of a Witness may arise either from Want of Discretion, Want of Religion, from Infamy, from Relationship, from Confidential Communications, from Interest, from being Parties to the Prosecution, &c.

When objection of incompetency to be made.

Objections to the competency of a witness should properly be taken at the time of his examination on the voire dire, and before he is sworn in chief, at least in those cases where his answers may have the effect of rendering him competent by removing the objections. (Woollaston v. Hakewill, 3 Scott, N. R. 593). But where the objection was taken after the witness had been sworn in chief, but before he was asked any questions, it was held not too late. (Yardley v. Arnold, Ex. T. T. 1842; 11 L. J. Rep. 413; see post, 450).

Want of discretion.

Infants.

Want of Discretion.]—Want of discretion is a good exception against a witness; on which account alone it seems that an infant may be excepted against. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 27). But if an infant be of the age of fourteen years, he is as to this purpose of the age of discretion to be sworn as a witness; and even if under that age, yet if it appears that he hath a competent discretion, he may be sworn. (2 Hale, 278). And in many cases an infant of tender years may be examined, where the exigence of the case requires it; which possibly, being fortified with concurrent evidences, may be of some weight; especially in cases of such crimes as are practised upon children. (2 Hale, 279, 284. In Brazier's case, 1 East's P. C. 443, 444; 1 Leach, 199). On an indictment for assaulting an infant of five years of age with intent to ravish her, it was agreed by all the judges, that children of any age may be examined on oath, if capable of distinguishing between good and evil; but that they cannot be examined in any case without oath. (R. v. Travers, 2 Stra. 700; Omychund v. Barker, 1 Atk. 29; 4 Blac. Com. 214). When the child has appeared not sufficiently to understand the nature and obligation of an oath, judges have often thought it necessary, for the purpose of justice, to put off the trial of the prisoner, directing that the child in the mean time shall be properly instructed. (Vide 2 Bac. Ab. by Gwillim, 577, notis). Where the child cannot be sworn, the account which it has given of the transaction to others is not admissible. (R. v. Tucker, 1 Phill. Evid. 19; R. v. Pike, 3 C. & P. C. N. P. 598; 1 Chit. C. L. 589, 590; and see post, "Rape," Vol. V.)

Lunatics, &c.

Lunatics and other persons who are subject to temporary fits of insanity, may be witnesses in their lucid intervals, if they have sufficiently recovered their understandings.

Deaf and dumb.

And a person deaf and dumb is not on that account incompetent, but if he has sufficient understanding, may give evidence by signs, with the assistance of an interpreter. (Ruston's case, 1 Leach, 408; 1 Phill. Ev. 18, 20; and see post, as to examining him).

Want of religion.

Want of Religion.]—A man who has no religion whatever, or no religion that can bind his conscience to speak the truth, is excluded from being a witness. (B. N. P. 292; Omichund v. Barker, Willes, 549; 1 Atk. 44, S. C.) It is not, indeed, essential that the witness should be a Christian, or believe in the Old Testament; it is sufficient if he believe in a God, in a future state of rewards and punishments, and in the moral obligation of the oath he is about to take. (Id.) Gentoos, (Willes, 549; Atcheson v. Everitt, Cowp. 390); Jews, (Gomes Serra v. Munez, 2 Stra. 821); Mahometans, Turks, and Moors, (Fachina v. Sabine, Stra. 1104; 1 Atk. 19, S. C.; 1 Leach, 64), may be witnesses. Atheists, and such like infidels, professing no religion that can bind their consciences to speak the truth, cannot. (B. N. P. 292; Omichund v. Barker, Willes, 549, 1 Atk. 29, S. C.) The affirmations of Quakers and Moravians are now made sufficient instead of an oath. (9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 1, post). 2. Witnesses' competency.

As to the mode of administering the oath to persons not Christians, &c., see post, 452.

The circumstance that a principal witness, although an adult and of sufficient intellect, has no idea of a future state of rewards and punishments, is not a sufficient ground for discharging the jury, though this appears as soon as the jury is charged, and before any evidence is given. (R. v. Wade, R. & M. C. C. R. 86).

The proper mode of examining a witness, for the purpose of trying his competency in religious principle, is not to question him as to his particular opinions, (as to whether he believes in Jesus Christ), but whether he believes in God, the obligation of an oath, and a future state of rewards and punishments. (Per Buller., J., R. v. Taylor, Peake, 11). The witness's answer in the affirmative of such question will make him competent in respect to his religion. (Ib.)

Infamy, &c.]—It seems agreed that an attainder, judgment, or conviction of treason, felony, piracy, premunire, perjury, or forgery, on stat. 5 Eliz., and also a judgment in attaint for giving a false verdict, or in conspiracy at the suit of the King, and also judgment for any heinous crime, to stand on the pillory, or to be whipped or branded, are good causes of exception against a witness, while they continue in force. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 19; Bull, N. P. 291). And in Bushell v. Barret, (R. & M. C. N. P. 434), it was considered, that a judgment for a conspiracy to bribe a person (summoned as a witness on an information against the revenue laws) not to appear before the justices of the peace renders the person convicted incompetent as a witness. Infamy, &c. (a)

But a party convicted of a crime not of a heinous nature, as for keeping a gaming-house, (R. v. Grant, R. & M. C. N. P. 270), for publishing a libel, or seditious works, or the like, (Gilb. Evid. 140; 3 Lev. 428), is not incompetent on that account. Nor will a conviction for conspiracy to raise the funds by false rumours, or to commit a fraud, render the party convicted incompetent. (Crowther v. Hopwood, 3 Stark. 21; D. & R. N. P. C. 55, S. C.; Park v. Strockley, 4 D & R. 144; case of the Ville de Varsovie and others, 2 Dods. Rep. 174).

In the case of Pendock v. Mackindor, (2 Wils. 18), the question was whether a person convicted and whipped for petit larceny should be allowed to be a witness. And the Court were clearly of opinion he should not, and laid it down as a rule, that it is the crime that creates the infamy, and not the punishment for it. But by stat. 31 Geo. III. c. 35, it was enacted that no person shall be an incompetent witness by reason of a conviction of petit larceny. That act is repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27; and see now the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 2, abolishing the distinction between grand and petit larceny. (See tit. "Larceny," Vol. III.)

It seems agreed, that it is no good exception against a witness that he is an alien. (2 Haw. 46, s. 28).

Outlawry in a civil action is not a good exception against a witness, but outlawry for treason or felony appearing on the record by the sheriff's return of the exigent is. (Rex v. Celier, Sir T. Raym. 396; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 21).

Excommunication is now no longer a ground for rendering a witness incompetent. (See the 53 Geo. III. c. 127, ss. 2, 3).

A pardon of any of these offences has the effect of restoring competency, in as full a manner as if the witness had never been convicted. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22; Gilb. Evid. 141, 2). And this even in the case of perjury at common law, (5 Esp. 94), but not in the cases of perjury on stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9, and conspiracy at the suit of the king; in which cases the incompetency forms a part of the judgment, and is not merely a consequence of it. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 22; B. N. P. 292; but see Hargr. Jurid. Arg. 221). How competency restored by pardon, &c.

(a) An act of Parliament is about being passed by which witnesses are not to be excluded from giving evidence, by incapacity from crime or interest. If passed, as it probably will before the publication of this work, it will be found in the Addenda, under tit. "Evidence."

2. Witnesses' competency.

In general, also, where a capital convict is pardoned, on condition of suffering certain punishment, the endurance of the punishment fulfils the condition, and restores his competency. (2 Hale, 278).

Before the abolition of benefit of the clergy, the allowance of clergy in clergyable felonies, and the endurance of the mitigated punishment, restored the offender to competency. The statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, (tit. "Clergy, Benefit of," Vol. I.), abolishing the benefit of clergy, and affixing punishments directly to the offences, was probably intended to have the same effect; but, as doubts were entertained whether it had distinctly accomplished the object, the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 3, enacts, that, where any offender has been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and has endured the punishment to which he has been adjudged, the punishment so endured shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof he was so convicted (a). And by the same stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 4, a person convicted of a misdemeanour, (except perjury, or subornation of perjury), which renders him an incompetent witness, shall not, after suffering his punishment, be deemed to be, by reason of such misdemeanour, an incompetent witness in any court or proceeding, civil or criminal (b).

The incompetency of offenders now, therefore, in every kind of offence, except perjury, or subornation of perjury, is removed, when the punishment is suffered, or a pardon granted. And since the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13, it is not necessary that the pardon in case of felony should be under the great seal; if it be under the king's sign manual, countersigned by one of his principal secretaries of state, it will suffice. The act does not apply to pardons for misdemeanours. (See tit. "Pardon," Vol. V.)

It was held in Rex v. Badcock, (Russ. & R. C. C. 248), that a person who had been convicted of grand larceny, sentenced to be transported for seven years and confined in the hulks, and discharged at the end of his term, is a competent witness, such confinement operating as a statute pardon, and his having escaped twice from such confinement, for a few hours each time, does not destroy the effect of it.

Mode of proof of conviction, &c.

The party who would take advantage of this objection to the witness's competency must have the record itself, or a copy of the record of conviction, ready to produce in court; for, until the judgment upon the verdict be regularly entered, the witness is not deprived of his legal privileges. (B. N. P. 292; 1 Cowp. 3.) The conviction without the judgment will not suffice, as judgment might have been arrested; (Gilb. Evid. 128, 9); and the record will not be complete without a caption. (Cooke v. Maxwell, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 183). If it be objected against receiving a person's testimony, that he has been convicted of felony, and his punishment is unexpired, such objection must be supported by the production of the record; and no admission by the party himself will be sufficient. In this case, Lord Ellenborough, C. J., said, "It cannot be seriously argued that a record can be proved by the admission of any witness: he may have mistaken what passed in court, and may have been ordered on his knees for a misdemeanor. This can only be known by the record, and there is no authority for admitting evidence of it." (Rex v. Castell Carcinion, 8 East, 77; see ante, 391; 1 Phill. Evid. 30, 7 ed.)

(a) The words of the act are, sect. 3, "And whereas it is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged; be it therefore enacted, that, where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured hath and shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted: provided always, that nothing herein contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction for any other felony."

(b) Sect. 4. "And whereas there are certain misdemeanours which render the parties convicted thereof incompetent witnesses, and it is expedient to restore the competency of such parties after they have undergone their punishment; be it therefore enacted, that, where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any such misdemeanour, (except perjury, or subornation of perjury), and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been, or shall be, adjudged for the same, such offender shall not, after the punishment so endured, be deemed to be, by reason of such misdemeanour, an incompetent witness in any court or proceeding, civil or criminal."

2. Witnesses' competency.

No admission that he has committed a crime of which he has not been convicted, even perjury, will prevent him from being a competent witness. (Rex v. Teale, 11 East, 309; Rands v. Thomas, 5 M. & Sel. 244).

(4). Relationship.—It is to be observed, that there be many circumstances that disable a juror, that are not sufficient exceptions against a witness. Thus the exception of kindred is a good cause of challenge against a juror, but not against a witness: therefore the father may be a competent witness for or against his son, or the son for or against his father. These and the like exceptions may be to the credit or credibility of the witness, but are not exceptions against his competency. (2 Hale, 276; Rex v. Mayor and Burgesses of Oakhampton, 1 Wils. 333; Rex v. Inhabitants of Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263; Rex v. Inhabitants of Bramley, 6 T. R. 330; Gilb. Evid. 135).

(4). From relationship.

Husband and wife cannot be admitted to be witnesses for each other, because their interests are absolutely the same; nor against each other, because contrary to the legal policy of marriage. (Co. Lit. 6 b.; Barker v. Sir W. Dixie, Cases t. Hardw. 264; Rex v. Sergeant, R. & M. C. N. P. 352). She cannot even be asked a question on a trial, to contradict what the husband has sworn; for it would subject him to a prosecution for perjury. (Rex v. The Inhabitants of Cliviger, 2 T. R. 268).

Husband and wife.

However, there are some exceptions to this rule. In the case of high treason, it has been said that a wife shall be admitted as a witness against her husband, because the tie of allegiance is more obligatory than any other. (Vide 1 Hale, 301; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 82; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 85; Brownl. 47; 1 Chit. C. L. 595).

By stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 37, (and previously by stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30), the wife of a bankrupt may be examined by the commissioners touching his estate, but not his bankruptcy.

If a woman be taken away by force, and married, she may be a witness against her husband indicted on stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 19, against the stealing of women; for a contract obtained by force has no obligation in law. (R. v. Reading, R. T. Hard. 83; B. N. P. 286; ante, Vol. I. 7).

So, upon an indictment on the same act, section 22, for marrying a second wife, the first being alive, though the first cannot be a witness, yet the second may, after proof of the first marriage, the second marriage being void. (Grigg's case, Sir T. Raym. 1; 4 St. Tri. 754; B. N. P. 287; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 72; R. & M. C. N. P. 354; post, "Polygamy," Vol. V.)

In Lord Audley's case, his wife was allowed to be a witness to prove that he assisted to a rape upon her. (1 St. Tri. 393; and see 1 Hale, P. C. 301; 1 Phil. 84).

In Azyre's case, on an indictment against him for beating his wife, Lord Raymond suffered her to give evidence. 1 Stra. 633; B. N. P. 287, S. C.)

A wife is permitted to exhibit articles of the peace against her husband (B. N. P. 287); and the court will not receive affidavits on the part of the defendant, to contradict the truth of the articles exhibited against him, and prevent his giving surety. (Lord Vane's case, 13 East, 171 [a]; R. v. Doherty, ib.)

2. Witnesses competency.

So an affidavit of a married woman has been admitted to be read, on an application to the Court of King's Bench for an information against the husband, for an attempt to take her away by force, after articles of separation. (Bull. N. P. 286; R. v. Mead, 1 Burr. 543; Lord Vane's case, 13 East, 171, n.; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 85).

On the trial of a man for the murder of his wife, her dying declarations are evidence against him. (Woodcock's case, 2 Leach, C. C. 363; John's Case, 1 East's P. C. 357; 1 Phill. Evid. 85; ante, 360).

Husband and wife.

And in all cases of personal injuries committed by the husband or wife against each other, the injured party is an admissible witness against the other. (R. v. Jagger, 1 East's P. C. 455; Reg. v. Pearce, 9 Car. & P. 667).

When several defendants were indicted under the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, for a conspiracy, and the indictment contained two counts framed respectively on the 19th and 20th sections of that act, Hullock, B., was of opinion that even supposing the young lady who had been carried off to be at the trial the wife of one of the defendants, she was yet a competent witness for the prosecution, although there was no evidence to support that part of the indictment which charged force; first, of necessity; and secondly, because the defendant should not be enabled by his own criminal act to exclude such evidence against himself. R. v. Wakefield, 2 Russ. 605).

R. v. Wood, M. Sitt. 26 Geo. III. On an indictment for forcibly breaking open the house of a third person, and assaulting the defendant's wife, Lord Mansfield, C. J., admitted the defendant's wife as a witness to prove the assault on her. MS.

On the trial of an appeal against an order of removal (and, upon the same principle, in any suit or proceeding between third persons), a husband or wife is a competent witness to prove a former marriage, even after proof of a second marriage, although perhaps the witness would not be compellable to answer such questions. And the reasoning upon which this rule is founded is equally strong to shew, that the one may be called as a witness to disprove what has been stated by the other; and that either the party who has called the one, or the opposite party, may call the other for the purpose of contradicting. Indeed, the reasoning is much stronger in this case than in the former, where the husband or wife is allowed to prove the first marriage; for although they may directly contradict each other as to a particular fact, it will not follow that either party has been guilty of perjury. And as the most serious inconveniences might result from a different rule, which would be a bar to the full and complete investigation of the subject, in cases too where the property, the character, or even the life of a party may be at stake, it appears to be reasonable, and necessary to the ends of justice, that such evidence should be admitted. (1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 80; Rex v. All Saints, Worcester, id. 79; and see R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263; R. v. Bathwick, 2 B. & Adol. 639).

Woman divorced.

If a woman be divorced a vinculo matrimonii, she cannot prove a contract, or any thing else which happened during the coverture. Any fact arising after the divorce, she may prove. (Monroe v. Twisleton, Peake's Evid. App. p. xxxix.)

Woman living with the party as wife.

In Campbell v. Twemlow, (1 Price, 81), it was made a question, but not decided, whether a woman who had passed as the wife of a man, but was not so, could be examined as a witness for him. Lord C. B. Richards cited a case, before Lord Kenyon on the Chester circuit in the year 1782, where, on a trial for forgery, the prisoner called a woman as his witness whom he had himself in court represented to be his wife, but afterwards, on hearing an objection taken to her competency, denied that she was married to him; and Lord Kenyon would not permit him to call her, after having represented her as his wife. (1 Phill. Evid. 88, 7 ed.) However, it seems now fully settled by the case of Batthews v. Galindo, (1 Mo. & Payne, 565), that though a woman lives with a man, uses his name, and passes as his wife, she is a competent witness for or against him, such circumstances going only to her credit, and not to her competency. And see 2 Stark. Evid. 711, and Wells v. Fletcher, 5 C. & P. 12; 1 M. & Rob. 99, S. C. nom. Wells v. Fisher).

2. Witnesses' competency.

The wife of a party is an incompetent witness for or against him, though she marry after the subpœna served. (Pedley v. Wellesley, 3 C. & P. 558).

Other points.

A widow cannot be asked to disclose conversations between her and her late husband. (Doker v. Haslar, R. & M. C. N. P. 198; but see Beveridge v. Minter, 1 C. & P. 364).

It seems a wife cannot be examined against her husband, even with his consent. (1 Hale's P. C. 47).

In all cases where husband and wife are admissible witnesses against each other, they are admissible also for each other. (R. v. Sergeant, R. & M. C. N. P. 352).

(5.) Confidential Communications.—Some persons also are privileged, by reason of their peculiar employment, from being compelled to give evidence.

(5). From confidence.

Attorneys.

Thus an attorney or solicitor ought not to be examined against his client, because he is obliged to keep his secrets; but of his own knowledge before retainer, that is, before he was addressed in his professional character, he may be examined as a witness, if served with a subpœna. (Wood's Inst. b. 4, c. 4; and Cutts v. Pickering, Vent. 197; 1 Chit. C. L. 605).

The cases have been contradictory on the question whether this privilege of confidential communications to an attorney is to be confined to such as are made to him for the purpose of either commencing, prosecuting, or defending a suit. In Broad v. Pitt, (3 C. & P. 519), Best, J., said, "I think this confidence in the case of attorneys is a great anomaly in the law. A man is not acting as an attorney when he is consulted about a deed; and I cannot distinguish his situation from that of any other man. I can make a distinction where a person requires information for the purpose of defending himself, or of commencing an action." (And see this case in R. & M. C. N. P. 233; Williams v. Mundie, R. & M. C. N. P. 34; 1 C. & P. 97, S. C.; 2 Swanst. 199, n.; Wadsworth v. Hamshaw, Manning's Index, 374; Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 432). It seems, however, now settled that this rule is too confined, and that the privilege is to be extended to all confidential communications to the attorney in his professional character, whether relating to a pending or contemplated suit or not. Thus in trover for a lease by the assignees of a bankrupt. Plea, that, before the bankruptcy, the bankrupt deposited the lease with the defendant as a collateral security for money which the bankrupt then owed him. At the trial, the plaintiffs attempted to show that the lease was deposited after the act of bankruptcy, and for that purpose called a witness, who had been the attorney for the bankrupt after the act of bankruptcy, and had been applied to by him to raise him money. It was then proposed to ask him whether the bankrupt had not the lease in his possession at that time: but this was held privileged from disclosure, as being a confidential communication made to him relative to his character as an attorney. (Turquand v. Knight, 2 Mee. & W. 98). So where A. applied to B., an attorney, to raise money upon certain property, and enabled him to obtain an abstract of the title and compare it with the original, but the money was never raised. In an action of ejectment, where B. was called upon to produce the abstract as secondary evidence of an original deed stated therein: A.'s communication was held confidential, and B.'s evidence was therefore not admissible. (Doe d. Peter v. Watkins; 4 Scott, 155; 3 Bing. N. C. 421. See Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 Myl. & K. 100; Walker v. Wildman, 6 Madd. 47; Doe d. Shellard v. Harris, 5 C. & P. 592; Cromack v. Heathcote, 2 Brod. & B. 4; 4 Moore, 357, S. C.; R. v. Boddington, 4 D. & R. M. C. 233). But this privilege only extends to prevent the disclosure of facts communicated confidentially to the witness in the character of attorney; and therefore it was decided in Spencely q. t. v. Schulenburgh (7 East, 357), that an attorney may be examined as to the contents of a written notice which he had received in the course of the cause, calling upon him to produce papers in the hands of his clients: for "the privilege is restricted to communications, whether oral or written, from the client to his attorney, and cannot extend to adverse proceedings communicated to him as attorney in the cause from the opposite party, in the disclosure of which there could be no breach of confidence." (Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., S. C.: and see M. & M. C. N. P. 235; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R 753; B. N. P. 284). So in an action for money had and received where the defendant pleaded a recovery by foreign attachment, at the suit of a creditor of the plaintiffs, and that the creditors had execution of the sum recovered according to the customs of London; and the plaintiff replied, that no execution was executed. It was held that the attorney of defendant, the garnishee in the foreign attachment, was not incompetent to prove the custom in such attachment. (Magrath v. Hardy, 4 Bing. N. C. 782.) And where an instrument is called for at a trial and not produced, the attorney of the party required to produce it may be asked whether he has it in his possession; the object of such question being merely to let in secondary evidence of the contents of the instrument. (Coates v. Mudge, 1 Dowl. N. S. 540). And an attorney for a party in a cause is not bound to state the contents of a deed of which he first obtained a knowledge, by having obtained and read it at the suggestion of his counsel, at the consultation in the cause (Davies v. Waters, 9 M. & W. 608). An attorney may be called to prove a deed executed by his client which he has attested. (Doe v. Andrews, Cowp. 846). So to prove matters communicated to him after the termination of a suit of which they were the subjects, without a view to the objects of the suit. (Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 431; see Greenough v. Gaskell, 1 Mylne & K. 109). And a communication made by a client to his attorney, not for the purpose of asking legal advice, but to obtain information as to a matter of fact, is not privileged. (Bramwell v. Lucas, 2 B. & Cres. 745; 4 D. & R. 367, S. C.) So a witness may be called upon by the plaintiff to state a conversation in which the defendant proposed a compromise to the plantiff, although the witness attended on that occasion as attorney for the defendant. (Griffith v. Davies, 5 B. & Adol. 502. See Hill v. Elliott, 5 C. & P. 436). An attorney is bound to give evidence of a statement made by himself to the adverse party by the direction of his client. (Ripon v. Davies, 2 Nev. & M. 310). A person who is not an attorney may be compelled to disclose communications made to him under a mistaken idea that he was an attorney. Fountain v. Young, 6 Esp. 113).

Where two parties in dispute have one attorney, a communication by one to him in his common capacity, or in a matter wherein he acts necessarily for the other party, is not privileged, and may be used by the other. (Baugh v. Cradocke, 1 M. & Rob.; Cleeve v. Powell, 1 M. & Rob. 228; Perry v. Smith, 9 M. & W. 681).

This privilege is that of the client, and not of the attorney; and the court will not allow the attorney, though he be willing, to make the disclosure, unless the client consent to the disclosure. (B. N. P. 284; Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 759).

But it is not every communication made to an attorney in the way of business, that will be privileged. The relation of attorney and client must subsist between the parties. Thus what a mortgagor in treaty to raise money says to the attorney of the mortgagee, is not privileged. (Marston v. Downes, 6 C. & P. 381; 1 Adol. & E. 31, S. C. See Hill v. Elliott, 5 C. & P. 436).

If the attorney be called by the client, and examined as to a matter which has been the subject of confidential communication, he may be cross-examined as to such matter, though not as to others. (Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524).

Confidential communications made to counsel, when acting as such, are also privileged like those made to attornies. (Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753, and cases above cited). 2. Witnesses' competency.

It seems an arbitrator cannot be compelled to give evidence in an action on an award of what has been done before him. (Ellis v. Saltau, 4 C. & P. 327, n.) Counsel.

A party who is protected from producing a deed at Nisi Prius on the ground that he holds it as a trustee for one of the parties, is not compellable to disclose the contents of it. (Davies v. Waters, 9 M. & W. 608). Trustee.

A person who acts as interpreter; or as agent between the attorney and his client; (Du Barre v. Levette, Peake, 78; Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 239); or the attorney's clerk; (Taylor v. Forster, 2 C. & P. 195; Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R. 347); cannot be called to reveal a confidential communication. Nor can a barrister's clerk be called to prove his master's retainer. (Foot v. Hayne, R & M. C. N. P. 165). Interpreter. Agent o attorney. Clerks.

But this privilege does not extend to the case of an agent or steward. (Ib.; and Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524). Agent.

Nor to the case of a conveyancer. (Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 525). Conveyancer.

Nor to the case of medical persons. (Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 760). There are, indeed, cases, said Mr. J. Buller in Wilson v. Rastall (4 T. R. 760), to which it is much to be lamented that the law of privilege is not extended; those in which medical persons are obliged to disclose the information they acquire by attending in their professional characters. This point was very much considered in the Duchess of Kingston's case, before the House of Lords, where Sir C. Hawkins, who had attended the duchess as a medical man, was compelled to disclose what had been committed to him in confidence. (20 Howell's St. Tr. 613; and see 1 Phill. Ev. 144, 7 ed.; Rex v. Gibbons, 1 C. & P. 97). Medical persons.

Nor to clergymen. (Rex v. Gilham, Car. C. L. 61; Broad v. Pitt, 3 C. & P. 519; 20 How. St. Tr. 612). Per Best, J., Broad v. Pitt, 3 C. & P. 519:—"I for one will never compel a clergyman to disclose communications made to him by a prisoner; but if he chooses to disclose them, I shall receive them in evidence." Clergymen.

Where the disclosure of a particular fact, not bearing directly upon the matter in question, may be of detriment to the public service, the court will not compel a witness to disclose it. In Hardy's case, (24 How. St. Tr. 753), a witness who was employed to obtain information of the proceedings at a meeting of one of the corresponding societies was not allowed to disclose the name of his employer. (And see Rex v. Watson, 2 Stark. 136). Communications between the governor of a colony and his attorney-general are confidential, and cannot be disclosed. (Wyatt v. Gore, Holt, 299; Cooke v. Maxwell, 2 Stark. 184). So is a letter written by an agent of government to one of the secretaries of state. (Anderson v. Hamilton, 2 Broad & B. 156, n.) Matters of state, &c.

A letter written by an opposing creditor to the chief commissioner of the Insolvent Court, previous to the hearing of an insolvent's case, is not a privileged communication. (Gould v. Hulme, 3 C. & P. 625). Other matters.

A clerk attending on a grand jury shall not be allowed to reveal that which is given in evidence before the inquest. (Tr. per Pais, 387; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 83; and see Lee v. Birrel, 3 Camp, 337).

A grand juryman has been allowed to be examined in an action for maliciously indicting the plaintiff and others for a conspiracy, as to the fact whether the defendant was the prosecutor of the indictment. (Sykes v. Dunbar, 2 Selw. N. P. 1059).

A widow cannot be asked to disclose conversations between her and her late husband. (Ante, 425).

(6). Interested Witness.—It is an objection to the admissibility (6.) From interest (a).

(a) An act of Parliament will probably soon be passed, by which witnesses are not to be excluded from giving evidence by incapacity from crime or interest. If passed, it will be found in the Addenda, tit. "Evidence." of a witness that he is interested; respecting which it seems an uncontested rule in all cases, that it is a good exception against a witness, that he is either to be a gainer or loser by the event of the cause, whether such advantage be direct and immediate, or consequential only. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 24).

2. Witnesses' competency.

What such an interest.

And however small the interest may be, the witness would be incompetent. (Burton v. Hinde, 5 T. R. 174: but see Rex v. Mayor of London, 2 Lev. 231; Peake's Evid. 177).

The witness, however, must have an immediate interest in the event of the proceeding, or must derive a certain benefit from its determination one way or the other. (Radburn v. Morris, 1 M. & P. 648; 4 Bing. 649; S. C. See Doe d. Nightingale v. Maisey, 1 B. & Adol. 439). A liability to a remote action or prosecution would not suffice to make him competent. (Ib.) And if the witness would not incur any loss, nor be liable to a suit, whatever may be the result of the prosecution, his evidence ought to be received. Thus, on an indictment for forging a bank note in the name of a cashier of the Bank of England "for the governor and company," the cashier, not being chargeable, may be a witness. (Newland's case, 1 Leach, 311; 2 East's P. C. 1001; 1 Phill. Evid. 122. See Collins v. Gwynne, 2 M. & Scott, 640; 9 Bing. 544, S. C.)

And as to what interests will not render a witness incompetent, see Hatcher v. Seaton, 2 M. & W. 47; Pulling v. Meredith, 8 Car. & P. 763; Shipton v. Thornton, 9 Ad. & E. 314; 1 Per. & D. 216; Doe d. Bath v. Clarke, 3 Bing. N. C. 429; 4 Scott, 203; Hartshorne v. Watson, 5 Bing. N. C. 477; 7 Scott, 494; Barker v. Stubbs, 1 Man. & G. 44; 1 Scott, N. R. 131; Fowler v. Round, 5 M. & W. 478; Wildgoose v. Pearce, 5 M. & W. 506; Reg. v. Yates, 1 Car. & M. 132.

The judges have, in a variety of cases, resolved that these questions of interest shall, as far as possible, go to the credit rather than the competency of the witness. (Peake's Evid. 141).

Witness believing himself interested.

Honorary obligation.

A witness who believes himself interested, but is not so in fact, is competent. Thus a witness who believes himself under an obligation of honour to indemnify the bail, but who has entered into no engagement to indemnify, is competent. (Pederson v. Stoffles, 1 Camp. 145). There are, however, authorities that a witness who believes himself legally interested is incompetent. (See Trelawny v. Thomas, 1 H. Bla. 307; and Fotheringham v. Greenwood, 1 Stra. 129; and see 1 Phill. Evid. 54, n.; 2 Stark. Evid. 747, n.) In the case of the Amitie Villeneuve, (5 Rob. Rep. 344), Sir William Scott rejected the evidence of a witness who stated that he conceived he would be entitled to share in case his vessel should be deemed joint captor, although he had signed a release. Sir William Scott observed that "he had always understood the distinction to be, that, if the witness says only that he expects to share from the bounty of the captors, he is not disqualified or rendered incompetent, whatever may be the deduction of credit to which he is exposed. But if he thinks himself entitled in law, he acts under an impression of interest, which renders him incompetent, however erroneous that opinion may be."

Interest.

Witness's hope or expectation.

It is no objection to the competency of a witness that he has wishes or a strong bias on the subject-matter of the issue, or that he hopes or expects some benefit from the result of the trial. Such circumstances may influence his mind and affect his credibility; they are therefore always open to observation, and ought to be carefully weighed by the jury, who are to determine what dependence they can have on his testimony; but they will not render him incompetent. (1 Phill. 47, 7 ed.; Gilb. Evid. 124; R. v. Rudd, 1 Leach, 127).

Persons interested both ways.

As an exception to the general rule, that persons immediately interested in the event of the cause cannot be witnesses for that party whose claim, if established, will advance their own interest, there is a class of cases determining that where a person is equally interested, either in the event of a verdict for the plaintiff or defendant, he is a good witness. As, for example, where one is intrusted by A. to pay money to B., and does not pay it accordingly, and then B. brings an action against A. for the amount: the agent is a good witness to prove no payment; inasmuch as he acknowledges the receipt of the money from A., and thereby renders himself liable to A. So, if an indictment be preferred against a county for not repairing a bridge, and the only question be whether it is in repair, men of the county are good witnesses not only on the general principle, but because it is equally desirable to every man that the bridge, for convenience of passage, should be repaired when it is necessary, as that the county should not be put to an unnecessary charge: so that they are indifferent, being equally concerned on both sides of the question. (The case of the City of London, 1 Ventr. 351; R. v. Inhabitants of Wiltshire, 6 Mod. 307; Peake's Evid. 169. See Collins v. Gwynne, 9 Bing. 544).

2. Witnesses' competency.

Interest acquired subsequently.

Where a person has made himself a party in interest in the subject-matter for the mere purpose of depriving the party to the suit of the benefit of his testimony, this ought not to exclude him from giving evidence: (see Barlow v. Vowel, Skin. 586; Bent v. Baker, 3 T. R. 27; 1 Phil. 137); and in the late case of Hovill v. Stephenson, (5 Bing. 493), where the plaintiff, in an action on a charty-party, had communicated to the attesting witness an interest in the adventure subsequently to the execution of the instrument, it was held that evidence of his hand-writing was inadmissible, and that he himself ought to be called.

Trustee.

If a trustee takes a beneficial interest, he is incompetent; but without such an interest trustees and executors are competent witnesses. (1 Phill. Evid. 52, 69, and authorities there cited). Trustees being empowered, by act of Parliament, to sue in the name of their treasurer, are not competent witnesses for the treasurer suing as such. (Whitmore v. Wilks, 1 M. & M. 214).

Executors.

And by the 1st Vict. c. 26, s. 17, it is enacted that no person shall on account of his being an executor of a will be incompetent to be admitted a witness, to prove the execution of the will, or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof.

Legatee.

The estate of a deceased is always liable for the reasonable expenses of his funeral, and can, in no event, be liable beyond them. Therefore, a residuary legatee is not incompetent to prove that his testator's funeral, which exceeded the cost chargeable upon the estate, was furnished to the order of a stranger, on the ground that the tendency of his evidence is to relieve the estate. (Green v. Salmon, 3 Nev. & Per. 388; 8 Ad. & E. 348).

By 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 15, it is enacted, that if any person shall attest the execution of any will, to whom or to whose wife or husband any beneficial devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift or appointment, of or affecting any real or personal estate (other than and except charges and directions for the payment of any debt or debts), shall be thereby given or made, such devise, legacy, interest, gift or appointment, shall, so far only as concerns such person attesting the execution of such will, or the wife or husband of such person, or any person claiming under such person, or wife or husband, be utterly null and void; and such person, so attesting, shall be admitted as a witness to prove the execution of such will, or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof, notwithstanding such devise, legacy, estate, interest, gift or appointment mentioned in such will.

Creditors.

By 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 61, it is enacted, that in case by any will any real or personal estate shall be charged with any debt or debts, and any creditor, or the wife or husband of any creditor, whose debt is so charged, shall attest the execution of such will, such creditor, notwithstanding such charge, shall be admitted a witness to prove the execution of the will, or to prove the validity or invalidity thereof.

2. Witnesses' competency.

Mortgagee.

Ejectment by first mortgagee against mortgagor, defence that the mortgage was fraudulent; second mortgagee called as witness to prove the fraud, rejected as incompetent. (Doe d. Cuthbert v. Bamford, 3 Per. & D. 498).

Partner.

In an action on a charter party, a person who is a partner with the plaintiff in the ship, though not one of the registered owners, is not a competent witness for the plaintiff, unless cross-releases are executed between him and them. (Jackson v. Gallaway, 8 Car. & P. 480).

Heir at-law.

An heir-at-law may be a witness concerning the title to the land, but the remainder-man cannot; for he hath a present interest, but the heir-ship is a mere contingency. (Smith v. Blackham, 1 Salk. 283).

In ejectment, the lessor of the plaintiff claimed as heir of one T. B., the defendant as devisee of the person last seised: it was held, that the grandson of an elder brother of T. B, who himself claimed to be entitled to the property in question, was a competent witness for the defendant, he having no immediate interest in the event of the suit, and the verdict and judgment not being available as evidence for him in any suit that might be instituted by him against the defendant, for the recovery of the same property. (Doe d. Bath v. Clarke, 4 Scott, 203; 3 Bing. N. C. 429).

Steward of manor.

It is no objection to a steward of a manor, that he has a fee on admission: he is a witness notwithstanding. (Champian v. Atkinson, 3 Keb. 90).

Member of corporation.

In questions as to the rights or immunities of a corporation, the evidence of individuals who are not privately interested, though members of the city, may be received. But where corporators, as such, have private interest, as to be free of toll, rights of common, &c., these being really and substantially interested in the event of the cause, are no witnesses; (1 Peake's Evid. 145, 146, 156, and authorities there cited); and see the case of Doe ex dem. Mayor, &c. of Stafford v. Tooth, (3 Younge & Jerv. 19), where it was held that a member of a corporation is not a competent witness to sustain the claim of the corporation, even though he release his interest in the subject-matter of the suit. So, in an action of trespass, the defendant pleaded a right of common in respect of the occupation of a messuage, a freeman of the corporation was not a competent witness to prove that freemen only had a right of common in respect of the occupation of the messuage. (Godmanchester Bailiffs v. Phillips, 4 Ad. & El. 550). Nor was he made competent by a release by the freeman to the corporation of all his rights as freeman. (Ib.)

In an action of ejectment by an assignee of a mortgage, the assignment of the mortgage was put in, which recited an original mortgage of a corporation; and an objection having been made against the competency of a rate-payer, who was called as a witness by the lessor of the plaintiff, he was held competent; for, as the action was by a mortgagee against the tenant in possession, it was the rate-payer's interest rather that things should continue as they were, than that the tenant should be turned out. (Doe d. Brame v. Maple, 3 Bing. N. C. 832; 5 Scott, 35).

A member of a society is not a competent witness for another member. (Planche v. Braham, 8 Car. & P. 68). In the case of Weller v. Governors, &c. of Foundling Hospital, (cited in Peake's Evid.), it is to be observed the witnesses were admitted because they were mere trustees, and had not the least personal interest.

Party in a cause.

In Norden v. Williamson (1 Taunt. 378) it was decided, that if the defendant and plaintiff be willing, the defendant may have the plaintiff as a witness. And in Worrall v. Jones, (7 Bing. 395) it was held that where a defendant, who has suffered judgment by default, waives the objection and consents to be examined, and is called against his own interest, there is no ground for rejecting him.

2. Witnesses' competency.

Commoner.

One commoner may be a witness for another claiming common, because in effect it charges himself; but if the prescription be, that all the inhabitants of such a place ought to have common there, one of the inhabitants could not, previous to 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, be a witness to prove that another of the said inhabitants ought to have common there, because he would, in effect, swear to give himself right of common there. (Hockley v. Lamb, 1 Lord Raym. 731; Anscomb v. Shore, 1 Taunt. 261; 1 Phill. Ev. 57, 7 ed.) But the competency of such a witness seems to be restored in civil cases by that statute. (Hoyle v. Coupe, 9 M. & W. 882).

Judge or juror being a witness.

It seems agreed that it is no exception against a person's giving evidence either for or against a prisoner, that he is one of the judges or jurors who are to try him. (2 Haw. c. 46, s. 17). But where a juror is called upon to give his evidence, he ought to give it upon oath openly in court, and not be examined privately by his companions. (Bac. Abr. Evid. A. 2; 3 Black. Com. 357; Kel. 12).

Prosecutor in general.

Prosecutor.]—The testimony of the party injured is constantly admitted in evidence, because he cannot in any future suit derive any advantage from the record of a conviction. Thus, a prosecutor is competent upon an indictment for tearing a promissory note payable to him; (R. v. Moise, Stra. 595; R. v. Parris, 1 Sid. 431); or for extorting a bond from him; (7 Mod. 118); or for usury, although he was the borrower of the money, and has not repaid it, (Id.); or for cheating him by false pretences; (Reg. v. Makartney, Salk. 286); or for fraudulently procuring him to execute a cognovit. (R. v. Parris, 1 Sid. 431; Ventr. 4; Stark. Evid. Part IV. 772). But there may be cases in which the prosecutor is so directly interested in the event as to be incompetent as a witness, unless where a statute conferring the interest recognizes his competency either expressly or by implication. (R. v. Williams, 9 B. & C. 550).

In perjury.

It was formerly thought that, on an indictment for perjury, the party aggrieved by the deposition alleged to be false could not be sworn on the trial, even though the record of conviction could not be given in evidence in his favour on any future occasion. (R. v. Nunez, 2 Stra. 1043; R. v. Ellis, id. 1104; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 118). But it seems now to be fully settled that the party in question is competent, even without showing that he has satisfied the judgment obtained against him in the cause in which the perjury was committed, for the conviction of the defendant founded on his evidence is no ground of subsequent relief even in equity. (1 Chit. C. L. 597; R. v. Broughton, 2 Stra. 1230; Abrahams v. Bunn, 4 Burr. 2255; R. v. Boston, 4 East, 572; Reg. v. Yates, 5 Jur. 636, N. P. C.) It is laid down in B. N. P. 289, that on an indictment for perjury, on the statute of Elizabeth, the person injured cannot be a witness, because the statute gives him £10. But it is to be observed that the statute gives the £10, the moiety of the penalty, to the party grieved "that will sue for the same," bringing the case apparently within the principles to be collected from R. v. Williams, (9 B. & C. 558), that where a statute gives a reward or penalty not recoverable on the indictment, but only by a distinct suit in which the conviction will not be evidence, the testimony of the party entitled to the penalty will be admissible. (See "Perjury," Vol. V.)

In forgery.

Formerly, on a prosecution for forgery, the party by whom an instrument purported to be made was not admitted to prove it forged, if he would either be liable to be sued upon the instrument (supposing it genuine), or be thereby deprived of a legal claim against another. (R. v. Russell, 1 Leach, 8; Watt's case, Hard. 331; Watt's case, 3 Salk. 172; Rhodes's case, 2 Stra. 728; Caffy's case, 2 East's P. C. 995). But now, by stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 2, on any prosecution by indictment or information either at common law, or by virtue of any statute against any person for forging any deed, writing, instrument, or other matter

2. Witnesses' competency.

In forgery.

whatever, or for uttering any deed, writing, instrument, or other matter whatsoever, knowing the same to be forged, or for being accessory before or after the fact to any such offence, if the same be a felony, or for aiding, abetting, or counselling the commission of any such offence, if the same be a misdemeanor, no person shall be deemed to be an incompetent witness in support of any such prosecution by reason of any interest which such person may have or be supposed to have in respect of such deed, writing, instrument, or other matter. And before this act, as we have already seen, (ante, 430), upon an indictment for forging a bank note, the cashier whose name was forged was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. (R. v. Newland, 1 Leach, 350). So, on an indictment for forging the indorsement of the payee of a bill of exchange, the payee, who was to have paid the produce in discharge of a debt due from the drawer, but who in fact never received the bill, was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. (R. v. Sponsonby, 1 Leach, 374; and see Id. 57). So, on an indictment against the payee of a bill for uttering a forged acceptance, the first indorsee was held a competent witness, though he has only advanced part of the amount of the bill, and though he releases, during the trial, the person in whose name the acceptance is forged. (R. v. Mott, R. & R. C. C. 435). So, on an indictment for forging a receipt, the person whose name was forged, having first recovered the money from the defendant, was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. (R. v. Wells, Bull. N. P. 289). So, on an indictment for forging the name of a person to a power of attorney to sell out stock, where the forgery was detected before the stock was transferred, the person whose name was forged was holden to be a competent witness to prove the forgery. (R. v. Wait, 1 Bing. 121; R. & R. C. C. 505, S. C.) In R. v. Fauntleroy, a lady who had been a holder of stock in the public funds which had been sold out under a power of attorney in which her name was forged, became a competent witness to prove the forgery, on proof that the stock had been replaced in her name, and on production of a release for the dividends thereon (from the time it was sold out) executed by her to the Bank of England, who were the prosecutors, and her legal claim against whom would have been destroyed had the instrument proved genuine. The prisoner was convicted and executed. (R. v. Fauntleroy, 2 Bing. 413; 1 C. & P. 421, S. C.)

Interest.

Witness laying a wager.

Lord Raymond, in Rex v. Fox, (1 Str. 652), admitted the prosecutor to be a witness on an indictment for an assault, although he had laid a wager that he should convict the defendant; and the reason seems to be, not because the witness had made the wager at a time when public justice became interested in his testimony, but because it would be against public policy to allow a witness, by any such gratuitous act, to exclude himself from giving evidence. In addition to this it may be observed, that the wager would now probably be considered absolutely void, on a principle of public policy, as tending to produce an improper bias on the mind of the witness, and therefore as directly prejudicial to the administration of justice. (1 Phill. Ev. 139, 7 ed.; and see Humphreys v. Miller, 4 C. & P. 7).

Witness from necessity.

In many criminal cases, from the extreme necessity of the thing, interested persons are allowed as witnesses. As, where the owner prosecutes an indictment of felony for stolen goods, he is concerned in interest, for he will be entitled to restitution, and yet his evidence is admitted; so, on removing an indictment by certiorari from the sessions to the K. B., though the prosecutor in that case, if the defendant be convicted, is entitled to his costs, yet he is allowed as a witness. (Q. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 193; see Stark. Evid. Part IV. 753). It is the constant practice, on an indictment for robbery, to admit the evidence of the person who has been robbed. (1 Phill. Evid. 140). And the same evidence is admitted in prosecutions for a cheat; (Parris's case, 1 Ventr.

42; 2 Sid. 431, S. C.); or for perjury. (Rex v. Broughton, 2 Stra. 1230). And in a civil case, in an action for toll claimed on a public road, persons who have refused to pay toll are of necessity competent to give evidence, notwithstanding their interest in the result of the cause. (Lancum v. Lovell, 9 Bing. 465; 2 M. & Scott, 843. See Middleton v. Frost, 4 C. & P. 16).

2. Witnesses' competency.

But upon an indictment founded on the statutes of forcible entry, whereby justices are empowered to give restitution of the possession of the lands entered upon by force, or holden by force, to the respective tenants thereof, the tenant whose land has been entered upon or withholden by force is not a competent witness. (Rex v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 549; and Rex v. Beavan, Ry. & M. C. N. P. 242).

In forcible entry.

Persons who become interested in the common course of business, and who alone can possibly have knowledge of a fact, may be called as witnesses to prove it. Thus persons who have been agents employed to pay money may prove such payment. So an agent may prove the terms of a contract, though he be to derive a profit from it; and this upon the ground of necessity. If such evidence were not admitted, the facts would be incapable of proof. (Bull. N. P. 289; Dixon v. Cooper, 3 Wils. 40; B. N. P. 289; 1 Phill. 129; and see as to a surety of collector of rates, Middleton v. Frost, 4 C. & P. 16). But though agents and brokers are competent to prove a sale or contract, they are not competent to prove the contract properly executed in an action against the principal for their negligence. (Gevers v. Mainwaring, Holt, C. N. P. 139; M'Braine v. Fortune, 3 Camp. 317; and see 1 Phill. Evid. 130. 56, 7 ed.; Edmonds v. Lowe, 8 B. & Cres, 408).

Agents, &c.

In general, a person entitled to a reward upon the conviction of the defendant, is not thereby rendered incompetent to give evidence against him, (Rex v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 193), whether the reward be given by statute, by proclamation, or by a private person. (1 Phill. Ev. 119, 127; and see Rex v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 556).

Person entitled to reward.

Informer.]—By the common law, informers, who are entitled under penal statutes to part of a penalty, are not competent witnesses. (Rex v. Tilly, 1 Str. 115; 1 Phill. Evid. 125, 7 ed., and authorities there cited). But by the particular provisions or policy of several acts of Parliament, they may be admitted. Where a statute can receive no execution unless a party interested be a witness, there he must be allowed, says Gilbert, C. B.; for the statute must not be rendered ineffectual by the impossibility of proof. (1 Phill. Evid. 125). Thus, by stat. 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 8, against bribery at elections, the legislature, in giving an indemnity and discharge to any person offending against the act who shall discover any other offender so that he may be committed, must also have intended that he should be competent to give evidence at the trial; and therefore in an action for penalties he has been admitted. (Bush v. Ralling, Say. 289; Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 425; Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 182; 1 Phill. Evid. 118). And where the reward or penalty is not recoverable on the indictment itself, but only by a distinct suit; then, as the conviction will not be evidence in such suit, the testimony of the party entitled to the penalty, &c. will on this ground also be admissible. Thus, on a prosecution for penalties under stat. 9 Anne, c. 14, s. 5, the loser of money at cards may prove his loss. (Rex v. Luckup, Willes, 425, n. c; 1 Phill. Evid. 126; and see Rex v. Williams, 9 B. & Cres. 557; and post, "Gaming," Vol. III.) There are also various other similar provisions, which will be found collected under different titles of offences in this work.

Informer.

In prosecutions for all offences punishable on summary conviction under the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 39, s. 64, the evidence of the party aggrieved is admissible.

If it be a matter of discretion in the court whether it will inflict a penalty, the witness would not, it seems, be incompetent, though he should be entitled to a moiety of the penalty when inflicted. (See Rex v. Cole, 1 Esp. Rep. 217; Peake Rep. 217; S. C.; sed vid. Rex v. Blackmore, 1 Esp. Rep. 95).

2. Witnesses' competency.

Inhabitants.

Inhabitants.]—Inhabitants of a county, or other district, are competent witnesses to charge their own county or parish, but not vice versâ. (Rex v. St. Lawrence, 1 Burr. 588). Accordingly it has been held that a party who was liable to a county tax for the support of the suit was incomprehensible. (Shropshire v. Staffordshire, 1 Sid. 192). So, in settlement cases, a rated inhabitant formerly was incompetent to give evidence for his own parish as to the pauper's place of settlement. (Rex v. Prosser, 4 T. R. 19; and see Rex v. South Lynn, 5 T. R. 664; Rex v. Kirdford, 2 East, 561).

But by stat. 54 Geo. III. c. 170, s. 9, the competency of an inhabitant in these matters is established; and that act enacts "that no inhabitant or person rated or liable to be rated to any rates or cesses of any district, parish, township, or hamlet, or wholly or in part maintained or supported thereby, or executing or holding any office thereof or therein, shall, before any court or person or persons whatsoever, be deemed and taken to be by reason thereof an incompetent witness for or against such district, parish, township, or hamlet, in any matter relating to such rates or cesses; or to the boundary between such district, parish, township, or hamlet, and any adjoining district, parish, township, or hamlet: or to any order of removal to or from such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or the settlement of any pauper in such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or touching any bastards chargeable or likely to become chargeable to such district, parish, township, or hamlet; or the recovery of any sum or sums for the charges or maintenance of such bastards; or the election or appointment of any officer or officers, or the allowance of the accounts of any officer or officers, of any such district, parish, township, or hamlet; any law, usage, statute, or custom to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

The cases which have arisen on the construction of this statute are numerous and conflicting. By the early authorities it was expounded liberally. Afterwards its effect was narrowed; and it will be seen that the late cases have returned to the old construction.

Thus, in an action of trespass against the overseers of a township, where the principal point was, whether the lands in question were vested in the overseers under a local act of Parliament, the Court of Exchequer determined that under this act a rated inhabitant of the township was a competent witness on the part of the defendants, although the land in question, if vested in the defendants, would be vested in trust for the township, and in aid of the poor-rates. (Meredith v. Gilpin, 6 Price, 146). And it was held, that on an indictment for the non-repair of a road or bridge, on a liability ratione tenuræ, parishioners were held, under its provisions, admissible witnesses for the prosecution. (R. v. Hayman, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 401).

But in the case of R. v. Wandsworth, (1 Bl. & Al. 66), though the question of competency arose only incidentally, and the point was not discussed, the inhabitants of a parish indicted for not repairing were considered incompetent witnesses for the defence; and it was subsequently so decided in R. v. Bishop Auckland. (1 Adol. & E. 745).

In Ozenden v. Palmer, (2 B. & Adol. 236), (on the authority of which case that of R. v. Bishop Auckland was decided), a rate payer within a parish was held incompetent to prove the affirmative of an issue, whether there was a custom in that parish that persons whose duty it was to amend the highways in the parish should have the right of taking certain materials from a close of the plaintiff. In that case, much doubt was thrown on the law of Meredith v. Gilpin, and Lord Tenterden, in giving the judgment of the court, said, "On consideration, we entertain great doubts whether that case was properly decided, and whether even there the matter could properly be said to concern the poor-rate, within the meaning of the act of Parliament. The great object of that act was the poor. Their maintenance and regulation was the matter principally in view of the legislature." And though the words of the ninth section are more comprehensive than those of the preamble, still it was held that at any rate the question in Oxenden v. Palmer did not strictly and properly relate to rates or cesses of the parish within the meaning of the act, and that unless it did so the witnesses were incompetent.

2. Witnesses' competency.

These and the rest of the authorities upon the point underwent considerable discussion in the late cases of Doe d. Baultbee v. Adderley, and Doe d. Batchelor v. Bowles, (8 Ad. & E. 502). And Lord Denman, in delivering the judgment of the court in those cases, says, "We do not feel it necessary to enter upon the discussion of the numerous and conflicting cases which have arisen on the construction of the 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, s. 9. We content ourselves with saying, that the case of Meredith v. Gilpin appears to us to be well decided, and that, on consideration, we cannot agree with Oxenden v. Palmer, and the decisions to which it has given birth." So, under this statute, a person who occupied rateable property within a chapelry was held a competent witness to prove that a certain messuage was within the chapelry. (Marsden v. Stanfield, 7 B. & C. 815). So the statute was held to render inhabitants competent in an action by the surveyor of highways against his predecessor for penalties (a), per Lord Tenterden, in Heudebourck v. Langton, (M. & M. 402, n.). And on the authority of this case, Tindal, C. J., held, that rated parishioners were admissible to prove a liability ratione tenuræ. (R. v. Hayman, Mo. & Mal. 401).

On the other hand it was ruled, that, in an action against an overseer, for medical attendance on a pauper, a rated inhabitant, who had sanctioned the defence of the action, was not rendered competent for the overseer by the above statute. (Tothill v. Hooper, 1 Moo. & Rob. 392). So, an overseer was not competent to give evidence for his parish, on the trial of an appeal against an order of removal. (Reg. v. Recorder of Bath, 9 Ad. & E 714; 1 Per. & D. 469). So on an issue, to try the validity of a modus within a certain district, an occupier of lands within the district was incompetent to prove such modus. (Stewart v. Barnes, 1 M. & Rob. 472; and see Oxenden v. Palmer above cited, and R. v. Auckland, 1 Ad. & E. 744). But now, by the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 26, [3d July, 1840], intitled, "An Act to remove doubts as to the competency of persons, being rated inhabitants of any parish, to give evidence in certain cases;" and reciting that it is expedient to remove all doubt whether persons are by law competent to give evidence in cases where they have been formerly held to be disqualified by the liability to pay parochial rates, it is enacted, that from and after the passing of this act no person called as a witness on any trial in any court whatever may and shall be disabled or prevented from giving evidence by reason only of such person being, as the inhabitant of any parish or township, rated or assessed or liable to be rated or assessed to the relief of the poor, or for and towards the maintenance of church, chapel, or highways, or for any other purpose whatever.

Persons not disqualified from giving evidence on account of being assessed to parochial rates.

2. "That no churchwarden, overseer, or other officer in and for any parish, township, or union, or any person rated or assessed or liable to be rated or assessed as aforesaid, shall be disabled or prevented from giving evidence on any trial, appeal, or other proceeding by reason only

Nominal parties on any trial not disabled from giving evidence.

(a) It was held, however, in the same case, reported in 10 B. & Cres. 546, that the surveyor could not maintain his action against the late surveyor for the balance remaining in his hands until his accounts have been settled and allowed or disallowed in the manner pointed out by the 13 Geo. III. c. 78, s. 48; see post, "Highways not Turnpike," Vol. III.

2. Witnesses' competency.

of his being a party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, or of his being liable to costs in respect thereof, when he shall be only a nominal party to such trial, appeal, or other proceeding, and shall be only liable to contribute to such costs in common with other the rate-payers of such parish, township, or union."

Under this last statute, an owner of lands within a parish is competent to give evidence on a prosecution against the parish for non-repair of a highway, though he be not a rated inhabitant, the lands being occupied by tenants who are rated for them. (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Doddington, 1 Ad. & E., N. S. 411).

Their declarations.

In R. v. Hardwicke, (11 East, 578), it was decided, in an appeal against the removal of a pauper, that the declarations of a rated inhabitant of either parish concerning the facts in issue are admissible in evidence—not only against himself, but also against the other rated inhabitants of his parish, on the ground that the rated inhabitants are the parties directly and immediately interested in the event of the proceeding, although the appeal is entered in the names of the parish officers. And it is not necessary to make such declarations evidence, that he should first be called as a witness and refuse to be examined. (R. v. Whitley Lower, 1 M. & Sel. 636). It is to be observed these decisions were before the passing of the 54 Geo. III. c. 170.

In the above case of R. v. Hardwicke, Bayley, J., said, "I do not think that in ordinary cases magistrates should give any weight to mere declarations of this kind; though there may be occasions when the declaration of such a party would have great weight, as if a person having gained a settlement by hiring and service were to become a lunatic, the master refuses to be examined, you may in that case give evidence of his declaration."

Non-repair of bridges.

By stat. 1 Anne, st. 1, c. 18, s. 13, the inhabitants of a county may be witnesses upon trial of indictments, for not repairing bridges, where the question is whether the county or a private person shall repair. Even before this act it was considered they were admissible. (R. v. Carpenter, 2 Show. 47; see also the case of R. v. Hayman, and Heudebourck v. Langton, ante, 436, 437; and title "Bridges," Vol. I.).

Actions against hundred.

In actions against the hundred for injuries occasioned by riots, &c. the inhabitants are made competent witnesses for plaintiff or defendant, by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 5. (Post, "Hundred," Vol. III.; 4 B. & C. 913; 7 D. & R. 385, S. C.).

Actions against churchwardens.

3 Will. 3, c 11

In actions against churchwardens or overseers of a parish for the recovery of money mispent by them, inhabitants of the parish, who do not receive alms or any gift out of the parochial collection, are made competent witnesses by stat. 3 Will. III. c. 11, s. 12. (See "Poor," Vol. IV.)

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50 Highway and turnpike act.

By the highway act (5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 50, s. 100), in all cases, whether of a criminal or civil nature, inhabitants, and treasurer's clerks, surveyors, collectors, and other officers appointed by virtue of the act, are rendered competent witnesses in all matters relative to the execution of that act. (See post, "Highways in General," Vol. III.)

3 Geo. 4, c. 126.
4 Geo. 4, c. 95.

A similar provision to the last will also be found in the 137th sect. of the 3 Geo. IV. c. 126, relative to turnpike roads. And by sect. 59, collectors are made competent witnesses; and by stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 95, s. 84, no person shall be deemed incompetent to give evidence by reason of being a trustee or commissioner, or a mortgagee or creditor of the tolls, or a farmer, lessee, or collector of such tolls, or a treasurer, or clerk, or surveyor, or other officer under such act. (See post, title "Highways Turnpike," Vol. III.)

27 Geo. 2, c. 29 Where penalty given to poor.

Formerly, where penalties were given to the use of the poor, for the benefit and exoneration of the parish or other place, the inhabitants were incompetent; but such incompetency is now removed where the penalty does not exceed 20*l.*, by stat. 27 Geo. III. c. 29, which enacts, that where pecuniary penalties, or parts thereof, are given to the poor, the inhabitant of any place may be a competent witness to prove an offence, though the place may be benefited by the conviction of the offender, provided the penalty does not exceed 20*l.* (See R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 177.)

2. Witnesses' competency.

Though the penalty exceed 20*l.*, if the witness paid no rates he would be competent. (R. v. Cottrell, 2 Chit. Rep. 487).

Statute empowering trustees, &c. to sue, &c. in name of clerk, &c.

Where trustees for public purposes are empowered by statute to sue in the name of their treasurer, a trustee is not a competent witness for the plaintiff in an action so brought. (Whitmore v. Wilks, M. & M. 214).

Competency of parish officer when parish officers sued in name of their clerk.

Where by a local act the directors and overseers of the poor were enabled to sue and be sued in the name of their clerk, it was held in an action against the clerk, on a contract made by the directors, that a director was thereby rendered a competent witness for the defence, like any other inhabitant. (Fletcher v. Greenwell, 1 C. M. & R. 755).

In an action brought by the vestry clerk of the parish of Saint Pancras, under a local act, wherein the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff was not vestry clerk:—one of the directors of the vestry was held a competent witness for the plaintiff. (M'Gahey v. Alsten, 2 Mee. & W. 206).

Co-defendants.

Co-defendants.]—In general one of several defendants standing jointly indicted is not a competent witness for his fellows; and this even though he has suffered judgment by default before their trial. (R. v. Lafone, 5 Esp. 155; sed vide 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 18). And in Worrall v. Jones, (7 Bing. 395), it was held that where a defendant, who has suffered judgment by default, waives the objection, and consents to be examined, and is called against his own interest, there is no ground for rejecting him. But where there is no case for the jury against one party, the court may in its discretion allow of his acquittal in any state of the trial before the reply, in order that he may be examined as a witness; (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 98); but he is not entitled to demand an acquittal until all the other evidence for the defendants is concluded. (Emmett v. Butler, 7 Taunt. 607; Wright v. Palin, R. & M. C. N. P. 128; Wynne v. Anderson, 3 C. & P. 596). Persons implicated but not joined as defendants are good witnesses, though their credit may be questioned. (See 1 Hale, 305; Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 375, 376).

In an action ex contractu, a defendant who has suffered judgment by default is not a competent witness for the plaintiff against other defendants who plead to the action. (Green v. Sutton, 2 M. & Rob. 269. See Brown v. Fox, 1 Phill. Evid. 78; Brown v. Brown, 4 Taunt. 752; Mant v. Mainwaring, 8 Taunt. 139).

Accomplices (a).

Accomplices.]—It hath been long settled that it is no exception against a witness that he hath confessed himself guilty of the same crime; for if no accomplices were to be admitted as witnesses, it would be generally impossible to find evidence to convict the greatest offenders. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 94; 1 Phill. Ev. 36, 37, 7 ed.) And even where an accomplice has been joined in the indictment, and before the case comes on it appears his evidence will be required, he may, on the application of the counsel for the prosecution, be acquitted for the purpose of being called as a witness. (R. v. Rowland, 1 R. & M. C. N. P. 401).

But though accomplices are received as witnesses, their testimony ought to be received by a jury with a sober degree of jealousy and precaution; for on their own confession they stand contaminated with guilt, and, in the hope of lessening their own infamy, will be often tempted to

(a) See "Approver," ante, Vol. I.; 1 Phill. Evid. 36, 37. It is not a matter of course to admit an accomplice as evidence, but a motion is made to the court by the counsel for the prosecution, which the court may grant or refuse, as in their discretion will best answer the purposes of justice.

2. Witnesses' competency.

throw as much guilt as possible upon the accused. They may also, in some cases, be entitled to rewards on the prisoner's conviction, and in all cases expect to earn a pardon: and as fear is usually their motive in giving evidence, the same feeling may tempt them to exaggerate their statement, for the purpose of destroying their former associate, and securing themselves against his vengeance. (See 1 Phill. Evid. 37, 7 ed.)

And it is generally considered necessary, in order to induce the jury to credit an accomplice's testimony, to give other circumstances confirmatory of at least some of the leading circumstances of his story, from which the jury may be able to presume that he has told the truth as to the rest. (See Rudd's case, Cowp. 336; Rex v. Birkett, Russ. & R. C. C. 251).

However, if the testimony of an accomplice be confirmed so far as his testimony relates to one prisoner, but is not confirmed with respect to another prisoner, the latter may be convicted on the testimony of the accomplice, if the jury deem him worthy of credit. (Rex v. Dawber and others, 3 Stark. R. 34, and n)

Confirmatory evidence.

The practice, therefore, is to advise the jury to regard the evidence of an accomplice only so far as he may be confirmed, in some part of his narrative, by unimpeachable testimony. It is not necessary that he should be confirmed in every circumstance which he details in evidence: for there would be no occasion to use him at all as a witness, if his narrative could be completely proved by other evidence free from all suspicion. Nor need it appear, from the confirmatory evidence, that he speaks truth with respect to all the prisoners, or with respect to the share which each had in the transaction. But if the jury are satisfied that he speaks truth in some material parts of his testimony, in which they see unimpeachable evidence brought to confirm him, that is a ground for them to believe that he also speaks truly in other parts and with regard to the other prisoners, as to whom there may be no confirmation. (By Thomson, B. in Rex v. Swallow and others, Reports of the Trials at York, Jan. 1813, on special commission, p. 3, 17, 50, 150, 165, 201; 1 Phill. Ev. 41, 42). But "the corroboration of an accomplice ought to be to some fact or facts, the truth or falsehood of which goes to prove or disprove the offence charged against the prisoner." (Per Patteson, J., in Rex v. Addis, 6 C. & P. 388; and see Rex v. Webb, 6 C. & P. 595).

If the jury find the prisoner guilty on the single testimony even of a credible accomplice, the court will sometimes recommend him to mercy. (1 Leach, 466; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 96; and see Rex v. Noakes, 5 C. & P. 326).

Incompetency from interest how removed

Incompetency from Interest how removed.]—Persons interested may in this, as in other cases, be made witnesses by a release; as the supposed obligor in a bond may be a witness when released by the obligee, (Dr. Dodd's case, 1 Leach, 155); or the acceptor of a bill when released by the holder. (Taylor's case, 1 Leach, 214; and see Rex v. Peacock, R. & R. C. C. 278: Rex v. Mott, id. 435).

Where the objection to the competency of a witness (such as an accommodation drawer of a bill) appears on the record, his competency is restored by his statement that he has a release, without producing it. (Lunniss v. Row, 2 Per. & D. 538).

A butcher sued three of the directors of a zoological society for goods supplied for the animals. For the defence, a witness was called to prove that the plaintiff was a shareholder in the society. The witness was himself a shareholder, and had been released by one of the defendants:—Held, that the witness was not competent, without being released by all the three defendants; but that he would be so, if released by all three defendants, without being released by the other shareholders. (Betts v. Jones, 9 Car. & P. 199).

A certificated bankrupt being examined on the voir dire, stated that he had a large landed property, and that he expected a considerable surplus, but that he had not released it: he then executed a deed of assignment of his surplus to one of his children, a daughter, and this was held to render him a competent witness, as it was a valid instrument, and transferred a legal right to the surplus, inasmuch as the Bankrupt Act did not provide for a reconveyance of land to the bankrupt. (Turner v. Preston, 4 Jur. 584, N. P. C.)

2. Witnesses' competency.

But a member of a corporation is not a competent witness to sustain the claim of the corporation, even though he release his interest in the subject-matter of the suit. (Doe ex dem. Mayor &c. of Stafford v. Tooth, 3 Launge & Jerv. 19). And in an action of trespass q. c. f. where the defendant pleaded a right of common in respect of the occupation of a messuage, it was held, that a release by the freeman to the corporation of all his rights as freeman did not render him a competent witness. (Godmanchester Bailiffs v. Phillips, 4 Ad. & E. 550).

And a witness, who originally signed the deed of the Liverpool Building Society, and obtained a share, by which he has no interest in its funds, is not rendered competent by exchanging the share for a salary from the society, and cancelling it by the authority of the society, or by releasing his claim on it for salary. (Bigby v. Walthen, 5 Dowl. P. C. 527).

Where a defendant executed a release to a witness, but before it was given to the witness it was handed to the counsel on the opposite side for his inspection; he objected to the form of it, and it was altered, and the defendant re-executed it: it was held, that it was sufficient, and did not require a new stamp. (Alten v. Farren, 5 C. & P. 513). So also where the name of a second witness was inserted at the trial, and the release was re-executed before it had been given to either witness. (Spicer v. Burgess, 1 C. M. & Ros. 129; 4 Tyr. 598, S. C.)

Removal of interest.

It is said, that if the party who calls a witness tender a release to him, and he refuse to accept it, he may notwithstanding be afterwards examined on the trial. (Goodtitle, Lessee of Fowler v. Welford, 1 Dougl. 139; Bent v. Baker, 3 T. R. 27; Peake's Evid. 174).

3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42.

By 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 42, s. 26, "If any witness be objected to as incompetent on the ground that the verdict or judgment in the action in which it shall be proposed to examine him would be admissible in evidence for or against him, such witness shall nevertheless be examined; but in that case a verdict or judgment in that action in favour of the party on whose behalf he shall have been examined, shall not be admissible in evidence for him, or any one claiming under him, nor shall a verdict or judgment against the party on whose behalf he shall have been examined, be admissible in evidence against him, or any one claiming under him;" and by sect. 27, "The name of every witness objected to as incompetent, on the ground that such verdict or judgment would be admissible in evidence for or against him, shall, at the trial, be indorsed on the record or document on which the trial shall be had, together with the name of the party on whose behalf he was examined, by some officer of the court, at the request of either party, and shall be afterwards entered on the record of the judgment; and such indorsement or entry shall be sufficient evidence that such witness was examined in any subsequent proceeding in which the verdict or judgment shall be offered in evidence."

This act, it will be observed, extends only to actions, and not to issues, out of a court of equity. (Stewart v. Barnes, 1 Mo. & R. 472). Several cases ruled at Nisi Prius shortly after the passing of this act tended to restrict its operation, but it has since been construed with greater liberality. The object was to supersede the necessity and save the expense of a release in the cases to which it applies; and the effect of the 26th sect. is to make the witness competent, where the only interest is that the verdict may be used for or against the witness. (2 M. & W. 421). Thus, in an action for negligent driving by defendant's servant, the servant is rendered competent for the defendant by this act without a release; for his only interest is, that the verdict may be evidence of the damages in an action by his master against him. (Yeomans v. Leigh, 2 M. & W. 419). So, where a defendant in trespass justifies as servant of A. B., A. B. is competent for him under this act. (Creevey v. Bowman, 1 Mo. & Rob. 496). So, in an action against the specific legatee of a chattel, which the plaintiff asserted belonged to him, and had been left with the testator only on trial, the executor of the latter is rendered a competent witness for the plaintiff; for his only interest in the event is, that if plaintiff gets the value from the defendant he cannot afterwards sue the witness for it. (Bowman v. Willis, 3 Bing. N. C. 66; and see Robinson v. Fereday, 8 Car. & P. 752; Pickles v. Hollings, 1 M. & Rob. 468). In an action against one of several joint contractors, the other contractors are competent witnesses for the defendant under this statute. (Russel v. Blake, 2 M. & G. 374; Poole v. Palmer, 9 M. & W. 71); overruling in effect the cases of Green v. Warburton, 2 M. & R. 105, and Stanley v. Jobson, Id. 103). But the statute does not operate when the witness has a definite interest independent of the use that may be made of the verdict, and capable of being enforced without it. Thus, in an action by a corporation to establish an exclusive right of common, a corporator is not by this act rendered competent; for the plaintiff's disfranchisement alone can make him a witness. (Godmanchester Bailiffs v. Phillips, 4 Ad. & E. 550). So, on an issue to try the validity of a district modus, an occupier of land within it is not made competent to prove it. (Stewart v. Barnes, 1 Mo. & R. 472; and see Steers v. Carwardine, 8 Car. & P. 570; Groom v. Bradley, 8 Car. & P. 500; Davies v. Morgan, 1 Beav. 405; Holden v. Hearn, Id. 445).

The calling of a witness, whose name is on the back of the indictment for the other side, to cross-examine him, is by no means of course. It is discretionary even in felony, but it is a discretion always exercised; and it seems that the same discretion may well be exercised in misdemeanor. (Reg. v. Vincent, 9 Car. & P. 91).

(3). Credibility of Witnesses.

(3). Credibility of witness.

Exceptions to the credit of a witness are such as do not at all disable him from being sworn, but merely affect the degree of belief which the jury will give to his evidence. (2 Hale, 276; Windam v. Chetwynd, 1 Burr. 414; 11 East, 209). In many cases a person may be credible where he is not competent, and competent where he is not credible. (Windham v. Chetwynd, 1 Burr. 417).

Who a credible witness.

Where, in acts of parliament directing convictions before justices, this word "credible" is introduced, it bears no precise or legal signification; but the magistrate is to judge, like the jury on a trial, how far the witness is sufficiently to be believed to warrant the conviction. (Windham v. Chetwynd, 1 Burr. 418; Peake's Evid. 124, &c.; 1 Chit. C. L. 589).

Who not so.

There may be a variety of circumstances which will shake the credit of a witness, arising from his interest, his integrity, good character, veracity, or knowledge of the facts he swears to. It would be of little or no utility to inquire minutely into these, and state who is or is not a credible witness, for that question must depend on the peculiar facts laid before the court and jury, and must be decided accordingly. We have, in the preceding inquiries, seen many instances where the credit of a witness may be shaken, notwithstanding his competency. (See also Arch. Crim. Pl. & Evid. 104).

Doubts as to credibility to be in favour of witness.

Where there is any doubt as to the competency or incompetency of a witness, the judges are more inclined to turn that doubt to a question of the witness's credibility. (See ante, 430).

Evidence not allowed to prove good character of witness when not attacked.

Where the character of a witness has not been attacked, no evidence can be admitted in support of it. (Bishop of Durham v. Blackett, 1 Camp. 207). But evidence of the conduct of deceased witnesses when it has been attacked may be received, to attach credit to their testimony, or to destroy its effect. (Wright ex d. Clymer v. Littler, infra, cited by Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.; Bishop of Durham v. Beaumont, 1 Camp. 210; Provis v. Reed, 3 M. & P. 4). On an indictment for an assault with intent to commit a rape, where the prosecutrix was cross-examined as to crimes committed by her several years before the alleged offence, it was considered evidence might be adduced to show that her character had since been good. (Rex v. Clarke, 2 Stark. N. P. 241; post, "Rape," Vol. V.)

3. Witnesses' credibility.

It often happens that the character of the subscribing witnesses to deeds and other written instruments is the subject of inquiry; and upon this point the following cases have occurred. If the subscribing witnesses to a will be dead, evidence given of what was said by one of them, being then in bed of the illness of which he died, thereby impeaching the validity of the will, inasmuch as he declared it was a forgery, was admitted, and afterwards decided to have been rightly admitted; such evidence being given, not to prove the forgery, but to impeach the credit of the subscribing witness. (Wright d. Clymer v. Littler, 3 Burr. 1244). And evidence of the character of the subscribing witnesses may be admitted, if an imputation be cast upon the will. (Doe d. Stephenson v. Walker, 3 Esp. 284). And upon the authority of the preceding case, evidence was admitted that the subscribing witness to a bond had in his last moments begged pardon of Heaven for having been concerned in forging it. (Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., in Aveson v. Lord Kinnaird, 6 East, 195, ante, 381). These decisions were upon the principle that, if the subscribing witness could have been produced upon the trial, to prove his handwriting, as he might have been cross-examined, so a party may prove his declaration of the fact, in contradiction to the presumption of a due execution of the bond, from the proof of his handwriting as a subscribing witness. (S. C.)

Subscribing witness.

It has been agreed that the evidence given by a witness at one trial cannot, in the ordinary course of justice, be made use of against a defendant on the death of such witness at another trial. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 12. See Melen v. Andrews, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 336).

Witness varying his evidence at different trials.

But it hath been admitted that, in order to show a variance in the evidence, a deposition taken by a witness before a justice of the peace may, at the prisoner's desire, be read at the trial, in order to take off the credit of the witness, by showing a variance between such depositions and the evidence given in court.

And for the same reason it seems agreed, that where a witness at one trial varies from his own evidence at another trial, in relation to the same matter, such variance may also be given in evidence to invalidate his testimony at the second trial (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 9; and see Rex v. Oldroyd, R. & R. C. C. 88, where it was considered the prosecutor had a right to call for and adduce such evidence).

But nothing shall be admitted as evidence of what was done at another trial till the record of that trial be produced.

When a witness in support of a prosecution has been examined in chief, and has not been asked in cross-examination, as to any declarations made by him, or acts done by him, to procure persons corruptly to give evidence in support of the prosecution, it is not competent to the party accused to examine witnesses in his defence to prove such declarations or acts, without first calling back such witness examined in chief, to be examined or cross-examined as to the fact whether he ever made such declarations or did such acts. (See The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 311).

Lord C. J. Abbott, in delivering the opinion of the judges in that case, said, "The usual practice is this: if it be intended to bring the credit of a witness into question, by proof of any thing that he may have said or declared touching the cause, the witness is first asked upon cross-examination whether or no he has said or declared that which is intended to be proved." (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 213).

Upon the question whether a witness being asked in cross-examination, if in conversation with C. D. he had not informed him "that he was to be one of the witnesses against the defendant," and being re-examined he stated what induced him to mention to C. D. what he had so told him, and the counsel further proposed to ask as to the whole conversation between him and C. D. so far only as related to his being one of the witnesses, the judges (eight against one, Best, J., diss.) were of opinion that the witness having fully and unambiguously explained his motive for so stating, the re-examination could not proceed to the extent sought; and a distinction was made between a conversation with a witness and a party to the suit or prosecution, where the declarations of the latter would be evidence against him, and a conversation with a third party would not. In the latter case, as the conversation of the witness could only become evidence, as it might affect his character and credit with respect to antecedent declarations, or the motives under which he made them, when once every thing which constituted the motive and inducement, and which might show the party's meaning, has been laid before the court, all beyond is irrelevant and incompetent. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 294, 298).

If a witness examined in chief on the part of the plaintiff, being asked whether he remembers a quarrel taking place between A. and B., answers that he has heard of a quarrel between them, but does not know the cause of it, and such witness is not asked, upon his cross-examination, whether he has or has not made a declaration stated in the question touching the cause of a quarrel, the counsel for the defendant cannot, in order to prove such witness's knowledge of the cause of the quarrel, afterwards examine a witness to prove that the other witness has made such a declaration to him touching the cause of such quarrel. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & B. 299).

In order to discredit a witness by proof of a contradictory statement, it is not enough to ask him generally whether he has ever made such a statement; but particulars must be specified to him. Angus v. Smith, 1 M. & M. C. N. P. 473; et per Tindal, C. J., S. C.):—"I understand the rule to be, that before you can contradict a witness, by showing he has at some other time said something inconsistent with his present evidence, you must ask him as to the time, place, and person involved in the supposed contradiction. It is not enough to ask him the general question, whether he has ever said so and so, because it may frequently happen that upon the general question he may not remember having so said, whereas when his attention is challenged to particular circumstances and occasions, he may recollect and explain what he has formerly said."

Where witness has before said or done something contrary to his evidence.

Where a witness swears to a particular fact, a letter written by him, contradicting in effect his testimony upon that fact, may be given in evidence to impeach his credit, the letter being first regularly proved. The witness stated that a certain school, of which he was usher, had been duly conducted as to morals: a letter was then offered in evidence on the other side, and received as such, formerly written by the witness, whilst usher, to a boy then at the school, containing much immoral matter. (De Sailly v. Morgan, 2 Esp. 692).

If a party wishes on the trial to impeach an adverse witness, by proof of his having used certain expressions, the witness must first be asked whether he used them. (Carpenter v. Wall, 3 Per. & D. 457; 11 Ad. & E. 803).

Where the witness's moral character is relevant to the issue, such expressions may be proved without the previous inquiry, if they tend merely to disgrace the witness, by showing that he has made unbecoming declarations; and even if they be of such a nature, the introductory question must not be dispensed with, if they tend likewise to contradict some part of the witness's evidence. (Ib.)

Party allowed to contradict his own

In Alexander v. Gibson, (2 Camp. 556), it was held, that where a witness is called and makes statements contrary to those which are expected witness, but not to discredit him generally.

3. Witnesses' credibility.

from him, the party calling him may prove the facts in question by other witnesses; but Lord Ellenborough thought that the whole of the witness's testimony must, in that case, be rejected. It is, however, now decided that where a party being surprised by a statement of his own witness, calls other witnesses to contradict him as to a particular fact, the whole of the testimony of the contradicted witness is not therefore to be repudiated. (Bradley v. Ricardo, 8 Bing. 57). But the witnesses can be called to contradict him on the fact to which he has deposed only if it be material to the issue, not if it be merely collateral (Friedlander v. London Assurance Company, 4 B. & Adol. 193).

And a party will not be permitted, by evidence, to throw general discredit on his own witness; for this would enable him to destroy the testimony of the witness if he spoke against him, and to make him a good witness if he spoke for him. (Bull. N. P. 297; Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & C. 749; Bradley v. Ricardo, 8 Bing. 57; Friedlander v. London Assurance Company, 4 B. & Adol. 193).

So where a witness gives on cross-examination unfavourable testimony to the party calling him, and on re-examination denies having given a different account of the matter so spoken to, the party calling him has no right to discredit him, by showing he had given such different account. Holdsworth v. Dartmouth (Mayor), 2 M. & Rob. 153; Reg. v. Farr, 8 Car. & P. 768).

But the counsel calling a witness who has given unfavourable evidence on cross-examination, may, on re-examination, ask him questions to show inducements to betray the party who has called him. (Dunn v. Aslett, 2 M. & Rob. 122).

And if a witness for the prosecution shows any unfair bias, the counsel who calls him may cross-examine him. (Reg. v. Chapman, 8 Car. & P. 558).

And if a witness for the prosecution disprove the prosecutor's case, he may call other witnesses to prove the facts denied by the former witness, and thus incidentally contradict that witness, and shew him to be unworthy of credit; but the prosecutor cannot adduce any evidence not otherwise admissible for the sole purpose of discrediting his own witness. (Reg. v. Ball, 8 Car. & P. 745).

The meaning of the rule is, that a party cannot prove his own witness to be of such a general bad character as would make him unworthy of credit. But if a witness suddenly, and without any previous intimation to the party calling him, give evidence against that party, another witness may be called to disprove the truth of that evidence. Therefore where the question was whether the defendant's servant who had been to sell a horse, had warranted him sound, he swore, on being called by the plaintiff, that he had not given any warranty; and Lord Ellenborough allowed the plaintiff to call another witness to prove, that at the time of the sale he had expressly warranted its soundness; There can be no rule of law, said Lord Ellenborough, by which the truth on such an occasion is to be shut out, and justice perverted. (Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Camp. 555; Lowe v. Joliffe, 1 W. Black. 365; Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & Cres. 749; 1 Phill. Evid. 7 ed. 309).

In R. v. Oldroyd (R. & R. C. C. 88), where the name of the prisoner's mother was on the back of the indictment, and on her being called by the judge as a witness for the prosecution, she gave evidence in favour of the prisoner, and differing from her deposition before the coroner, the judge allowed the deposition to be read to show that her testimony was not to be relied upon: and it was held he might do so. And in a late case at Nisi Prius, it was held, that where a witness gives evidence destructive of the case he is called upon to prove, the party calling him may, in order to neutralize his evidence, show that he had before the trial given the attorney an account of the transaction entirely different from that sworn to by him at the trial. (Per Lord Denman, C. J., diss. Bolland, B., Wright v. Beckett, 1 M. & R. 414; but see 1 Phill. Ev. 294; 2 Russ. 636).

3. Witnesses' credibility.

Witness's credit to be only impeached by general accounts of his character.

A witness's credit may be impeached only by general accounts of his character, and not by proofs of particular facts. (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 20; B. N. P. 296). Therefore if a witness, on being questioned whether he has not been guilty of a felony or of some infamous offence, deny the charge, the party against whom the witness has been called will not be allowed to prove the truth of the charge. (Rookwood's case, 4 St. Tr. 693; and see Sharpe v. Scoging, Holt's N. P. C. 541; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. N. P. C. 149).

Supporting credit by proof of witness having sworn to same facts.

It has been doubted whether, to corroborate the testimony of the witness whose credit has been impeached, evidence is admissible to prove that the witness affirmed the same thing before, on other occasions. (Gilb. Evid. 150; B. N. P. 294). Mr. Phillips lays it down that it is not admissible. (1 Phill. Evid. 293; citing De Sailly v. Morgan, 2 Esp. N. P. C. 691; Christian v. Coombe, 2 Esp. N. P. C 489).

Mere opinion as to credit not allowed.

The mere opinion of a party, unsupported by reasons and facts, as to his not believing a witness on his oath, is entitled to no consideration: when otherwise, see ante, 382. But it is not essential that witnesses who state that they would not believe another person on his oath, should have overheard such person give evidence upon oath; as the real question is whether the witnesses have such a knowledge of the person's character and conduct as enables them conscientiously to say that it is impossible to place any reliance on any statement that such person may make. (R. v. Bispham, 4 C. & P. 292, cor. Garrow, B.)

Witness cannot be asked an irrelevant question.

A witness cannot be cross-examined as to a fact wholly irrelevant to the matter in issue, if answered affirmatively, for the purpose of discrediting his testimony if he answered in the negative, by calling other witnesses to disprove what he said. (Spencely v. De Willott, 7 East, 108; 1 Phill. Evid. 272).

If the witness answer such an irrelevent question before it is disallowed or withdrawn, his answer is conclusive, and evidence cannot be afterwards admitted to contradict him. (Harris v. Tippet, 2 Camp. 638).

It would be an irrelevant question to inquire of a witness, in cross-examination, whether he had not attempted to dissuade another witness examined on the opposite side from being present at the trial. (Harris v. Tippet, 2 Camp. 637). And the rule laid down in this case seems particularly illustrated by the following case, which occurred at Monmouth Lent Ass. 1811. One Yewin was indicted for stealing wheat. The principal evidence against him was a boy of the name of Thomas, his apprentice. Lawrence, J., allowed the prisoner's sounsel to ask Thomas, in cross-examination, whether he had not been charged with robbing his master, and whether he had not afterwards said he would be revenged of him, and would soon fix him in Monmouth gaol. He denied both. The prisoner's counsel then proposed to prove that he had been charged with robbing his master, and had spoken the words imputed to him. Lawrence, J., ruled, that his answer must be taken as to the former; but that as the words were material to the guilt or innocence of the prisoner, evidence might be adduced that they were spoken by the witness. (Harris v. Tippet, 2 Camp. 638).

(4). How Witnesses compelled to attend.

(4). Compelling attendance of witnesses.

Having inquired as to the requisite number of witnesses, and as to who are competent and credible, so that the prosecutor and defendant may decide on what witnesses they should respectively call to attend the trial, we will now proceed to point out the mode of compelling such attendance.

Compulsory process.

The compulsory means to bring in witnesses are of two kinds. First, By process of subpœna issued in the king's name by the justices, or others, where the trial is to be, for disobedience to which the person served with the process is liable to an attachment. (R. v. Ring, 8 T. R.

585). Secondly, Which is the more ordinary and more effectual means (in criminal cases), the justices that take the examination of the person accused, and the information of the witnesses, may at that time, or at any time after and before the trial, bind over the witnesses to appear at the court where the trial is intended to be; and in case of their refusal to be bound over, may commit them for a contempt. (7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2, 3; 2 Hale, 282; Bennet and Wife v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1; 1 Phill. Ev. 8; et vide post, title "Examination," 467). And in case of their neglect to attend, in pursuance of the recognizance, such recognizance will be forfeited, and may be put in force. But not without a written order of the judge of the court. (7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 31. See "Recognizance," Vol. V.).

4. Witnesses, how compelled to attend.

Writs of subpœna issued by the clerk of the peace, or the clerk of assize, at assize, are compulsory only within the county where they are granted; and therefore, if the witness lives beyond its limits, application must be made to the Crown Office, from whence it may issue to any part of England. (Cro. C. C. 9, 21).

By the 45 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3, a writ of subpœna issued from any court of competent jurisdiction to compel the attendance of the witness will be equally valid if served in any part of the United Kingdom, and disobedience to it is punishable in the King's Bench. But this statute it seems does not alter the law relating to such subpœnas issued by the clerk of the peace, or the clerk of assize, the statute having been construed only to give to a subpœna having validity in England generally, equal validity in the other parts of the United Kingdom, viz. Ireland and Scotland, and vice versâ. (See R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598).

Before justices out of sessions.

In general, justices out of sessions have power to compel the attendance of material witnesses for the purpose of examining them, preparatory to committing for trial any person charged with an offence amounting to felony or misdemeanor, or suspicion thereof; for the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3, post, 468, which empowers them, in cases of felony or misdemeanor, or suspicion of felony or misdemeanor, to take the examinations on oath of those who know the facts, incidentally it seems gives them the power to enforce the attendance of such persons by summons and warrant. (Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1; Evans v. Rees, 12 Ad. & E. 55). But it is questionable whether they have such power in an offence of less degree created by statute, unless it is specially given by statute, which is usually the case, by the statute creating the offence, and which frequently imposes a penalty on the witness's refusal to attend. It is said, however, by Mr. Starkie, (Ev. 1, 86), that where magistrates are authorized by a statute to hear and determine, or to examine witnesses, they have, incidentally, authority to summon witnesses, and to take the examination on oath. (Lamb, 517; Dalton's J., c. 6). And the 15 Geo. III. c. 39, which empowers justices, in all cases where any penalty is directed to be levied, or distress to be made by any act of Parliament, to administer an oath or oaths to any person or persons, for the purpose of levying such penalties, or making such distresses respectively, might therefore perhaps be held to confer, incidentally, the power of enforcing the attendance of material witnesses in such cases; for it is a rule, quando lex aliquid alicui concedit, conceditur et id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest. (See Phill. Ev. 2, 384).

At sessions.

The 38 Geo. III. c. 52, s. 4, provides that the courts of oyer and terminer, and general gaol delivery, may issue process to compel the attendance of witnesses on a trial of an indictment found in the grand jury of the county, for offences committed in the county of a city or town corporate.

Practice as to subpœna.

The subpœna when sued out is to be regularly served on the witness; and as only four witnesses can be included in one writ of subpœna, several writs are frequently necessary. In order to save expense, it is settled that service of a ticket containing the substance of the writ will be as effectual as service of the writ itself. (Goodwin v. West, Cro. Car. 522). In such case, however, the writ ought to be shown. The writ or ticket should be served personally on the witness; (Smelt v. Witmill, 2 Stra. 1054); and in a reasonable time before the day of trial, that he may suffer the less inconvenience from the attendance on the court. (Hammond v. Stewart, 1 Stra. 509; 1 Phill. Evid. 4. See Tidd. 9 ed. 806.)

4. Witnesses, how compelled to attend.

The question as to whether a subpœna ad testificandum is served within a reasonable time, depends upon the circumstances of each particular case; therefore, where the defendant was served at twelve o'clock, while standing on the steps of the court-house, and was told the trial would come on the same day, which it did, at five o'clock, this service was sufficient. (Maunsell v. Ainsworth, 8 Dowl. P. C. 869).

A subpœna in court on the day of trial would do. Indeed, it has been considered that a person who is present in court, when called as a witness, is bound to be sworn, and to give his evidence in a criminal case, although he has not been subpœnaed. (R. v. Sadler, 4 C. & P. 218).

But service on a person living close to the place of service, at half-past eleven in the morning for a cause called on at two, was held not sufficient time. (Barber v. Wood, 2 M. & Rob. 172).

What is a reasonable time before the trial is matter for the court. (Id.).

Subpœna duces tecum.

If there be any papers in the witness's hands which it is desirable for the party to obtain, a special clause should be inserted in the writ called a duces tecum, by which he will be commanded to attend with the documents in question, and which he ought to obey, even where, from any confidential relation, the court will not, on his appearance, compel him to produce them. (Amey v. Long, 9 East, 485; 1 Camp. 14; 6 Esp. 116, S. C.; Fountain v. Young, 6 Esp. Rep. 115). What a witness is not bound to produce, see Doe d. Carter v. Jones, 2 M. & Rob. 47. The witness producing the papers under a subpœna duces tecum need not be sworn if the party by whom he is called does not wish to examine him. (Perry v. Gibson, 1 Adol. & E. 48; Somers v. Mosely, id.; and see Davis v. Dull, 1 M. & M. 514; Simpson v. Smith, 1 Stark. Evid. 161). And if sworn by mistake, this does not give the opposite party a right to cross-examine. (Rush v. Smith, 1 Cr. M. & Ros. 94). It is no excuse that the legal custody of the instrument belongs to another, if it be in the actual possession of the witness. (Amey v. Long, 1 Camp. 14, 180, n.; 6 Esp. 116, S. C.; Corsen v. Dubois, Holt, C. N. P. 239). If the witness, instead of bringing the papers &c. required, deliver them to the opposite party, by whom they are withheld, the court will allow secondary evidence of the contents of them to be given, without a notice to produce the originals. (Leeds v. Cook, 4 Esp. 256; see R. v. Hunter, 4 C. & P. 128).

How to obtain subpœna

The subpœna may be obtained from the Crown Office, or from the clerk of the peace, or clerk of assize of the court in which the defendant is to be tried. It is usual and best to obtain it from the Crown Office when the witness is unlikely to attend, as the remedy for disobedience to it (viz. by attachment) is less dilatory and expensive. (See R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598).

The name of the witness, though not in the original subpœna, may be inserted therein at any time, if he has been regularly served with a copy. (Per Gibbs, C. J., Wakefield v. Gall, Holt, C. N. P. 526).

Witness a prisoner.

Where a witness is a prisoner in execution for debt, he must be brought up by habeas corpus ad testificandum to give his evidence (1 Phil. Evid. 5); and so where he is confined on board a ship. (R. v. Burbage, 3 Burr. 1440; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 72). An affidavit of his being a material witness, and willing to attend, must be made to obtain this writ; as to the form of which, and making the application for it, see 1 Chit. C. L. 611; Tidd's Pract. 9th ed. 809; post, "Habeas Corpus," Vol. II.

4. Witnesses, how compelled to attend.

When a witness resides abroad, or is about to leave the country before trial, he may, by the consent of both parties, be examined on interrogatories: in the former case, before commissioners approved by both of them; and in the latter before a judge in chambers. (See 1 Chit. C. L. 612). In proceedings for offences alleged to have been committed in the East or West Indies by persons holding official situations there, witnesses may be examined before the magistrates there on writs of mandamus, 13 Geo. III. c. 63; 42 Geo. III. c. 85, ss. 2, 3. Where a party, in a case where consent is requisite, refuses to grant it, the court will put off the trial, to give time for the attendance of the witnesses. (Mostyn v. Fabrigas, 1 Cowp. 174; Tidd, 9th ed. 813).

Witness abroad.

In criminal proceedings, the only effectual punishment, and mode of securing the future attendance (if the trial has not been had) of the witness, is by attachment for the contempt of the court from which the process was originally awarded, or by indictment. (R. v. Ring, 8 T. R. 585; Hammond v. Stewart, 1 Stra. 510; 1 Chit. C. L. 614).

Punishment for non-attendance.

It is not settled whether magistrates, at sessions, &c. have authority to issue an attachment (a); and the usual way of punishment in such a case is by indictment or proceeding on the recognizance, if there was one.

Power of Justices to issue attachment.

When the subpœna has not been issued out of the Crown Office, the Court of Queen's Bench has no power to punish the witness for disobedience, either by attachment or otherwise, either by its general authority, or by virtue of the 45 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 3. (R. v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598).

Power of Queen's Bench.

It seems that the court will not grant an attachment if the witness was not regularly called, upon his subpœna, on the case being called on; (R. v. Sketch, 3 Ad. & Ell. 503; 3 Dowl. P. C. 368; 1 Har. & W. 123); but from what fell from the court in Barrow v. Humphreys, (3 B. & Ald. 598), that the witness would be guilty of a contempt, whether the case were called on or not, though the point was not decided.

Cause must be called on.

The application for the attachment must be made without delay, and in general in the term next after the disobedience of the subpœna. Where a witness was subpœnaed to give evidence on an indictment, tried December 11th, and made default, it was held that it was too late to move for an attachment in Easter term following. (R. v. Sketch, 3 Ad. & Ell. 503).

Time of application for attachment.

The court will not grant, it seems, an attachment unless the subpœna was personally served, and sufficient expenses tendered, if the witness were so poor he could not attend without them. (See 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 173; see 45 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 4, and see Newton v. Harland, 1 M. & G. 956; 9 Dowl. 16). Nor will the court grant an attachment where the form of the writ is irregular. (Vaughton v. Brine, 9 Dowl. 179). It seems, however, that a witness who attends on a criminal prosecution is not entitled to have his expenses paid before giving his evidence. (R. v. Cooke, 1 C. & P. 321; ante, "Costs." See Tidd. 9th ed. 806).

Service of subpœna.

Expenses of witness.

The witness, if taken upon an attachment for his contempt, may, if the trial of the defendant has not taken place, be detained till he has given evidence on the trial, and then he may be set at liberty. (Id. n. a.).

Detention of witness under the attachment.

An indictment would lie for conspiring to prevent the attendance of a witness. (R. v. Steventon, 2 East, 364).

Conspiring to prevent attendance of witness.

As to the consequences of not attending on civil proceedings, see Tidd, 9th ed. 807, 8; 5 Eliz. c. 9, s. 12.

By stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 140, after reciting that "writs of habeas

43 Geo. III. c. 140.

(a) From the case of Rex v. Clement, (4 B. & Al. 218), it would seem that the sessions may fine the party, though absent, for the contempt.

5. Witnesses, examination of.

Judges of superior courts may award a habeas corpus for bringing up prisoners for examination before courts-martial, &c.

corpus have been frequently awarded by the judges of H. M.'s courts of record at Westminster, for bringing persons detained in custody under civil or criminal process before magistrates or courts of record, as well for trial as for examination, touching matters depending before such magistrates or courts respectively; but doubts have arisen whether such judges have power to award writs of habeas corpus for bringing persons detained as aforesaid before courts-martial, commissioners of bankrupts, commissioners for auditing the public accounts, or other commissioners acting under commission or warrant from H. M.; and whereas it is expedient to make provision for bringing prisoners before such courts-martial or commissioners for the purposes hereinbefore mentioned," enacts, that any judge of the courts at Westminster may award a writ of habeas corpus to bring any prisoner, in any gaol in England, before a court-martial, commissioners of bankrupt, commissioners for auditing the public accounts, or other commissioners acting by virtue of any commission or warrant from H. M.; in like manner as they award such writs to bring persons detained in gaol before magistrates, or courts of record. The application for a habeas under this act should be made to a judge out of court. (Gordon's case, 2 M. & Sel. 582; Tidd, 9th ed. 809).

44 Geo. III. c. 102. Judges of the superior courts may award habeas corpus for bringing prisoners before courts of record to be examined as witnesses.

By stat. 44 Geo. III. c. 102, any judge of the courts of Q. B. or C. P. of England and Ireland respectively, or any baron of the Court of Exchequer of the degree of the coif in England, or any justice of O. and T. or gaol delivery, being such judge or baron as aforesaid, may, at his discretion, award a writ of habeas corpus for bringing any prisoner detained in any gaol or prison before any of the said courts, or any sitting of Nisi Prius, or before any other court of record, to be there examined as a witness, and to testify the truth before such courts, or any other grand, petit, or other jury, in any causes or matters, civil or criminal, whatsoever, which now are or hereafter shall be depending or to be inquired into or determined in any of the said courts. (See Tidd, 9th ed. 809, 810).

And see the 45 Geo. III. c. 92, ss. 3, 4, for compelling the attendance of witnesses to give evidence in criminal prosecutions in every part of the United Kingdom. (See Rex v. Brownell, 1 Ad. & Ell. 598).

In Exp. Griffiths, (5 B. & Al. 730), the court of K. B. granted a mandamus to the warden of the Fleet to take the body of a debtor confined there before a magistrate, to be examined from time to time respecting a charge of felony or misdemeanor.

(5.) The Examination of Witnesses.

Who to begin.

Who to begin.]—He who affirms the matter in issue, whether prosecutor or defendant, ought to begin to give evidence. (Co. Lit. 36).

Examination on the voir dire.

Examination on voir dire.]—Previous to admitting a witness to be sworn, it is often necessary to examine him upon what is termed the voir dire (a); which is done for the purpose of ascertaining whether there be any objection in law to his being admitted as a witness upon the case before the court; and it has been said that a party who is cognizant of the interest of the witness at the time when he is called, is bound to make his objection in the first instance. (Turner v. Pearte, 1 T. R. 720; 2 Stark. Evid. 757). See ante, 422.

And where a witness had been examined as to the merits of the case, and had left the box, and was then recalled and examined as to his interest in the event of the suit, when it appeared that he was interested;

(a) Voir dire, veritatem dicere, is when it is prayed upon a trial at law that a witness be sworn, that he shall true answer make to all such questions as the court shall demand of him. (3 Black. Com. 332.

an objection then taken to his competency was held to be too late. (Fellingham v. Sparrow, 9 Dowl. P. C. 141. And see Hartshorne v. Watson, 7 Scott, 494; 5 Bing. N. C. 479). And if the objection on the score of interest be not taken previous to the examination in chief, the witness cannot be cross-examined as to the contents of a written paper not produced, which might have been done had the objection been taken in the first instance. (Howell v. Lock, 2 Camp. 14).

5. Witnesses, examination of.

How conducted.

Where the witness himself is examined on the voir dire, he may be asked as to the contents of a written instrument, without a notice to produce, or without producing it, though, if the witness produces the instrument on which the objection is founded, it ought to be read. (Butler v. Carver, 2 Stark. R. 434). Accordingly, in the case of Rex v. Gisburn, (15 East, 57), on a question of settlement, when the point for the consideration of the Court of King's Bench was, whether a witness, who, after having admitted on his examination upon the voir dire that he was the occupier of a cottage in the appellant township of the annual value of 25*s.*, but that he had never been charged with or paid any public rate or tax in that township, could be examined without producing the rate to show that he was not rated; the court held that the witness was competent upon the voir dire, that what he answered must be taken for better for worse, and that if he should answer falsely he might be indicted for perjury.

So also it is a rule, that when the objection to the competency of a witness arises from his answer to a question on the voir dire, he may in the same way do away with the objection, and restore his competency by parol: but if the fact appears in any other way, as if the witness is proved by other evidence to have been a bankrupt, in such case it is necessary to answer the objection by the best evidence, that is, by production of the certificate itself. (By Ld. Kenyon in Botham v. Swingler, 1 Esp. 164: The Butchers' Company v. Jones, 1 Esp. 162, S. P.: Goodhay v. Hendry M. & M. 310).

A member of a corporation stated on the voir dire that he had been a freeman, but had resigned, and been disfranchised at a corporate meeting; the defendant was allowed on the voir dire to cross-examine him as to the number of persons present at the meeting, in order to ascertain whether it had been a regular meeting. (Godmanchester (Bailiffs) v. Phillips, 4 Ad. & El. 550). In the same case the witness, on being asked, on the voir dire, how many assistants (who formed a constituent part of the meeting) were present, and having answered, that a book then in Court would show, reference was permitted to be made to the book to ascertain what number was present. (Ib.)

Examination on oath.

Examination on Oath.]—In general no one can be examined as a witness in any criminal proceeding except upon oath; (1 Leach, 110; Rex v. Taylor, Peake, 11 a; 7 Chit. C. L. 615); and a peer is within this rule. (3 Keb. 61; Rex v. Lord Preston, 1 Salk. 278; post, "Peers," Vol. V.) A witness brought into court merely for the purpose of producing a document need not be sworn. (Perry v. Gibson, 1 Ad. & Ell. 48; Somers v. Moseley, Ib. n.; 1 Phill. Evid. 216; Roscoe, 75; Rex v. Brooke, 2 Stark. 472; Davis v. Dale, 4 C. & P. 335; 1 M. & M. 514, S. C.

But when the grand jury have found a bill, the judge before whom the case comes to be tried ought not to inquire whether the witnesses were properly sworn previously to their going before the grand jury, and it seems that an improper mode of swearing them will not vitiate the indictment, as the grand jury are at liberty to find a bill upon their own knowledge merely. (Reg. v. Russell, 1 Car. & M. 247).

Form of oath.

The oath usually administered to a witness is called a corporal oath. (3 Inst. 165; post, "Oaths," Vol. V.) The form used at the assizes or sessions is for the clerk of arraigns or of the peace to desire the witness to take the book in his hand, and when that is done, to say to him, "The evidence you shall give between our sovereign Lady the Queen and the prisoner at the bar shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth; so help you God:" upon which the witness kisses the book, and thereby appeals to Heaven for the truth of what he is about to disclose. (2 Hale, 279; 1 Chit, C. L. 616). See post, tit. "Examinations," Forms, No. I.)

5. Witnesses, examination of.

But it is not absolutely necessary to use this form if the witness has a conscientious objection to the mode, or professes a religion which binds him by a different obligation. Thus Jews are sworn on the writings of Moses. (Robeley v. Langston, 2 Keb. 314; Gomez Serra v. Munez, 2 Stra. 821). Mahometans are sworn on the Koran; and persons of other religions according to the form prescribed for that purpose by the religion they profess. (B. N. P. 292). Christians are sworn with their hats off—Jews with their hats on. At the O. B. Dec. Sess. 1804, Erpune, a native of China, being examined as a witness before Graham, B., on an indictment against Ann Alsley and Thomas Gunn for felony, was sworn according to the form of courts of China, viz. by holding a saucer in his hand, which he dashed to pieces at the conclusion of the oath, believing, as he stated, that God would cause his body to be cracked, as he cracked that saucer, if he did not tell the truth. (Sess. Pap. 1804 and 1805, p. 62; Peake, Evid. 138, n., 5th ed.; Reg. v. Entrehonan and Samut, 1 Car. & P. 248). In like manner a Scotch covenanter has been permitted to swear by holding up his hand. (Mildrone's case, 1 Leach, 412). For oaths are to be administered to all persons according to their own opinions, and as it most affects their consciences.

A witness may be asked, after he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he has taken obligatory upon his conscience; but if he answer in the affirmative, his answer is conclusive, and he cannot further be asked whether there be any other mode of swearing more binding upon his conscience than that which has been used. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 284). The more correct and proper way, however, is, to ask the witness before he is sworn, whether he considers the oath he is about to take obligatory upon his conscience. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 284). It is no objection after trial that a Jew was sworn upon the gospel. (Sells v. Hoare, 3 Brod. & B. 232; 7 Moore, 36, S. C.) And as to what questions may be put to a witness respecting his religious principles, see ante, 423.

Affirmation of Quakers, Moravians, &c

Formerly a Quaker was not allowed to give in his evidence on his affirmation, nor was a Moravian on his declaration; but now, by the stat. 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 1, a Quaker or Moravian required to give evidence in a criminal case may, instead of taking an oath in the usual form, be permitted to take a solemn affirmation or declaration in these words: "I, A. B., do solemnly, sincerely, and truly declare and affirm," which has the same force and effect in all courts of justice and other places where by the law an oath is required, as if such Quaker or Moravian had taken an oath in the usual form. And if any person making such affirmation or declaration shall be convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed or declared any matter or thing which, if the same had been sworn in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every such offender shall be subject to the same pains, penalties, and forfeitures, to which persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject.

By 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 82, Separatists may make an affirmation. (See title "Oath," Vol. V.)

Presence of prisoner and witnesses.

Presence of Prisoner and Witnesses.]—The witness must deliver in his evidence in the presence of the prisoner, (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 1; Bac. Ab. Evid. E; R. v. Crowther, 1 T. R. 125; R. v. Thompson, 2 T. R. 18), especially on trials affecting the prisoner's life. (Ib.)

Before the examination commences, the crown may demand that the witnesses should retire, in order that each may be questioned in the absence of the others. (Fost. 47; Bac. Ab. Evid. E). And the same order will be made on the request of the defendant, but as a matter of indulgence and not of right. (4 Harg. St. Tr. 754; R. v. Vaughan, Holt, 689). It seems questionable whether the court can in either case compel the witness to retire. (Talf. Dick. Sess. 377). By the uniform practice of all courts, the attorneys on both sides, whose presence is necessary to the conduct of the case or defence, are exempted from the general rule. (See Everett v. Lowdham, 5 C. & P. 91). And it is usual and reasonable to extend the same indulgence to witnesses who are merely to prove matters of form, to medical witnesses, and witnesses of character. (Ib.)

In Attorney-General v. Bulpit, (9 Price, 4), it was laid down as an inflexible rule of the Court of Exchequer, that a witness who remains in court after an order for the witnesses on both sides to withdraw, cannot be examined. And in a very late case it was said by Park, J., that in a criminal case he would always reject such a witness. (R. v. Wyld, 6 C. & P. 380; but see Beamon v. Ellice, 4 C. & P. 585).

Who may examine

Who may examine.]—The witness may be examined by the counsel for the party calling him; or, if none be retained, by the judge or presiding magistrate, who may even recall a witness at any stage of the inquiry before the verdict or conviction. (See R. v. Remnant, R. & R. C. C. 136).

It is usual for only one counsel to examine the same witness; but where the junior counsel is embarrassed in his examination, his leader may step in to his assistance, and proceed in questioning the witness. (Doe v. Roe, 2 Camp. 280).

The prisoner himself may examine or cross-examine the witnesses.

If an improper question be put, the counsel on the other side should immediately interpose, and object to it. If a witness be asked whether a certain representation was made, the opposite counsel may interpose, and ask him whether the representation in question were by parol or in writing; and if the latter, the writing must be produced. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 292).

Deaf and dumb witness.

Deaf and Dumb Witness.]—We have already seen when such a witness may be sworn, ante, 422. Though the mode of examining a deaf and dumb witness by means of signs made with the fingers is a mode receivable even in capital cases, yet when the witness can write, it seems it would be better to make him write his answers to the questions put to him. (Morrison v. Lennard, 3 C. & P. 127; per Best, C. J.)

What questions should be put.

Questions to be put.]—The rules before laid down as to what should be proved, and the degree and kind of proof that should be adduced, will show what questions should in general be put to the witness. If the probable answer to the question would be matter not legally admissible in evidence, such question should be objected to by the opposite party.

Leading questions.

Leading Questions.]—On the examination in chief, the counsel will not be allowed to ask leading questions, that is, such as from their nature instruct the witness what he is to say in reply. (Peake's Evid. 206; 1 Phill. Ev. 268, 7th ed.) But, at the same time, he must state his question in so forcible a way, that it may be perfectly understood, and no material circumstance omitted. And if the witness appears desirous of concealing the truth in order to favour the defendant, or stands in a situation which makes him of necessity adverse to the party calling him, the court will allow a latitude bordering on cross-examination to the prosecutor's counsel. (1 Phill. Evid. 269, 7th ed.; Clarke v. Saffery, R. & M., N. P. C. 126). So, in the examination of a witness to contradict the testimony of another, leading questions may be allowed, as whether a written instrument contained certain matter; because otherwise it would be difficult to bring them to any direct contradiction.

5. Witnesses, examination of.

(Courtecn v. Touse, 1 Camp. 44. See Edmonds v. Walter, 3 Stark. N. P. C. 8).

Questions to which the answer yes or no would not be conclusive are not in general objectionable. Thus, a witness called to prove that A. and B. are partners, may be asked whether A. has interfered in the business of B. (Nicholls v. Dowding, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 81). For though he may have interfered, he may not be a partner. (And see Acerro v. Petroni, 1 Stark. 100; R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 128). To identify a person whom the witness has already described, the person may be pointed out to him, and he may be asked in direct terms, if that be not the person he meant. (R. v. Watson, 2 Stark. 116). Where a witness swears to a certain fact, and another witness is called for the purpose of contradicting him, the latter may be asked in direct terms, whether that fact ever took place. (Courtcen v. Touse, 1 Camp. 43).

The rules of evidence are exactly the same in civil and criminal cases; and in both it is in the discretion of the judge, how far he will allow the examination in chief of a witness to be by leading questions, or to assume the form of a cross examination. (Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297).

Leading questions are allowable in cross-examination, though in general such questions make the answers open to observation. (Peake's Evid. 206; 2 Stark. Evid. 132; 1 Chit. C. L. 622).

Irrelevant questions.

Irrelevant Questions.]—No question can be put to a witness, the probable answer to which would have nothing to do with the matter in issue. This rule has already been noticed, ante, 356, 357.

Questions privileged from being answered.

Questions which need not be answered.]—Questions tending to expose the witness to criminal accusation, punishment, or penalty, need not be answered. (See 1 Phill. Evid. 276, 7th ed.; 1 Chit. C. L. 620; Maloney v. Bartley, 3 Camp. 210; 8 Ves. 405). The objection, however, must, it seems, be taken by the witness himself, and counsel will not be allowed to argue it. (Thomas v. Newton, M. & M. 48; R. v. Adey, 1 M. & Rob. 94). A witness may object to answer a question which he thinks will tend to his crimination, though the answer would not lead to an immediate conclusion of guilt. (Cates v. Hardacre, 3 Taunt. 424; R. v. Slaney, 5 C. & P. 213). On an information against several persons for executing an office of trust without taking the oaths, the court refused a motion for leave to inspect such books kept by the defendants in which they had entered their elections, receipts, and disbursements, as it would have compelled them to give evidence against themselves in a criminal prosecution. (R. v. Mead, 2 Ld. Raym. 927; R. v. Worsingham, 1 Ld. Raym. 705; R. v. Cornelius, 2 Str. 1210). And a similar motion was refused, on an information against two overseers for making a rate without the concurrence of the churchwardens. (R. v. Lee, cited 1 Wils. 240; 1 Phill. Evid. 7th ed. 423; and see ante, 379, as to other books).

A witness is not compellable to say whether he published a particular paper if the contents be libellous. (R. v. Barber, 1 Stra. 444).

Upon an appeal against an order of bastardy, a person is not bound to declare whether he is the father of a bastard child. (R. v. St. Mary, Nottingham, 13 East, 58, n.)

Tending to degrade.

It has been settled that a witness is not compellable to answer questions, the answer to which would probably be degrading to his character. (Cook's case, How. St. Trials, 334; Friend's case, 13 Id. 17; Layer's case, 16 Id. 161). And it has been even held a witness is protected from admitting his commission of an offence, although he has received a pardon. (R. v. Reading, 2 St. Tri. 822; R. v. Earl of Shaftesbury, 3 St. Tri. 439). But this has been of late much doubted; and in Cundell v. Pratt, (3 C. & P. 240, n. b; 1 M. & M. 108. S. C.), Best, C. J., said, "I, for one, till I hear it decided by the House of Lords, shall not go so far as to say that the witness is protected by the rules of law from answering such questions as might disparage her character. I shall only prevent your asking such questions as may subject witnesses to any prosecution for crime; but not such questions as merely tend to degrade them in their character."

5. Witnesses, examination of.

In the case of Frost v. Holloway, (sitt. K. B. after H. T., 1818), the counsel, in cross-examining a witness, asked him, whether he had not been tried for theft at Reading. The witness refused to answer, and appealed to Lord Ellenborough, whether he was bound to answer such a question. Lord Ellenborough said, "If you do not answer the question, I will commit you;" adding, "You shall not be compelled to say whether you were guilty or not." (1 Phill. Ev. 283, 7th ed. notis). And in R. v. Edwards, (4 T. R. 440), where a witness had been guilty of an infamous crime, and had been punished for it, it was considered he might be asked whether he had not undergone the punishment: and see R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589; R. v. Edwards, (4 T. R. 440), where it was held a witness might be asked whether he had stood in the pillory: and see 3 Esp. 94; Harris v. Tippet, 2 Camp. 637; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 169; and further, post, "Rape," Vol. V.

Tending to a forfeiture.

A witness is also privileged from answering any question, the answer to which might subject him to a forfeiture of his estate; and it should seem a party is not bound to answer so as to subject himself to any forfeiture of interest. (1 Phill. Ev. 7th ed.; Lambert v. Rogers, 2 Mer. 489).

Tending to an action or debt.

A witness was not, it seems, formerly compellable to answer any question which might subject him to a civil action, or tend to charge himself with a debt. (Pending the impeachment, Lord Melville's cases, 29 How. State Trials, 746, 763; 1 Phill. Evid. 7th ed. 279; Cobbett's Parliamentary Debates, vol. 6, p. 167).

46 Geo. III. c. 37.

But now, by stat. 46 Geo. III. c. 37, intituled "An act to declare the law with respect to witnesses refusing to answer;" reciting, "Whereas doubts have arisen whether a witness can by law refuse to answer a question relevant to the matter in issue, the answering of which has no tendency to accuse himself, or to expose him to any penalty or forfeiture, but the answering of which may establish or tend to establish that he owes a debt, or is otherwise subject to a civil suit at the instance of H. M., or of some other person or persons;" it is therefore declared and enacted, "that a witness cannot by law refuse to answer a question relevant to the matter in issue, the answering of which has no tendency to accuse him, or to expose him to penalty or forfeiture of any nature whatever, by reason only, or on the sole ground, that the answering of such question may establish, or tend to establish, that he owes a debt, or is otherwise subject to a civil suit, either at the instance of H. M., or of any other person or persons."

But the right which the parties to a suit have to refuse answering any question is not in any degree affected by this statute; and therefore, on a question of settlement, a rated parishioner is not compellable by the adverse parish to give evidence, as he is directly interested as party to the appeal, and does not come within the words or meaning of the act. (R. v. Woburn, 10 East, 395; and see R. v. Hardwick, 11 East, 579; R. v. Inhabitants of Whitley, Lower, 1 M. & Sel. 636). These cases were decided before the 54 Geo. III. c. 170, ante, 436.

Tending to compromise rights.

In general a person is not bound to produce documents, the publication of which may compromise his own or his principal rights; as to produce for inspection title-deeds or the like. Therefore, on a question of settlement, a mortgagee, a rated inhabitant of the appellant parish, subpœnaed by the respondent parish, is not compellable, under a subpœna duces tecum, to produce the title-deeds of his mortgagor. (R. v. Upper Boddington, 4 D. & R. M. C. 233). It was also there held, that his attorney could not be allowed to produce an abstract of the deeds, or to give parol evidence of their contents. (And see Copeland v. Watts, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 95; R. v. Woodley, 1 M. & Rob. 390).

5. Witnesses, examination of.

We have already seen what confidential communications to attorneys and counsel are privileged from being divulged in a court, as also certain other communications relating to matters of state, &c., ante, 83—85.

If a witness chooses to answer questions which he need not, the answer is conclusive. (Watson's Trial by Gurney, 288; Rose v. Blackmore, 1 R. & M. C. N. P. 383.

It has been said, that if a witness answer any question on a matter rendering himself liable to forfeiture or punishment, he cannot afterwards claim his privilege, but must answer throughout. (East v. Chapman, 1 M. & M. 47; 2 C. & P. 570, S. C., cor. Abbott, C. J.)

What answers are evidence.

What Answers are Evidence.]—Our preceding inquiries as to what should be proved, and the degree and kind of proof to be adduced, will be here applicable, ante, 357, 371.

Refreshing memory.

Memorandum to refresh Memory.]—A witness cannot be permitted to read his evidence (5 St. Tr. 445; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 168); but he may refresh his memory from any book or paper made by himself at the time, or shortly after the occurrence of the facts to which it relates, provided he can afterwards swear to the fact from his own recollection; though if he can only maintain its truth by finding it entered there, the papers must be themselves given in evidence. (Doe v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 749; Kensington v. Inglis, 8 East, 289; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 168). And it seems that the writing must have been made contemporaneously with the transaction to which it refers. (Steinkiller v. Newton, 9 Car. & P. 313). Sed quære if the document need be made by himself: see Id. and Henry v. Lee, (2 Chit. Rep. 124), where it was considered that it need not; but according to the later case of Meagoe v. Simmons, (3 C. & P. 75; 1 M. & M. 121, S. C., cor. Lord Tenterden, C. J.), it must be. In Burton v. Plummer, (4 N. & M. 315), it was held that a clerk might refresh his memory as to the delivery of goods by looking at entries made in his presence by his master in a ledger from entries made by the clerk in a waste book, such entries in the ledger having been checked by the clerk while the facts were fresh in his recollection, and that the waste-book need not be produced. It has been said he may look at papers, in order to refresh his memory, which were not written by himself, but which he has repeatedly inspected, Burrough v. Martin, 2 Camp. 112); but he will not be allowed to refresh his memory with a copy of a paper made by himself after he wrote the original, though the original is proved to be so covered with figures as to be unintelligible. (Jones v. Stroud, 2 C. & P. 196; Burton v. Plummer, 2 Ad. & Ell. 341; R. v. St. Martin's, Leicester, Id. 215). Where a witness had been examined before commissioners of bankrupts, shortly after the act of bankruptcy; semble, that he may refer to the deposition he then made, for the purpose of refreshing his memory as to the date. (Smith v. Morgan, 2 M. & Rob, 257). The memorandum being unstamped will be no objection to his looking at it to refresh his memory. (Rambert v. Cohen, 4 Esp. 213; Maugham v. Hubbard, 8 B. & C. 14; 2 M. & R. 5, S. C.)

It has been said that it is necessary he should swear absolutely to the fact which he is called to prove, and that a mere persuasion and belief will not be sufficient proof for the consideration of a jury. (Adams v. Canon, 1 Dyer, 53 b, n. 15; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 167). But it is now settled that there are cases in which a belief will be available in evidence. Thus a subscribing witness to a deed may swear that he has totally forgotten that he signed it; but on being shown his signature, he may depose that he believes he saw the execution, and the court will be satisfied with his answer. (Miller's case, 3 Wils. 427; 1 Chit. C. L. 617. And see R. v. Inhabitants of St. Martin, Leicester, 4 N. & M. 202).

If the counsel for defendant, in cross-examination, put a paper into the witness's hand to refresh his memory, the opposite counsel has a right to look at it, without being bound to read it in evidence; and the opposite counsel may also ask the witness when it was written, without being bound to put it in. (R. v. Marsden, 2 C. & P. 603, cor. Tenterden, C. J.; and see Gregory v. Tavernor, 6 C. & P. 281; Reg. v. Duncombe, 8 Car. & P. 369).

5. Witnesses, examination of.

Cross-examination.]—The following rules as to the practice to be observed in criminal cases have been laid down by the judges, (7 Car. & P. 676):—

Cross-examination.

At a meeting of twelve of the judges, for the purpose of choosing the spring circuits of 1837, (Littledale, J., Bosanquet, J., and Coleridge, J., being absent from indisposition), a discussion took place as to some points which were thought likely to occur at the assizes, in consequence of the recent act for allowing prisoners, indicted for felony, to make full defence by counsel; and the following seemed to be the course of practice which the judges present thought it would be most advisable to adopt:—

1. That where a witness for the crown has made a deposition before a magistrate, he cannot, upon his cross-examination by the prisoner's counsel, be asked whether he did or did not, in his deposition, make such or such a statement, until the deposition itself has been read, in order to manifest whether such statement is or is not contained therein; and that such deposition must be read as part of the evidence of the cross-examining counsel.

2. That, after such deposition has been read, the prisoner's counsel may proceed in his cross-examination of the witness as to any supposed contradiction or variance between the testimony of the witness in court and his former deposition; after which the counsel for the prosecution may re-examine the witness, and after the prisoner's counsel has addressed the jury, will be entitled to the reply. And in case the counsel for the prisoner comments upon any supposed variance or contradiction without having read the deposition, the court may direct it to be read, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply upon it.

3. That the witness cannot, in cross-examination, be compelled to answer, whether he did or did not make such or such a statement before the magistrate, until after his deposition has been read, and it appears that it contains no mention of such statement. In that event the counsel for the prisoner may proceed with his cross-examination: and if the witness admits such statement to have been made, he may comment upon such omission, or upon the effect of it upon the other part of his testimony; or if the witness denies that he made such statement, the counsel for the prisoner may then, if such statement be material to the matter in issue, call witnesses to prove that he made such statement. But in either event, the reading of the deposition is the prisoner's evidence, and the counsel for the prosecution will be entitled to reply.

4. If the only evidence called, on the part of the prisoner, is evidence to character, although the counsel for the prosecution is entitled to the reply, it will be a matter for his discretion whether he will use it or not. Cases may occur in which it may be fit and proper so to do.

5. In cases of public prosecutions for felony, instituted by the crown, the law officers of the crown, and those who represent them, are, in strictness, entitled to the reply, although no evidence is produced on the part of the prisoner.

These resolutions are binding upon the prisoner's counsel; but the judge may question a witness as to any discrepancy between his deposition and evidence. (Rex v. Edwards, 8 C. & P. 26).

When the examination in chief of the witness is concluded, but not before (Colledge's case, 8 How. St. Tr. 592), the prisoner or his counsel has power to cross-examine him as to every part of his testimony. (4 Bla. Com. 355).

When once a witness is sworn, though he give no evidence for the party calling him, he may be cross-examined. (Phillips v. Eamer, 1 Esp. N. P. C. 357). However, circumstances may arise which will not give this right to the opposite counsel; as where the plaintiff's counsel called "Captain S.," and "Captain Hugh S." answered and was sworn; and the plaintiff's counsel, after asking him a few questions, ascertained that it was "Capt. Francis S." whom they meant to examine. This was held not to give the other side a right to cross-examine Capt. Hugh S., as he was only examined by mistake. (Clifford v. Hunter, 3 C. & P. 16; 1 M. & M. 113, S. C.) And where a person called to produce a document was sworn by mistake and asked a question which he did not answer, it was held the opposite party was not entitled to cross-examine him. (Rush v. Smith, 1 Crom., M. & R. 94).

5. Witnesses, examination of.

If the prisoner is not assisted by an advocate, it is the duty of the court to ask any questions which they think may tend to his benefit. (1 Chit. C. L. 407, 621).

When not advisable to cross examine.

If the witness tell the whole truth, a cross-examination may be dangerous, as it may have the effect of rendering his story more circumstantial, and impressing the jury with a stronger opinion of its truth. It is better, in such a case, either not to cross-examine him at all, or to confine the questions to his credibility, by impugning his means of knowledge, his disinterestedness, his integrity, or his veracity. If the witness tell only part of the truth, then the opposite counsel, if the residue be favourable to his client, will immediately proceed to cross-examine him as to it; but if unfavourable, the counsel will either refrain altogether from cross-examining him, or will confine his questions to the witness's credibility, as above mentioned. If, on the other hand, the evidence of the witness be false, then the whole force of the cross-examination must be directed to his credibility; and afterwards the truth may be proved by other witnesses. (Arch. C. Pl. & Evid. 116, 117).

What questions may be put.

With respect to what questions may be put to a witness on cross-examination the practice appears rather confused; insomuch that no general rule can be well laid down on the subject. Certain it is the opposite party is allowed greater latitude in the cross-examination than the party examining in chief.

Thus, leading questions may be asked, though, indeed, the witness must not have put to him the very words he is to echo back again. (Peake's Evid. 206; Rex v. Hardy, 20 How. St. Tri. 755). 2nd. Where a witness on cross-examination denies having used particular expressions in the presence of the parties, the opposite counsel examining a person to contradict the witness, is not at liberty to lead, by reading from his brief the words denied; the conversation spoken to by the first witness being evidence of itself. (Hallett v. Cousins, 2 M. & Rob. 238).

And the questions must not assume facts to have been proved, or that particular answers have been given contrary to the facts. (Stark. Evid. Part II. 132; Sainthill v. Bound, 4 Esp. 74). In strictness, a witness cannot be asked if, at a former trial, he swore differently from what he is now swearing; but an examined copy of the record of the former trial, or at least the Nisi Prius record (if the cause has been tried at Nisi Prius), should be proved; (Fisher v. Kitchingman, Barnes, 449; Foster v. Compton, 2 Stark. 364); and then it should be proved that the witness swore at that trial, either by having it read from the judge's notes, or proved upon oath from the notes or recollection of any person who was present at the time. (Mayor of Doncaster v. Day, 3 Taunt. 262; 12 Mod. 318; Gilb. Ev. 68, 69). A reporter to a newspaper, who is called as a witness, cannot be asked in cross-examination whether, in articles which he has written in that newspaper, he has not called the opposite party by nicknames, as that it is a part of the contents of the article. (Reg. v. Murphy, 8 Car. & P. 297). A prisoner's counsel has no right to ask a witness for the prosecution whether he has always told the same story; the question ought to be, "have you always said so, except before the magistrates." (Reg. v. Shellard, 9 Car. & P. 279). So it is not allowable on cross-examination, in the statement of a question to a witness, to represent the contents of a letter, and to ask him whether he wrote a letter to any person with such contents, or contents to the like effect, without having first shown the witness the letter, and having asked him whether he wrote that letter. (Queen's case, 2 B. & B. 286). And if, on cross-examination, a witness admits a letter to be of his handwriting, he cannot be questioned by counsel whether statements such as the counsel may suggest are contained in it; but the whole letter must be read. (Id. 288). In the ordinary course of proceeding, such letter must be read as part of the cross-examining counsel's case. The court, however, may permit it to be read at an earlier period if the counsel suggest that he wishes to have the letter read immediately, in order to found certain questions upon it; considering it, however, as part of the evidence of the counsel proposing such a course, and subject to the consequences thereof. (Id.) See further as to what questions may be asked, Rex v. Nichols, 5 Car. & P. 600; Rex v. Hodgkiss, 7 Car. & P. 298.

The questions must be either relevant and pertinent to the matter in issue, or calculated to elicit the witness's title to credit. In order to try a witness's credit, facts may be supposed, apparently connected with the cause, which have no real existence except in the imagination of the counsel. (Peake's Evid. 206; 1 Phill. Evid. 276; Stark. Evid. Part II). But how far questions may be asked for the same purpose, which have no seeming tendency to bear on the point in issue, appears still to be dubious. It is, perhaps, better left to the discretion of the court, in each particular case, to prevent the counsel from too great a digression from the matter in issue. (1 Chit. C. L. 622). At all events, a witness cannot be cross-examined as to any distinct collateral fact for the purpose of afterwards impeaching his testimony by contradicting him. (Stark. Evid. Part II. 134; Spenceley v. De Willott, 7 East, 108; 2 Stark. 156). And should such questions be put and answered, evidence cannot be afterwards adduced for the purpose of contradiction. (Harris v. Tippet, 2 Camp. 638; Rex v. Watson, 2 Stark. 156; 1 Chit. C. L. 622, 2nd ed.)

If a witness, when examined in chief as to the occurrence of a fact, answer that he does not remember it, the counsel on the opposite side cannot give evidence of a former declaration by the witness of the fact having occurred, unless he have in cross-examination questioned the witness as to such declaration; for the fact may have occurred, and the witness have formerly declared his knowledge of it, and yet he may not recollect it at the time of his examination. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod. & Bing. 299).

A party at the trial is not to be permitted to show, by cross-examination and subsequent evidence, that a witness, who has been examined in chief by his adversary, is the real party to the suit; as, if such be the fact, the proper course is to object to the competency of the witness in the first instance. (Dewdenay v. Palmer, 4 Mee. & W. 664; 7 Dowl. P. C. 177).

On an application for a new trial one of the witnesses made an affidavit. The same witness was called on the second trial. It was proposed and allowed to cross-examine the witness from an office copy of her affidavit, which was ordered by the judge's order (in the usual form) to be admitted as a true copy: and it was held not necessary to have the original affidavit to cross-examine upon. (Davies v. Davies, 9 Car. & P. 252).

In a case of felony, in order to prove that a witness did not state a particular fact before the magistrate, his deposition must be put in, and a witness cannot be questioned as to what he either did or did not state before the magistrate, without first allowing him to read, or to have read to him, his deposition taken before the magistrate. (Reg. v. Taylor, 8 Car. & P. 726).

If a party robbed go within a few hours after the robbery to a constable, and mention the name of the person who robbed him, the party robbed may be asked at the trial whether he named any person to the constable, but ought not to be asked what name he mentioned; and the constable may be asked whether, in consequence of the party mentioning a name to him, he went in search of any person; and if so, who that person was. (Rex v. Wink, 6 C. & P. 397).

5. Witnesses, examination of.

Where a witness for the prosecution at the Old Bailey, on being asked to repeat an answer which she had previously given before the whole of it had been taken down, omitted what the prisoner's counsel thought an important part of it, and denied that she had ever uttered such part; the judges allowed the short-hand writer of the court, who had taken down the answer, to be examined as a witness to show whether the words had been used or not. (Rex v. Slater, 6 C. & P. 334).

Re examination.

Re-examination.]—When the cross-examination is completed, the counsel by whom the witness was called is entitled to re-examine him for the purpose of explaining any matter into which confusion has been introduced by the questions of the adversary; but he can only put questions on matters touched on or referred to in the cross-examination. (Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 382; Prince v. Sams, 7 Ad. & E. 627; 3 Nev. & Per. 139). But if a witness for the prosecution shows any unfair bias, the counsel who calls him may cross-examine him. (Reg. v. Chapman, 8 Car. & P. 558). If a witness, upon his cross-examination, admit his having used certain expressions in a conversation with a person not a party to the cause, the opposite counsel, in re-examining the witness, is confined to such questions as may elicit the meaning of the expressions, and the motives of the witness for using them. But where a witness deposes to certain expressions being used by a party to the cause, the counsel for that party is entitled to re-examine the witness as to the whole of the conversation in which the expressions occurred; because the expressions are given in evidence in such a case as an admission of the party, and the whole of the admission should be taken together. (The Queen's case, 2 Brod & Bing. 294; and see Dunn v. Aslett, 2 M. & R. 122).

On the trial of A., for attempting to discharge loaded arms at B., B., (with a view to discredit his evidence), having been cross-examined as to whether he had not used violent language towards his father, which he admitted he had; on re-examination, B. was allowed to be asked how his father had acted towards him before he used the language that he had been cross-examined to. (Reg. v. St. George, 9 Car. & P. 483).

A witness cannot be asked as to what another witness has said on other occasions than that which was the subject of the trial; for what a witness has said at other times is only matter for the cross-examination of the witness himself. (Ib.)

A defendant was tried for publishing a letter, purporting to be the resolutions of a body of persons calling themselves the General Convention, and in one part of it it stated that an outrage had been committed on the people of Birmingham, by a force "acting under the authority of men, who, when out of office, sanctioned and took part in the meetings of the people." A witness for the crown stated, in his cross-examination, that he had formerly belonged to the convention, but had since resigned, and had become a town councillor of Birmingham. It was not permitted to ask him further, in cross-examination, as to what he said at a meeting at which the convention was agreed on, but which took place nearly a year before the publication of the alleged libel. (Reg. v. Collins, 9 Car. & P. 456).

In an action for use and occupation, the question was, whether a house had been let to the defendant or her sister. A witness for the plaintiff deposed that it was let to the defendant; and while the defendant's witnesses were under examination, to prove that the letting was to her sister, the defendant came into court. It was proposed, and permitted, on the part of the plaintiff, to recall his witness, to state that, now he had seen the defendant again, he was quite positive that it was she who took the house. (Roe v. Day, 7 Car. & P. 705).

5. Witnesses, expenses of.

But where any new matter occurs to the counsel who called the witness, which he considers important, and respecting which he is not allowed to examine the witness, he may request the court to do so; and the court generally complies with such request. Sometimes, indeed, where the counsel has omitted to bring forward some merely formal proof, the court will allow it to be afterwards adduced, though the case has been closed. (Rex v. Watson, 6 Car. & P. 653).

A witness was asked by the prisoner's counsel, on cross-examination, whether he had not become bail for a witness previously examined. He replied, yes; and that he believed it was on a charge of keeping a gaming-house. In order to prevent any impression against the character of the party so accused, the court, on the suggestion of the counsel for the prosecution, allowed such party to be called up again, and asked whether the charge was in fact true or false. (Rex v. Noel, 6 C. & P. 336).

Evidence for defendant.

Evidence for Defendant.]—After the prosecutor has concluded his case, the defendant, if not entitled to an acquittal on some point of law, is called on to give in his evidence for the defence. (See the course of a trial, post, "Trial," "Sessions," Vol. V.) The mode of conducting such evidence may be collected from the preceding observations: and see particularly some points relative to discrediting the testimony of witnesses, ante, 446; and as to evidence of character, ante, 382.

Evidence in reply.

Evidence in reply.]—When the defendant's evidence is closed, the prosecutor's counsel may offer any evidence in reply which is strictly applicable to the defence, and which could form no part of his original case. Thus, he may give specific contradictions to the witnesses on their denials on cross-examinations; he may call persons to swear that they would not believe the witnesses on their oaths, and may apply an answer to any matter of excuse which the prisoner has set up, and which he could not anticipate; but he must not make a new case, or seek to fill up the chasms or supply the deficiencies of that on which he originally relied. (Talfourd's Dick. Sess. 387; George v. Radford, 3 C. & P. 464; Whittingham v. Bloxham, 4 C. & P. 597; R. v. Hilditch, 5 C. & P. 299; P. v. Findon, 6 C. & P. 132).

When evidence is offered in reply in cases of misdemeanor, the defendant's counsel has a right to address the jury on such evidence. (Ib.)

Which party shall conclude.

The counsel of that party which doth begin to maintain the issue ought to conclude. (Tri. per Pais, 220).

Where the defendants have pleaded a joint plea of not guilty, the judge will not allow the counsel of each defendant, either to cross-examine separately, or to address the jury separately. (Seale v. Evans, 7 Car. & P. 593).

V. Expenses of Witnesses and their Privileges during Attendance.

Expenses of witnesses.

The expenses of witnesses, and as to how far they may refuse attendance without a payment of them, have been already considered, ante, "Costs," Vol. I., and see ante, 449.

Privileges of.

Witnesses, whether subpœnaed, or bound by recognizance to appear, or appearing voluntarily after being asked to do so, (Meekins v. Smith, 1 H. Bla. 636; Arding v. Flower, 8 T. R. 536), are protected from arrest whilst attending the court, not only on the day mentioned in the subpœna, &c., but also on every day of the same sittings, assizes, or sessions, until the cause is tried. They are also privileged in like manner, during a reasonable time, before and after the trial, whilst coming to or returning from the place were the sittings, assizes, or sessions are held. (Lightfoot v. Cameron, 2 Bla. Rep. 1113; Holiday v. Pitt, 2 Stra. 986; see Gibbs v. Philipson, 1 Russell & Mylne, 19; Tidd, 9th ed. 195—198; 1 Chit. C. L. 614). If a witness under these circumstances be arrested, the court out of which the subpœna issued, or the judge of the court in which the cause is to be or has been tried, will, upon application, order him to be discharged. (Id.)

7. Forms.

VI. Bill of Exceptions and Demurrer to Evidence.

Bill of exceptions.

When an exception is made by any party to a witness, which is overruled by the court, the opposite side have, in civil proceedings, the power of appealing from his decision by tendering a bill of exceptions. But this practice does not obtain in criminal proceedings—at all events in treason and felony. (1 Chit. C. L. 622. See Tidd, 9th ed. 862; Rosc. 109).

Where evidence is rejected by a judge at Nisi Prius, the counsel proposing it ought to make a formal tender of it to the judge, and request him to take a note of it, and if the judge decline, he should tender a bill of exceptions, otherwise he will not be allowed to raise before the court any questions arising out of such evidence, if the judge's note does not shew the point to have been raised at the trial. (Gibbs v. Pike, 9 M. & W. 351).

Demurrer to evidence.

A demurrer to evidence is a proceeding by which the judges are called upon to determine what the law is upon certain facts which are brought forward in evidence, and is therefore analogous to a demurrer upon facts alleged in pleading. (Gibson v. Hunter, 2 H. Bla. 205; Tidd, 9th ed. 865, 6). It can be of very little use and is rarely ever adopted in criminal proceedings, since the crown is never compellable to join in demurrer; but the judge directs the jury to find a special verdict, the legal effect of which the court will afterwards determine. (5 Co. 104; Gibson v. Hunter, 2 H. Bla. 187).

VII. Forms.

Examinations by Justices before Trial.

UNDER this title will be considered the mode in which an offence should be investigated by a magistrate on an accused party being brought before him before trial, previous to discharging, bailing, or committing such accused for trial.

As to the examination of parties on the trial of an indictment, &c., see ante, 450; as to the examination of them on convictions, see "Convictions," Vol. I.

2. Examination of witnesses against accused.

I. Time and Place of Examination.

1. Time and place of examination.

The accused being arrested and in custody should as speedily as possible be taken before a justice of the peace of competent jurisdiction, to hear and be examined concerning the offence imputed to him. If it be late in the evening, and no justice of the peace sitting in his public capacity, it is not reasonable, unless in crimes of a very heinous nature, or other peculiar circumstances justify it, that a justice of the peace should be called upon to examine into the charge at such an unseasonable hour. But if the time at which an accused party is brought before the justice be not unseasonable, he must either go into the case or desire the accused to be taken before another justice; and if, under such circumstances, he remands the accused, ordering him to be brought up at another time, he is liable to an action of trespass. (Edwards v. Ferris, 7 C. & P. 542).

It may be public or private.

The examination may take place either in public or private. The justice may exclude an attorney or counsel if he likes (Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & Cres. 37; 2 D. & R. 86, S. C.; Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Adol. 663. See Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237); but not the accused. (Dick. J., Examination, infra). In many cases a private examination is desirable.

II. Examination of Witnesses against Accused.

2. Examination of accusers and witnesses.

The first step in the investigation as to the offence is to call for and examine the witnesses for the accusers.

The whole proceedings of the examination should be in the presence and hearing of the accused. (1 Leach, 202, 309, 500, 503 a.; R. v. Paine, 5 Mod. 163; 1 Salk. 281; 1 Ld. Raym. 729, S. C.; Rex v. Commins, 4 D. & R. M. C. 94).

The witness should be informed as to the purpose for which he is required to give evidence, or, in other words, that there is a person under charge against whom he is required to give evidence, otherwise the witness could not be punished for refusing to give evidence. (Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42).

Before administering the oath to the witness, the magistrate had better inquire who and what the witness is; and in some cases it would be as well shortly to ascertain what he intends to prove.

It seems also that no witness ought to be examined who is not competent, according to the general rules of evidence, to give evidence, and as to which see ante, 451.

After the competency of the witness is ascertained, he should be sworn before the justice as in other cases. (Ante, 421).

The following is the usual form of oath prescribed to be taken by a Christian: "You shall true answer make to such questions as shall be demanded of you; so help you God." If the witness be a Quaker, see the form, ante, 452.

Must be on oath.

The examination of the witness must be upon oath administered previous to the examination, or such examination will amount to nothing. (Dalt. J., c. 164, s. 3; 1 Hale, 586; R. v. Kiddy, 4 D. & R. 734).

Even a peer must be examined on oath, and not upon his honour. (Dick. Jus., Examination, III.)

If a magistrate committed a party without an oath made before him, he would be liable to an action if the prisoner were acquitted. (1 Hale, 586; Dalt. J., c. 164; 1 Leach, 202, 309; Morgan v. Hughes, 2 T. R. 225, 231).

After the witness, being competent, is duly sworn, the magistrate proceeds to examine him. As to what questions may be asked, see ante, 453. The witnesses should be examined before the accused, and he may cross-examine them. (Ante, 457). They should, especially if they appear unwilling, be examined separately; and no one who has already been completely examined should be permitted, if it be possible to avoid it, to inform any other who has yet to be examined to what particulars his evidence has extended. Indeed, in most cases, it would be best and fairest to keep all the witnesses away but the one under examination. (See Dalt. J., 165; Taylor v. Lawson, 3 C. & P. 543).

4. Witnesses refusing to answer.

The magistrate cannot be required to hear evidence which ought not to affect his determination. (R. v. Minshull, 1 Nev. & M. 277).

Magistrate need not hear unnecessary evidence.

As to putting down the examination and answers in writing, see post, 467.

III. Compelling Attendance of Witnesses.

3. Compelling attendance of witnesses.

We have already noticed the power of a magistrate to compel the attendance of a witness. (Ante, 447). If a person, within the magistrate's jurisdiction, who can give material evidence against the accused, in cases of felony or misdemeanor, will not voluntarily attend, such attendance may be enforced by a summons issued against him by the justice, and directed to a constable. Such summons should be personally served on him, and the original shewn to him at the same time. (Ante, 448). See the form, post, 476, (No. 4). He might be indicted for a disobedience to it, or the officer may, it seems, on a warrant against the witness, founded on his refusal to obey the summons, even enforce his attendance. (2 Hale, 282; 1 Chit. C. L. 76; sed vid. Shuttleworth, 8, 9). But a magistrate has no right to issue a warrant for the apprehension of a person to attend to find bail for his appearance as a witness at the assizes, although it is sworn that the witness is material, and has refused to obey a summons, which had previously been issued, to give evidence before the magistrate. (Evans v. Rees, 4 Per. & D. 32; 12 Ad. & E. 55, S. C.) The justice had no authority to require bail at such a stage of the proceedings; "but (per Denman, C. J.) if the warrant had merely recited the witness's refusal to attend, and directed the constable to bring him, there might not be much doubt that it would have been justifiable." (12 Ad. & E. 59).

It should seem that, upon the reasonable request of the defendant, the magistrate has a similar power to bring before him any witness who may be able to give material evidence on his behalf. (3 Inst. 79; 4 Bla. Com. 359).

On the application and notice of two inhabitants of a parish, a constable may be compelled to appear before a magistrate to enter into a recognizance to prosecute a party for keeping a disorderly house within the district. (25 Geo. II. c. 36, s. 5; and see 58 Geo. III. c. 70, s. 7; ante, "Disorderly House;" and see various other statutes throughout the titles of this work, compelling the attendance of witnesses).

IV. Witnesses Refusing to Answer.

4. Witnesses refusing to answer.

It does not appear to be expressly decided whether a justice of the peace has jurisdiction to commit to prison a person who refuses to be examined on oath and give evidence as a witness touching a charge against a party then before the justice on examination. It seems clear he cannot be committed for such a refusal without there is a person charged with the offence, and without he (the witness) is apprised of that fact and the nature of the charge. (Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42) (a). But it seems he may be committed for such a refusal

(a) Et per Bayley, J.—"The facts found in this case do not raise the question first submitted to our consideration, and therefore I shall studi-

where there is a person charged, and he is apprised of that fact and the nature of the charge. At all events to justify the commitment for refusing to answer a question, the question put must be one upon which the party may be lawfully compelled to answer, and therefore the commitment in such a case should set forth the question and answers, if any, so that the court may be enabled to judge of their propriety. (In re Hadland, 1 Dowl. N. S. 835). As to what questions a party is privileged from answering, see ante, 454. Where a witness who was summoned by commissioners of bankrupt under the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 35, was required by the commissioners to read certain entries in a ledger, and on his refusal to do so, was committed by them for refusing to answer a question; it was held that the request to read was neither in form nor substance a question, and that the commitment was illegal. (Isaac v. Impey, 10 B. & Cres. 442).

It was decided in Bennett v. Watson, (3 Maule & Sel. 1), that a justice of the peace might commit a feme covert who was a material witness upon a charge of felony brought before him, and who refused to appear at the sessions to give evidence, or to find sureties for her appearance.

A witness might, it is apprehended, be indicted at common law for the refusal.

V. Examination of the accused Party.

5. Examination of accused.

Should not be on oath.

If the slightest case even of suspicion be made out against the accused, he should be asked by the justice if he has any thing to say against the charge. He should not be put on his oath. (1 Hale, 585; 2 Hale, 52, 120, 284; Bull. N. P. 284; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 87). Where the examination of a prisoner before the magistrate purports to have been taken on oath, no evidence on the trial is admissible to show that in fact the examination was not on oath. (R. v. Hornage, 1 Stark. Rep. 242 (b); R. v. Rivers, 7 Car. & P. 177; R. v. Bentley, 6 Id. 148).

Prisoner should be allowed to make his statement freely.

A prisoner, when taken on suspicion before a magistrate, is to be allowed to speak voluntarily, and give his account freely; and he ought not to be pressed to answer, examined, or questioned by the magistrate like a common witness: and in R. v. Wilson, (Holt's N. P. C. 597), when a person had been so examined, his account was rejected as inously forbear giving any opinion upon that point. The question then is, whether the warrant of commitment given in evidence, or even the facts proved dehors the commitment, shew a sufficient cause for the imprisonment. At all events, before the commitment could be justified, it must distinctly appear that the party committed was apprised that there was some person under charge, against whom his evidence was required to be given. Now there is nothing either in or out of the warrant to enable me to say that there had been an information upon oath, or any person charged before the magistrate, so as to render it necessary that the plaintiff should be examined as a witness. The parol evidence upon this subject is very unsatisfactory; and on reading the warrant, I cannot collect that there had been an information on oath before the magistrate against any particular person under charge, for it contains merely a general assertion that the plaintiff was committed for refusing to give evidence touching a certain riot and disturbance committed. I am therefore of opinion that the defendant has not made out a sufficient justification of the alleged trespass."

(b) This was an indictment for sacrilege alleged to have been committed in Sheffield church. The prosecutors tendered in evidence the examination of Hornage before the magistrate previous to his commitment. This was written under the following words, which, except as to the name, were printed:—"The examination of —— Hornage, taken on oath before me," admissible, though nothing like a threat or promise had been used. (1 Phill. Ev. 106; R. v. Rivers, 7 C. & P. 177; sed vide R. v. Ellis, Ry. & M. 432). But where a prisoner is willing to make a statement, it is the duty of magistrates to receive it; but before they do so, they ought entirely to remove any impression that may have before been on the prisoner's mind, that the statement may be used for his own benefit; and the prisoner ought also to be told, that what he thinks fit to say will be taken down, and may be used against him on his trial. (Reg. v. Arnold, 8 Car. & P. 621; R. v. Green, 5 C. & P. 312. See further as to the confessions of a prisoner, Vol. I. tit. "Confessions.")

6. Taking down in writing, &c.

If the offender, upon his examination before the justice of the peace, shall confess the matter, it shall not be amiss that he subscribe his name or mark to it. (Dalt. c. 164).

See further as to confessions of the accused, and the care to be adopted by justices in taking and regarding them, "Confession," Vol. I.

Witnesses for accused.

The accused may, if he choose, call witnesses, and they may be examined on oath, like the witnesses against him; (Dalt. c. 165); and their examination should be put into writing, like the rest. (4 Bla. Com. 360).

Several offenders.

If more than one person be accused, each of them should be examined apart from the rest, in order that an opportunity may be afforded of detecting any variations in their story. (1 Chit. C. L. 83).

VI. Taking down Examination in Writing, &c.

6. In felonies the examinations are to be put into writing, &c. before bailing or committing.

By the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, reciting "it is expedient to amend and extend the provisions of two acts, the first passed in the first and second years of the reign of King Philip and Queen Mary, intituled 'An Act appointing an order to justices of peace for the bailment of prisoners,' and the second passed in the second and third years of the same reign, intituled 'An Act to take examination of prisoners suspected of manslaughter or felony,'" it is enacted, "that two justices of the peace, before they shall admit to bail, and the justice or justices, before he or they shall commit to prison any person arrested for felony, or on suspicion of felony, shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing; and the two justices shall certify such bailment in writing; and every such justice shall have authority to bind, by recognizance, all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching any such felony, or suspicion of felony, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions or sessions of the peace, at which the trial thereof is intended to be, then and there to prosecute, or give evidence against the party accused; and such justices and justice respectively shall subscribe all such examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, and deliver, or cause the same to be delivered, to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court."

Power to bind by recognizance, &c.

Examinations, &c. to be delivered to the court.

&c., and was undersigned by the magistrate. Upon the objection being taken, the examination was rejected because it purported to have been taken on oath; and Le Blanc, J., would not permit a witness to be examined for the purpose of shewing that no oath had in fact been administered to the prisoner, saying that he could not allow that which had been sent in under the hand of a magistrate to be disputed.

6. Taking down in writing, &c.

7 Geo. 4, c. 64.

In misdemeanors the examinations are to be put into writing before bailing or committing.

By sect. 3, "every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be taken on a charge of misdemeanor, or suspicion thereof, shall take the examination of the person charged, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing, before he shall commit to prison or require bail from the person so charged; and in every case of bailment shall certify the bailment in writing, and shall have authority to bind all persons, by recognizance, to appear to prosecute, or give evidence against the party accused, in like manner as in cases of felony; and shall subscribe all examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, deliver, or cause the same to be delivered, to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court, in like manner as in cases of felony."

Sect. 4 relates to proceedings before coroners; see ante, tit. "Coroner."

Penalty on justices &c. for not complying with act.

Sect. 5. "If any justice or coroner shall offend in any thing contrary to the true intent and meaning of these provisions, the court, to whose officer any such examination, information, evidence, bailment, recognizance, or inquisition, ought to have been delivered, shall, upon examination and proof of the offence, in a summary manner, set such fine upon every such justice or coroner as the court shall think meet."

Provisions to apply to all justices and coroners.

Sect. 6. "All these provisions relating to justices and coroners shall apply to the justices and coroners not only of counties at large, but also of all other jurisdictions."

Central Criminal Court.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 36, s. 11, establishing the Central Criminal Court, justices and coroners acting within the limits of that act, are to take the like examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizance, and to certify the same to the justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, as they are required by the above act of 7 Geo. IV.

How far these enactments alter the common law, &c.

We have before had occasion partially to notice these provisions, (ante, 406). The statute of 7 Geo. IV. wholly repeals the statutes 1 & 2 Ph. & M. c. 13, and 2 & 3 Ph. & M. c. 10. No variation is made by these provisions in the law as it previously stood, as it regarded the taking down the examinations of witnesses and the accused in cases of felony; but in cases of misdemeanor it is otherwise, the new law placing the examinations respecting them on the same footing as those in felony. By the old law, the justice was not, it seems, bound to take any examinations in writing in cases of misdemeanor; (Rex v. Paine, 1 Salk. 281; 1 Ld. Raym. 729; 5 Mod. 163, S. C.; and 1 Burn, J., 24th ed. 1004, 5); though, indeed, the case of Rex v. Fearshire, 1 Leach, 202, is to the contrary, Lord Mansfield, C. J., saying in that case, that it was the indispensable duty of justices to take all charges in writing. Upon the hearing of a case of trespass under the Game Act, it seems it is not incumbent on the magistrate to take down in writing what is said before him; (Robinson v. Vaughton, 8 C. & P. 252); but it is advisable that he should do so in all cases.

Object of statutes.

One of the objects of the legislature in passing the above enactments was to enable the judge and jury before whom the prisoner is tried, to see whether the witnesses at the trial are consistent with the account given by them before the committing magistrate. (Lambe's case, 2 Leach, 552; Lord Stafford's case, 7 How. St. Tr. 1361). And where such written deposition of what has been stated by a witness before a magistrate on a charge of misdemeanor exists, it is the only admissible evidence; and this rule is not limited to the individual case, with the view to which the evidence was taken down, but extends to all subsequent proceedings, civil as well as criminal: and it is not requisite for this purpose that the depositions be signed by the witness. (Leach v. Simpson, 5 Mee. & W. 309).

Depositions, how to be taken.

In pursuance of the above enactments, the examination of the accused and witnesses must be taken down in writing. As much of such examination as is material must be put down. What the accused says and the depositions used by the witnesses should be put down in the very words used by them, or as near as possible in those words, and not in any law technicalities, or words not made use of by them, or in the words of a clause in a statute under which the party is charged. (See Mills v. Collett, 3 M. & P. 242; 6 Bing. 85, S. C.; Cohen v. Morgan, 6 D. & R. 8; Reg. v. Roche, 1 Car. & Marsh. 341). The depositions should be taken in the first person; thus, "I saw &c. at such a time and place," instead of saying "he, this examinant," and "he, this deponent"—terms which many witnesses do not understand, and perhaps may conceive to mean some other person.

6. Taking down in writing, &c.

In what words.

We have seen (ante, 466) that the accused should not be put upon his oath; and if his examination, as taken down and signed by the magistrate, conclude, "taken and sworn before me," it is not receivable in evidence, and the judge will neither allow the magistrate's clerk to prove that in fact it was not sworn, nor will he receive parol evidence of what the prisoner said. (R. v. Rivers, 7 C. & P. 177; R. v. Hornage, 1 Stark. Rep. 242, ante, 466).

Accused should not be examined on oath.

The formal mode of taking down the deposition is usually as follows:—"The examination of A. B., of &c., taken on oath, &c." But if the original information and evidence taken before the warrant was issued contain a complete case, it is the practice, after re-swearing the accuser and witnesses, to read over their former depositions in their presence and that of the prisoner, and then to state to the latter that he is at liberty to ask the prosecutor and witnesses any questions respecting the charge against him; and, if he declines so doing, the examinations are not again gone over, but a fresh jurat is made to them; and this even before a fresh magistrate.

Formal parts

Where the examination was headed "the information and complaint" of A. B., Gurney, B., refused to receive it in evidence. (R. v. Bentley, 6 C. & P. 148).

The examination of the prisoner ought to be read over to him, and tendered to him for his signature. His signature, however, is not essentially necessary, but only for precaution and for the facility of future proof. In Lambe's case, (2 Leach, C. C. 625), it was held, that a written examination containing the prisoner's confession, taken by a committing magistrate, and read over to the prisoner, who admitted it to be true, but refused to sign it, would have been evidence at common law, and was not rendered inadmissible by any provision in stats. 1 & 2 and 2 & 3 Ph. & M. In this case the examination was rendered admissible by the prisoner acknowledging the truth of its contents; but if the prisoner had not made such admission, and had refused to sign it after it had been read over to him, it could not have been received in evidence. (R. v. Telicote, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 483; 1 Phill. Evid. 115, 7th ed.). Whether he be silent or not, it is best that the justice should put down in writing the facts exactly as they take place before him. See the form, post, 476, (No. 3).

Signature of accused.

The examinations of the witnesses should also be tendered to them for their signatures, and they should sign them; but this is not absolutely requisite. (1 Leach, 458; 2 Leach, 854; 1 Chit. C. L. 80). The stat. 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3, requires the magistrate to sign them; but not the witnesses. (Leach v. Simpson, 5 M. & W. 309). He should attach his signature to each deposition separately. (Reg. v. Osborne, 8 C. & P. 110, 113).

Signatures of witnesses.

Justice's signature.

During the whole of the proceedings, it is prudent for the justice to have his clerk or other intelligent person present, in order that no difficulty might arise in proving the identity of the deposition in case of a refusal to subscribe it by a witness. (Dick. J., Examination, III.)

As to the proof of these examinations and depositions on a trial, see ante, 406.

Proof of.

8. Remanding accused.

VII. Obstructing the Examination, &c.

(7). Obstructing the examination.

From some authorities it seems that if any person obstructs the examination, or is guilty of any other contempt, by insulting the justice or otherwise, he may be committed by such justice to prison, and may be indicted; (see R. v. Revel, 1 Stra. 421; Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 85); but in Pettit v. Addington, (Peake, C. N. P. 62), Lord Kenyon doubted the justice's power to commit, as he was not sitting except as a ministerial officer. Such a commitment must be in writing, (Mayhew v. Locke, 2 Marsh. 374; 7 Taunt. 63, S. C.); and for a time certain, (Rex v. James, 5 B. & Al. 894; 1 D. & R. 559, S. C.); and not until he retract, or make a personal submission or apology. (Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 142).

Right of third persons to be present.

It may be as well to observe, that a prisoner, when examined before a justice on a charge of felony, is not entitled as of right to have a person skilled in the law, or any other, heard as an advocate on his behalf, it being a preliminary investigation only, and not conclusive on him; and the recent act of 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 114, allowing a prisoner counsel, does not alter the law in this respect. As a matter of courtesy, however, the justice frequently allows it. (Cox v. Coleridge, 1 B. & Cres. 37; 2 D. & R. 86, S. C.; Rex v. Borron, 3 B. & Al. 432; Daubney v. Cooper, 10 B. & Cres. 237; Collier v. Hicks, 2 B. & Adol. 663. See more fully the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 114, tit. "Conviction," Vol. I.)

VIII. Remanding Accused for further Examination.

(8) Remanding accused for further examination.

The justice should take and complete the examination of all concerned, and discharge or commit the accused for trial as soon as the nature of the case will permit him; (Fortes. 142, 143); but he is in all cases allowed a reasonable time for this purpose before he makes his final decision.

Power to commit.

There can be no doubt a magistrate may commit for re-examination. (Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32). But the magistrate should take care that he commits for re-examination, and not for the purpose of extorting a confession, or the like.

Form of detainer.

If by some reasonable occasion, as the absence of a witness or the like, the justice cannot at the return of the warrant take the examination, he may by word of mouth command the constable or any other person to detain in custody the prisoner till the next day, and then to bring him before the justice for further examination. And this detainer is justifiable by the constable or any other person, without showing the particular cause for which he was to be examined, or any warrant in writing. (1 Hale, 585; 2 Hale, 120; and see Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32).

Time of detainer.

Where, however, the detainer is for a long time, there had better be a warrant, in writing, for that purpose. See form, post, 476, (No. 5).

The time of the detainer must be no longer than is necessary for such purpose; and the magistrate ought not arbitrarily to commit the party. (Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28; 5 M. & R. 53, S. C.) Where a magistrate, meeting in the street a constable bringing up a person who had been taken into custody for drunkenness, said, "Take the man back, I will see him to-morrow," Patteson, J., ruled that he was liable to an action for false imprisonment; that he should either have declined to hear the charge, or have directed the party to be taken before some other magistrate; but he had no right to remand him for twenty-four hours. (Edwards v. Ferris, 7 C. & P. 542). In Scavage v. Tatcham, it was holden that a party could not be detained sixteen days; and it was there said that the space of three days is a reasonable time. (Cro. Eliz. 829; 2 Hawk. c. 16, s. 12, and see the case of Kendal & Roe, 12 Howell's St. Tri. 1376). But there is evidently no precise limitation of the time: all that is to be regarded is, whether the time be reasonable. The reasonableness of it is a mixed question of law and fact, depending on the circumstances of each case. (Davis v. Capper, Scavage v. Tateham, supra). In a case where the period for which a party had been committed for further examination appeared to the court to be too long, yet the jurors having, to the satisfaction of the judge at Nisi Prius, found that the detention was not excessive, a rule nisi for a new trial was refused. (Cave v. Mountain, 1 M. & G. 257; 1 Scott, N. R. 132). In the practice of the best-regulated police-offices, there are many instances of prisoners being detained much more than twenty days, between their first being brought before a justice and their commitment for trial, and being brought up for examination several different days during the interval. (Dick. J., Examination; Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow, 184; Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 28; 5 M. & R. 53, S. C.; Rex v. Gooding, 1 Burn, J., 24th ed. 1001, n.) (a).

8. Remanding accused.

If the examination do not take place in a reasonable time, an action will lie against the justice: the commitment would be void ab initio. (Arbuckle v. Taylor, 3 Dow's Rep. 184). In the case of Davis v. Capper, (10 B. & Cres. 28; 5 M. & R. 53, S. C.), it was fully settled that trespass would lie against a magistrate for committing a party charged

---

(a) Mr. Justice Park, in his charge to the grand jury at Monmouth summer assizes, 1823, said, "You are here assembled as grand jurors, though many of you are magistrates, and through you I must address what I am about to say to magistrates in general. There has been a great irregularity in the commitment of the man in the borough gaol charged with horse-stealing. It is the duty of those who administer justice never to neglect the petitions of the poor; and I received a letter purporting to be signed by this prisoner, stating and complaining that he had been committed on the 27th of May last for further examination, that he never had been further examined, and that he never had been, up to that time (the 25th July), committed for trial! I took for granted it was like many of those letters which persons in my situation often receive; but when the calendar was presented to me on Tuesday morning, at Hereford, I then found he was, on the 30th July, committed for trial; a period of two calendar months and three days after he was first examined! I received from a magistrate of the borough, this morning, an account of various proceedings, and probably satisfactory reasons could be given for this delay, and it is not to find fault with this that I mention it. I do it as a matter of caution to all magistrates, and to state what I conceive to be the law on the subject. That a magistrate may commit for further examination there can be no doubt, because it is not always that the witnesses can be brought forward in the first instance, or the matter may not be ripe for trial; but the further and absolute commitment must be in a reasonable time. What is a reasonable time is a mixed question of law and fact, which those who are to exercise a judgment upon it must decide at the time; but, generally speaking, and without exception almost, two whole months cannot be a reasonable time. A magistrate ought as speedily as possible to make all inquiry. I state that with the greatest confidence, because I can state it on the authority of the twelve judges of England; for a case was submitted to us about two years ago, by H. M.'s command, in which that point incidentally came under consideration; and the judges were of opinion, that a further commitment could only be for a reasonable time, and that the jury must have found the commitment to be only for a reasonable time, otherwise the man would have been acquitted. It is distressing to see in the calendar of so respectable a county a commitment of this description, and that a man committed on the 27th of May, 1823, for further examination, should not have been further examined until the 30th of July following." (1 Burn, J. 24th ed. 1008; and see Mr. Justice Bailey's judgment in Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 33).

9. Discharging accused.

with felony for re-examination for an unreasonable time, though without any improper motive.

It also appears, that a warrant for commitment for an unreasonable time is wholly void.

Place of detention.

It has been said that the magistrate ought not to detain him in prison in his own house, but should send him to the common gaol of the county; for otherwise, when the justices come to deliver the gaol, he is not in the gaol, and may not be delivered, and so shall lie longer than is reasonable. (Scavage v. Tateham, Cro. Eliz. 830). But, according to other authorities, because it may be unseasonable to take the information and examinations presently, or possibly it may take longer time, the prisoner may be continued in the custody of the officer, or may be detained in the justice's house, or committed to some near safe place of custody till the final examinations can be completed. (2 Hale, 120; 1 Hale, 585; Broughton v. Mulshoe, 408; 1 Chit. C. L. 74; Davis v. Capper, 10 B. & Cres. 32; 5 M. & R. 53, S. C.)

Nature and effect of commitments for further examination.

It would be as well further to observe, that commitments for further examination stand upon grounds and principles different from commitments for custody in order for trial, which we have already noticed, tit. "Commitment for safe Custody," Vol. I. (See 3 Dow's Rep. 183). "A commitment for further examination is not a proceeding against the party, but a proceeding for his benefit. It is a proceeding with a view to protect him against a commitment for trial, if, during a reasonable time for examination, it can be found there is no ground upon which there ought to be a commitment for custody in order to trial. And if you were to say, that where a party is committed for further examination bail shall be required before that further examination takes place, you put him to this inconvenience, that he must give security to stand a trial which he may never have to stand."—Per Lord Eldon, C., (3 Dow, 183, 184). A commitment for further examination must not be made use of as a commitment for custody in order to trial. (Id.)

IX. Discharging Accused.

(9). When magistrate may discharge accused.

If he be charged with suspicion only of felony, yet if there be no felony at all proved to be committed, or if the fact charged as a felony be in truth no felony in point of law, the justice of peace may discharge him; as, if a man be charged with felony for stealing of a parcel of the freehold, or for carrying away what was delivered him, and such like, for which, though there may be cause to bind him over for a trespass, the justice may discharge him as to felony, because it is not felony. (2 Hale, 121; Pult. 146 b).

When he must bail or commit.

But if there be an express charge of felony, on oath, against the prisoner, though his guilt appear doubtful, the justice cannot wholly discharge him, but must bail or commit him; and it is said, that if a person be killed by another, though it be per infortunium or even se defendendo, which is not properly felony, yet the justice ought not to discharge him, for he must undergo his trial, and therefore must be sent to prison, or admitted to bail. (2 Hale, 121; 1 Hawk. c. 29; 2 Id. c. 15; Dalt. J., 164; sed vide Dick. J., Commitment, II. n. a). And, in modern practice, though exculpatory evidence is received at the instance of the prisoner, and certified with the other depositions, unless it appears in the clearest manner that the charge is malicious, as well as groundless, it is not usual for the magistrate to discharge him, even when he believes him to be altogether innocent. (1 Chit. C. L. 89).

The same observations will, for the most part, apply as to discharging a party accused of misdemeanor.

X. Bailing or Committing him.

As to bailing or committing the accused, see "Bail," Vol. I.; "Commitment for safe Custody," Vol. I.

(10). Bailing or committing accused.

XI. Binding the Parties to Prosecute and give Evidence.

11. Recognizance to prosecute.

(11). Recognizance to prosecute and give evidence.

When the justice has decided upon bailing or committing the accused, he should take the recognizance of the prosecutor to prosecute, as also the recognizance of the material witnesses to appear against the party accused at the next court of oyer and terminer or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions, or sessions of the peace, as the case may require. (Dalt. J., 164). The words of the 7 Geo. IV. c 64, ss. 2 & 3, ante, 468, expressly give the justice power to do so. If more than one are to be bound to prosecute, the recognizances should not be taken separately. And it is no answer to an action for a malicious prosecution that the prosecutor preferred the indictment unwillingly, and solely because he was bound to prosecute, if it appear that he was himself the cause of his being bound over by originally making a malicious charge before the justice. (Dubois v. Keates, 11 Ad. & Ell. 329). The magistrate cannot compel the prosecutor or witness to find sureties for his performance of the condition of the recognizance.

Infants and married women.

Infants and married women, who cannot legally bind themselves, must procure others to be bound for them. Infancy, however, is no ground for discharging a forfeited recognizance to appear and prosecute for a felony. (13 Price, 673).

Refusing to give evidence.

If the prosecutor or witness refuse to give such recognizance, the magistrate has power to commit him, this being virtually included in his commission, and by necessary consequence upon the above-mentioned statute 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3. (Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1; 1 Hale, 586; 2 Hale, 121, 282; 2 Hawk. c. 8, s. 58; and Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R. M. C. 42; 8 D. & R. 166, S. C.; ante, 465). This doctrine was confirmed in a case, where a married woman refused to enter into a recognizance for her appearance at sessions to give evidence against a felon, and the magistrate committed her, and the court held, that the commitment was legal. (Bennett v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1; ante, 466). But a justice of the peace is not authorized by law to commit a witness willing to enter into a recognizance for his appearance, to give evidence against an offender, merely because such witness is unable to find a surety to join him in such recognizance; nor ought the justice to require such surety: the party's own recognizance (at the peril of commitment) is all that ought to be required. (Per Graham, B., Bodmin Summer Assizes, 1817; 1 Burn, J., 24th ed. 1013). The justice has no authority to commit a witness for not finding sureties for his appearance.

Form and effect of recognizance.

The party himself need not sign either of these recognizances. (Dalt. J., c. 176; Dick. Sess. 87).

The recognizance is an obligation of record, as soon as it is taken and acknowledged, although not made up by the justice, and only entered in his book. (Dalt. J., c. 168; see tit. "Recognizance," Vol. V.)

The recognizance is afterwards drawn up on parchment, and subscribed by the justice before whom it is taken. The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3, ante, 468, requires such subscription by the justice.

Estreating, &c. of.

As to estreating the recognizances, see tit. "Fines," &c., post.

12. How examinations to be kept, &c.

XII. How Examinations, &c. to be kept, and Right of Party to Copies.

(12). How examinations, &c. to be kept.

The justice should take due care over the examinations, information, and recognizances, until they be delivered over to the proper officer, in pursuance of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3, ante, 468.

In an action for maliciously and without probable cause charging plaintiff with an assault before a magistrate, the magistrate proved that the depositions taken before him were reduced into writing, and that he delivered them at the Court of Quarter Sessions to the clerk of the peace, or his deputy. The clerk of the peace stated that a bill of indictment for the assault was preferred, that the grand jury returned ignoramus, and that it was usual in such a case to throw away or destroy the depositions; that he had searched among his papers and could not find them: it was held that parol evidence of their contents was admissible, and that it was not necessary to call the deputy or clerk of the peace to show that the original depositions were not in his possession, as it was his duty, if he had received them, to have delivered them to his principal, and not being in his custody, it was to be presumed they were lost or destroyed. (Freeman v. Arkell, 2 B. & Cres. 494; 3 D. & R. 669; 1 C. & P. 135, 326, S. C.)

Right of party to copy of.

Before the recent act of 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 114, it was discretionary for the justices to let any one, not properly authorized, see them: even the party accused had no right to demand a copy of the depositions, though in cases of treason or felony he must have been put in possession of a list containing the names of the witnesses. (Rex v. Holland, 4 T. R. 691; 1 Phill. Ev. 7th ed. 427, 8).

Copies of depositions to be allowed to prisoners.

But this right of withdrawing such copies from the party accused, when held to bail or committed to prison, is put an end to by that act, by sect. 3, of which it is enacted, that "All persons who after the act shall be held to bail or committed to prison for any offence against the law shall be entitled to require and have, on demand, (from the person who shall have the lawful custody thereof, and who is hereby required to deliver the same), copies of the examination of the witnesses respectively upon whose depositions they have been so held to bail or committed to prison, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding three halfpence for each folio of ninety words: provided always, that if such demand shall not be made before the day appointed for the commencement of the assize or sessions at which the trial of the person on whose behalf such demand shall be made is to take place, such person shall not be entitled to have any copy of such examination of witnesses, unless the judge or other person to preside at such trial shall be of opinion that such copy may be made and delivered without delay or inconvenience to such trial; but it shall nevertheless be competent for such judge or other person so to preside at such trial, if he shall think fit, to postpone such trial on account of such copy of the examination of witnesses not having been previously had by the party charged."

Proviso.

Prisoners entitled to inspect depositions on trial.

Sect. 4. "That all persons under trial shall be entitled, at the time of their trial, to inspect, without fee or reward, all depositions (or copies thereof) which have been taken against them, and returned into the court before which such trial shall be had."

A prisoner is not entitled under this act to a copy of his own statement returned by the magistrate, as made before him, but only to a copy of the depositions of the witnesses against him. (Reg. v. Aylett, 8 Car. & P. 669).

Compelling parties to produce depositions.

Before the 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 114, it was considered that a mandamus would not lie to compel a magistrate to produce depositions taken before him on a charge of felony, for the purpose of founding an indictment for perjury against the deponents: and that the magistrate must be subpœnaed to produce the depositions, which might be read in evidence before the grand jury. (In Re One of the justices for the county of Bedford, 1 Chit. Rep. 627). 14. Forms.

But in the case of Rex v. Smith, (1 Stra. 126), a rule was granted, after time had been taken to deliberate, to compel a justice of the peace to cause an examination taken before him to be produced at the trial, and to give the party a copy in the mean time. And in Welch v. Richards, (Barnes, 468), in an action for a malicious prosecution, a rule was obtained for the committing magistrate to show cause why he should not permit the plaintiff to inspect and take a copy of the information at his own expense, and cause the original information to be produced at the trial; and after cause shown, the rule was made absolute on the authority of the case of Rex v. Smith.

And where the plaintiff, in an action on a deed, has had the same taken from him under a warrant against him for a felony, the court will, on an affidavit of demand upon the magistrate and constable, direct them to give plaintiff a copy to declare on, and to produce the deed on the trial, the plaintiff undertaking to pay the expenses. (Harris v. Aldrit, 2 Chit. Rep. 229).

XIII. Certifying the Examinations.

The 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, ss. 2 & 3, ante, 468, requires the justice to subscribe the examinations, information, and recognizances, and deliver, or cause to be delivered, the same to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court. (13). Certifying examinations, &c.

By the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 86, s. 11, justices acting within the limits of the Central Criminal Court are to certify examinations, &c., to the justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, as they are required by the 7 Geo. IV.

Formerly the justices used personally to attend with the informations, in order to certify them; but now they are handed over by the clerk of the justices to the clerk of the peace or assizes. It is, however, desirable, in a case affecting the life of a party, that the justice should be called to prove the correctness of what he took down. (Reg. v. Pikesley, 9 C. & P. 124.)

Every one of the depositions that have been made at all the examinations that have taken place respecting the offence which is to be the subject of a trial, and all that was said by the witnesses, which was at all relevant to the charge, ought to be returned. (Rex v. Simons, 6 C. & P. 540; Rex v. Coveney, 7 C. & P. 667; Rex v. Thomas, Ib. 817; Rex v. Grady, Ib. 650). But nothing should be returned as a deposition unless the prisoner had an opportunity of knowing what was said, and of cross-examining the deponent. (Reg. v. Arnold, 8 C. & P. 621).

The magistrate is bound to return not only the depositions of witnesses, but also any confession taken down as made by the prisoner; and it is no excuse for not doing so, that the confession was wanted to be sent before the grand jury. (Rex v. Fallows, 5 C. & P. 508).

As to the proof of the examinations at the trial, see ante, 406.

Excise and Customs (a).

Customs and Excise defined.

As two sources of revenue far more productive than any other, and as very materially affecting foreign as well as inland commerce, the laws and regulations relating to the duties of Customs and Excise are entitled to the first and principal attention of every legislator, with a view to the introduction of judicious regulations, and of all lawyers, and particularly of justices of the peace, the latter as having important duties and powers of enforcing regulations affecting Customs and Excise.

The Customs are duties payable on merchandize brought into or carried out of the country, or coastwise. The Excise duties, on the other hand, are an inland imposition, and are imposed sometimes on the manufacturer or dealer, sometimes on the commodity itself, or the retail sale.

The Custom duties, which are paid on the first introduction of goods into the country, are liable to objection on that very account, as the merchant is obliged to charge in the price of the commodity, not only the tax itself, but also a commercial profit beyond the mere interest on such tax, and the advance of his money in paying the same; and when the goods have to pass through the hands of several dealers, the accumulated profits on the tax may exceed the amount of the tax itself (b).

The Excise duties fall more lightly on the consumer than Custom duties to the same amount, because they are generally paid in a much later stage. The expense of collecting them is also easier: but the frauds to which this branch of the revenue is exposed, have occasioned it to be protected by provisions which some have considered too rigorous and inquisitorial for the temper of a free nation. The frauds that might be committed, unless a strict watch was kept, have made it necessary to give the Excise-officers a power to enter and search the houses of persons who deal in exciseable commodities, at any hour of the day, and, in many cases, of the night; and the proceedings for a transgression against the law are so summary and expeditious, that a person may be convicted within a very short time in a very large penalty, by two commissioners or justices of the peace, to the total exclusion of the trial by jury, and disregard of the common law. The regulations of the Excise, however, are not without advantages ulterior to the production of revenue, inasmuch as they are the means of preserving some species of goods from adulteration, which might be highly prejudicial to the health of the community. The imposition of heavy duties on articles which may be called the necessaries of life, as on salt, leather, soap, and candles, or on manufactured goods, is liable to objection on account of the influence of such a measure in depressing trade and industry, and the interest of manufacturers seems also to require that the importation of foreign raw materials should be preserved, as much as possible, unencumbered with duty (a). The duties on importation constitute, at the present day, the principal branch of those that are levied under the name of Customs, and the goods which are charged with duties on exportation are comparatively few (b). Formerly, indeed, duties were imposed on the exportation of almost every commodity, under an idea that such duties were not paid by the natives, but by the foreign merchant: but this opinion is now exploded. Experience has proved that foreign nations will not give beyond a certain price for any commodity, and that by excessively taxing goods exported, we should either force them to give up the consumption, or to trade with other places for a supply (c). The duties on goods carried coastwise are imposed principally on three commodities; namely, coals, slate, and stone. Indeed, it is one of the principal advantages of the uniform system of taxation, which, with a few exceptions of no great consequence, takes place in all the different parts of the United Kingdom, that it leaves the interior commerce of the country, the inland and coasting trade, almost entirely free. The inland trade is almost perfectly free, and the greater part of goods may be conveyed from one end of the kingdom to the other without having occasion for a permit or licence, and without being subject to any question, visit, or examination, from the revenue officers. There are a few exceptions, but they are such as can give no interruption to any important branch of the inland commerce of the country. Goods carried coastwise, indeed, in general, require certificates or coast cockets. But, except coals, slate, and stone, such goods are in general duty free. This freedom of interior commerce, which is the effect of the uniformity of the system of taxation, is highly important in its influence on the prosperity of the kingdom, as every great country is necessarily the best and most extensive market for the greater part of the productions of its own industry (d).

(a) These subjects have been considered together, because the laws of the Customs and Excise, so far as justices, constables, and other peace officers are concerned, are in some measure connected and interwoven with each other; and though perhaps a better arrangement might have been adopted, it is thought better to adhere to the old plan.

For the history and particulars of the laws of the Customs and Excise antecedent to the 6 Geo. IV. c. 105, which repealed the previous law, and for the decisions thereon, many of which are applicable to the existing law, see 1 Chitty's Commercial Law, 690 to 847; Tucker on Trade, 38; 2 Sinclair on Revenue, 358 to 411; 3 Smith's Wealth of Nations, b. 5, s. 2, p. 347; 1 *Bla. Definition.

It will be obvious that the systems of these two modes of taxation cannot in all respects be permanent and unchanging, at least, in particulars, for one branch of commerce will frequently change and become more profitable than others, and will, therefore, better than others, bear increase of taxation or charge; and as regards regulations, there will constantly be new contrivances to elude the payment of duties, which will consequently, after a lapse of a few years, necessarily require new remedies to counteract and defeat such frauds. Hence we find, that in general, every fourth or fifth year, it has become the practice to repeal all the existing duties and regulations, and then to enact new duties and provisions respecting them (e).

We will now proceed to consider so much of the laws affecting the Customs and Excise as practically interest the public in general, and justices of the peace and inferior peace officers in particular, under the two following heads and appropriate subdivisions, viz.:—

I. Of the Customs.

II. Of the Excise.

(a) See Tucker on Trade, 38; 2 Sinclair on the Revenue, 358 to 411; 3 Smith's Wealth of Nations, b. 5, c. 2, p. 347, &c.; 1 Bla. Com. 313 to 320; Highmore on Excise, Vol. I.; Preliminary Observations on Revenue.

(e) A general revision of the customs' duties has been lately accomplished through the medium of the new Tariff, contained in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 47.

I. Of the Customs.

The ancient acts relating to the Customs, with the observations and decisions upon them, will be found in 1 Chitty's Commercial Law, 690 to 847. Before the year 1787, the multiplicity of enactments relative to the Customs created great intricacy and difficulty; and induced Mr. Pitt to introduce, in that year, the Customs Consolidation Act, (27 Geo. III. c. 13), followed by several acts. At length the present admirable system of legislation was introduced, under the care of Mr. Herries, and all prior enactments were repealed, by 6 Geo. IV. c. 105, and 7 Geo. IV. c. 48, s. 52; and several acts, viz. 6 Geo. IV. c. 106 to c. 116, both inclusive, were enacted. These, prepared under the care and correction of Mr. Herries, and the several acts of the subsequent sessions, having also become complex, and new enactments being requisite, on 28th August, A.D. 1833, it was deemed necessary to repeal them, (by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 50), and by several following enactments of the same session (a), to consolidate and amend their substance, and to introduce some few changes, consisting principally of reductions of duties and easements of restrictions (b). So that the practice and decisions on the prior acts will still, in general, apply. The course pursued by Parliament in legislating for the Customs, since the consolidation of A.D. 1833, has been, in each succeeding session, to embrace, as far as possible, in an annual act, under the title of "An Act to amend the laws relating to the Customs," all the new measures of the session upon that branch of law.

In preparing this edition for the press, the order of enactment in the several statutes of 1833 has been adhered to, for although considerable alterations have taken place in this branch of the law since that period, by the subsequent annual acts, and especially by the recent statute of the 5 & 6 Vict., c. 47, no general consolidating act has been passed.

Taking therefore the statutes passed in the 3rd and 4th years of William IV. as the ground work of our present treatise, the respective alterations and amendments will be inserted in their proper places. It may also be sufficient here to state generally, that the recent statute of Victoria respecting the Tariff has reduced the amount, and greatly simplified the arrangement of the Customs' duties in many instances, but without making any material alteration in the acts under which they are collected.

We will now proceed to consider this subject in the following order:—

Division of the subject.

I. The Management of the Customs, 481.

II. The Regulation of, 494.

III. The Prevention and Punishment of Smuggling, &c., 536.

IV. The Present Duties of Customs, 570.

V. The Practice and Proceedings before Justices, &c., 599.

I. Management of the Customs.

(1). Management of the customs.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 51.

On the same day, [28th Aug. 1833], that all subsisting acts relative to the Customs were repealed by the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 50, the 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 51 received the royal assent. Now, although the new enactments in this latter statute are not directly connected with the office of justice of the peace or parochial officers, (excepting the 37th & 40th sections relating to the forced sale of buildings and land for the purposes of Customs), still, for the better understanding of the duties imposed upon those officers by the legislature, it has been considered advisable to enter more fully into the subject. The enactments relating to the Management of the Customs may be arranged under the following heads:

The Commissioners and other Officers, 481.
The Receiver General, 484.
The administering Oaths, 487.
Of Lands and Buildings for the Customs, 487.
Of the Signatures of the Lords of the Treasury, 494.

IV. c. 106, the laws in relation to the management of the Customs were consolidated and amended; and that, since the passing of that act, divers acts for the further amendment of the law have been found necessary, and that it would be of advantage to the trade and commerce of the country that the said acts should be consolidated into one act, enacts, "that this act shall commence upon the 1st Sept. 1833, except where any other commencement is herein particularly directed."

CONSTRUCTION OF WORDS IN THIS ACT IN GENERAL.

GENERAL RULES.

LICENSED AGENTS, LONDON.

There is a distinction between management and regulation as regards the Customs; the first, the subject of the last section, relates to the establishment and officers of the Customs; and the second, viz. regulations, to the business of the merchants and the conduct they must observe.

Justices and peace officers may, under the directions of the Acts for the Prevention of Smuggling, (post, Sect. III.), be required to enforce the forfeitures and penalties imposed by the regulating Acts we are about to consider, and therefore a consideration of them is essential.

Inwards.

General provision.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52.

The 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 52, intituled "An Act for the general Regulation of the Customs," (28th Aug. 1833), after reciting the consolidating act of 6 Geo. IV. c. 107, and that several subsequent acts had been passed for the regulation of the Customs, and declaring it to be necessary, and for the advantage of the trade and commerce of the country, that the said acts should be consolidated, proceeded to enact new general regulations. This act of Will. IV. still forms the ground-work of the law respecting the importation and exportation of goods liable to the Customs duties; as it is the last general repealing and consolidating statute upon the subject.

It is perhaps scarcely necessary to remark, that owing to the various fluctuating circumstances, both as regards the articles of commerce themselves, as well as the altered views of commercial policy amongst our legislators, many and considerable alterations have been made in the above statute.

It will be the object of the editor, then, in this section, to point out what these alterations consist of, as contained in the several acts of the 4 & 5 Will. IV. c. 89; 5 & 6 Will. IV. c. 66; 6 & 7 Will. IV. c. 60; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 113; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 120; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 17; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 19, for additional duty on timber; and the 5 Vict. sess. 2, c. 34, for additional duty on sugar, and the New Tariff Act.

The great importance of this latter act, viz. the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 47, by which many of the regulations in the preceding enactments are repealed or altered, requires particular attention. Such amendments and alterations, however, will be found pointed out in the places where they occur, in the statutes of Will. IV. The above is the only mode that can be adopted where portions of so many acts exist upon one subject; and until the New Tariff has stood the test of a few years' legislation, it is unlikely that another consolidating statute, like that of 1833, will be passed.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 52.

The 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 52, then enacted by sect. 1 that it should commence upon the 1st of September, 1833, except where any other commencement was therein particularly directed.

Inwards.

General provision.
